The FLORISTS' MANUAL

by
WILLIAM SCOTT

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid.

Florists' Publishing Co., CAXTON BUILDING, Chicago.

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

A Complete Reference Book for

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

BULBS.

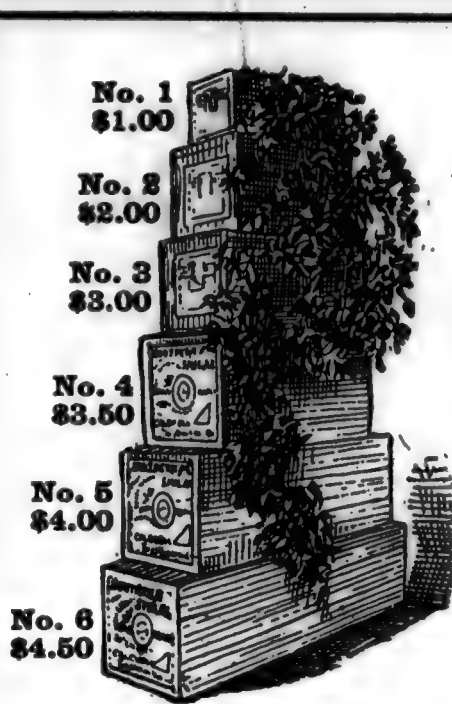

Referring to recent references in the REVIEW to bulbs for early forcing, E. Leedham, of the Leedham Bulb Co., Santa Cruz, Cal., says that early ripening of the bulbs greatly facilitates early forcing. Though he does no forcing in the sense the word is used in the east, he gets earlier and a better quality of blooms by planting under cover. It has been an advantage to him to afterward ripen up the bulbs as soon as possible and he soon noted that those bulbs which had been ripened early bloomed earlier the following season. He now has bulbs of daffodils that have been ripened early for several years in succession and these bloom very much earlier than others. This is especially noticeable in Golden Spur, Ard Righ, single Von Sion and Trumpet Major, though the latter is full of old maid freakishness. Even Princeps and others show the tendency to earlier blooming when the bulbs are ripened early.

To ripen the bulbs early in Santa Cruz they must be protected from the late spring rains. Though he has so far used all the increase in his bulbs for planting for cut flowers, he believes the bulbs can be produced here as economically as abroad and of better quality. He says also that early ripened California grown daffodil bulbs of the early varieties could be delivered in the east via Panama in early August.

PLANT NOTES.

Rose Pruning.

This little note is not intended to give any ideas regarding the pruning of forcing roses that are grown under glass, but merely a few suggestions as to the trimming of bushes that are grown either as ornamental shrubs or climbers for the garden or kept for commercial purposes, whether as stock plants or for flowering purposes. The best time for rose pruning depends to a great extent on the weather, but is usually during the months of January and February. They should be as near dormant as it is possible to have them and when the roses have been watered considerably, late in the season or when we have plenty of early rains and very little cold weather, the plants continue to bloom and grow far into the winter. In such seasons the best time for trimming the plants will probably be about the first to the middle of February.

Hybrid perpetuals and hybrid teas will stand much more cutting than the tea roses. In fact, I have found that many of our finest teas do not respond readily when the shears are applied vigorously and unless I need the wood for propagating purposes I trim very sparingly, and then only the small side shoots and such stems as are necessary to leave a shapely plant. Such sorts as Niphetos, Bride, Bridesmaid, Catherine Mermet, Papa Gontier, Rainbow and Marie Van Houtte, certainly our most valuable garden roses, I find belong to the class that will not stand any slashing with the knife. With hybrid perpetual roses such care need not be taken, and my rule is to cut out all lateral shoots and leave only three or four good stiff stems, as these will be ample to handle all the flowering stems that the roots can supply. best varieties among the hybrids to grow for market are General Jacqueminot, Paul Neyron, Ulrich Brunner, Gloire Lyonnaise and Mrs. John Laing.

This is not a very extensive list, but these are the most satisfactory kinds to handle and there is no difficulty in selling the blooms, which, in the springtime and again in the fall, bring as good a price, when well grown, as do the indoor roses at the same time. There is a big market in the cheaper class of stores for the poorer flowers all the year.

black soil that is not allowed to get hard in the summer time. In sandy soil roses are generally not very long-lived and unless the ground is kept constantly enriched the blossoms are not up to form or color. None of the climbing roses is of much value commercially for cut flowers and all of them will stand considerable pruning. Leave the strong, straight canes and trim out the short, crooked wood.

Roses are very rank feeders and unless the soil is heavy and rich it is hard to make them do well except for a few weeks in the spring. The lifetime of a rose depends on many conditions, but I have found that they generally outlive their commercial usefulness in about four years, although I have a La Marque that has been growing on my grounds for over thirty years and from which I cut thousands of blossoms yearly. SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The rain for which we have been looking finally arrived and this portion of California received a good drenching. This will keep violets in good shape and make daffodils and other bulbous stuff appear in larger quantities than for some time. The wild maidenhair has been very scarce this season and many of the florists rely to a great extent on it at this time of the year, to say nothing of the street venders, who are the largest consumers. Carnations are still well up in price and not very plentiful. Some of the fancy varieties are selling at 75 cents per dozen and other sorts at 60 cents. All the good solid colors, such as Lawson, Estelle and Hill, bring about 50 cents per dozen. The best stock in the market at the present time is Bridesmaid roses. I have never seen them larger or in better shape and color. The flowers themselves are bigger than many bunches of Beauties exhibited in the store windows beside them. Some good Brides are seen and sell at 75 cents to $1 per dozen. Valley is plentiful and so are tulips and daffodils. Narcissi are on the wane, only some of the yellow varieties still to be seen. Violets are plentiful and sell wholesale at 75 cents to $1 per dozen bunches. Many beautiful specimen azaleas are shown in the windows of the larger stores and in the smaller windows potted cyclamen, tulip and valley make showy exhibits.

Various Items.

One of the most elaborate decorations of the season was that at the supper given by Mrs. Geo. A. Kohn in the maple hall of the Palace hotel this week. Miss Montpelier, for many years with the Misses Moon, but now in business for herself, had the work in charge.

The coming spring show of the California State Floral Society is going to be a banner exhibition judging by the enthusiasm of the directors. It is to be held March 24 to 26, in the nave of the ferry building. G.

The Two Best Commercial White Carnations

Lady Bountiful

If you grow Lady Bountiful you have a white carnation where every flower is a flower with a stiff wiry stem a perfect calyx and no spits. It does well in either a medium or heavy soil. You cannot miss it by placing your order now before all the early stock is sold. We have, up to date, booked more orders for Lady Bountiful than the whole season's sales of any new carnation we have yet introduced.

IT IS A WINNER

Is an excellent companion to Lady Bountiful, with equally good points to make it a favorite paying variety with all growers. Our large stock and easy propagation still enables us to offer February and March delivery.

Price for well rooted cuttings.. $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

We also have all of the best of the 1903 novelties and the leading standard varieties. Send for price list.

CARNATIONS. Rooted Cuttings ready for immediate shipment.

JUDGE HINSDALE—(Ward)—Color white. heavily laced and edged with bright pink; very large, full, well-formed bloom 3-in. and over in diameter, on an exceptionally strong stem 24 in. and upwards in length; flower very full, highly built, calyx large, long, exceptionally strong and does not burst; fragrant, splendid keeper and first-class shipper. A great favorite upon the New York market, where it brings the highest prices.

Price $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

THE PRESIDENT—(Ward)—One of the brightest colored, the largest flowered, the best formed and the longest stemmed among crimson carnations. Enormous bloom 3-in. and upwards in diameter upon perfectly stiff stems 24 in. and upwards long. The most striking crimson carnation we have ever grown.

Price $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

ETHEL WARD—(Ward)—Medium-large well formed bloom, full, with high built center; color, bright clear rose pink, which stands well in the sun; exceptionally strong clove fragrance; long, strong calyx which does not burst; very early; exceptionally free, producing an abundance of flowers throughout the season. Price $12 per 100.

MACKINAC—(Ward)—A white carnation which has produced more blooms during the early part of the season than any other white carnation we have ever grown; stem is long, wiry; flower fine shape; long, strong calyx; flower full and very fragrant. This we would term distinctively a "bread and butter" carnation. Price $10 per 100; $75 per 1000.

CHRISTMAS EVE—(Ward)—Medium size, full, brilliant scarlet bloom produced in enormous quantity; habit the same as Maceo but erect; fully as free a bloomer as that celebrated sort; exceptionally valuable for the holidays as it produces an enormous quantity of blooms at that period. Price $10 per 100.

CARNATIONS REGISTERED.

Swan Peterson, Gibson City, Ill., registers Gibson Beauty, color a magnificent shade of light pink, absolutely the best color ever seen in a carnation and entirely different from anything ever originated; considered to be far superior to Enchantress; size three and one-half inches and over; form perfect and ideal for high grade fancy blooms; stem twenty-four to thirty inches and over, stiff and wiry; calyx perfect and never bursts; fragrance a rich, spicy clove; substance of the very best, an excellent feature being its keeping and shipping qualities; habit ideal, produces no surplus grass and is a strong and vigorous grower, every shoot producing a high grade bloom; blooming qualities early, free and continuous, needing no special treatment to develop its magnificent blooms.

Class L of the premium list should read: By J. A. Valentine, of the Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo., $25 in cash for the best twelve blooms of an undis-seminated seedling shown by the originator and all varieties that are shown in classes requiring more than twelve blooms are excluded. The premium list as published reads $25 for the best blooms instead of best twelve blooms, it being the intention of the donor of this premium to bring out some of the good things in their second year, instead of waiting for the third year to see them.

BREITMEYERS' NEW ROSE

TO BE DISSEMINATED APRIL 1, 1904

COLOR—Prevailing color a beautiful shell pink, shading in the center to a soft rose pink. The reverse of the outer petal is of a creamy, flesh tint, shading to silvery toward the base, which may best be described as opalescent. The full open flower discloses a vivid richness of coloring, rare and fascinating. FRAGRANCE—Subtle, strongly tea-scented; reminds one of old Bon Silene. FORM—Large cup-shaped, heavy petal, shell-like in formation. GROWTH—Strong and healthy, with a rich, glossy foliage, rampant and vigorous, with a strong tendency to long shoots; very prolific. ALL ORDERS BOOKED FILLED IN ROTATION, BEGINNING APRIL 1.

NEW LIGHT PINK CARNATION NEW DAYBREAK

To the commercial grower who is looking for profit this variety is all that its name implies, and will at once commend itself as the old Daybreak reincarnated without its faults.

Color—true Daybreak shade, of Daybreak and Scott extraction, through several generations of seedlings. Inherits the vigor and freedom of both the above varieties. Blooms large, well formed and very sweet; does not have a washed out appearance at any time of the year.

A FINE KEEPER AND SHIPPER.

Price $3 per doz.; $12 per 100; $100 per 1000 Other new and standard varieties.

Club Meeting.

The Richmond Florists' Club held its January meeting at the greenhouses of its president, George R. Gause. After routine business Fred H. Lemon read an excellent paper, discussing the drawbacks to successful carnation growing, together with experiments with different fertilizers and the results obtained therefrom. The paper and the discussion which followed, participated in by all the members of the club, proved both interesting and instructive and could not help but be of material benefit to all. Mr. Lemon appointed L. H. Schepman to prepare a paper for the February meeting and as each one is allowed to select his own subject, a large variety of topics will no doubt be the result.

Various Notes.

John A. Evans, not to be behind the rest of the boys, has come to the front with another fine son. All well.

The February meeting of the club will be held at the Grave greenhouses west of the city.

At the close of the meeting at Gause's, several waiters appeared with hot coffee, sandwiches and fruit, and the way it disappeared showed that the members of the club had their appetites with them.

H. C. C.

KANSAS CITY.

Florists have been very busy and stock the scarcest that I have ever seen it. Everybody had funeral work the early part of the week. Bride and Golden Gate roses were not to be had at any price and everybody was looking for them. Maid and Sunrise are our only stock in roses. Beauties are off crop here. Carnations are as scarce as they were after the holidays. Lilies, tulips and other bulbous stock is coming in more plentifully and is a great help.

Every florist in town reports the biggest Valentine business ever known in red carnations and violets, and stock was not near enough to go around.

Arnold Ringier, of Barnard's, was in town and seemed to be doing a big business with everybody. L. M. S.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

The majority of violet growers of this town are disgusted with the prices received and the amount of flowers called for. Several of the growers are getting ready to pull their plants out and rent the space to truck gardeners, who are expecting a late spring and cannot see any chance of using cold frames this year. Others are going to raise tomatoes and cucumbers in their houses for spring sale. It has been rumored that Geo. Hunter and Geo. Neil are both willing to rent or sell their places on account of the slump in violets this year and that E. J. Morse is going to put one of his violet houses into carnations. J. H. Slocombe is going to put one of his violet houses into carnations and also to build another carnation house. Mr. Kraus has turned his large houses into sweet peas and it looks as if he would have a fine crop by June, if not before.

The past week has seen a let up as far as the cold weather is concerned and flowers sold better. The demand for cut flowers for St. Valentine's day was like a Christmas rush and everything sold well at good prices. S. H. W.

HUGHSONVILLE, N. Y.—Adam Laub & Son are having a very good season, their stock being in first-class shape. They have gone into the rooted cutting business quite heavily and are doing a nice business on carnations. Their place is visited by many in the trade.

DOBBS FERRY, N. Y.—The regular meeting of the Dobbs Ferry Horticultural Association was held December 30, with President Henderson in the chair. There was a large attendance, the business of the evening being the making of a schedule for the fall show. There was a prize given by S. Bradley, gardener to O. J. Smith, for the best foliage plant in a 6-inch pot, which was awarded to Mr. Fisher for a dracaena, the other competitors were Mr. Kasberg and Mr. Boreham, who staged Pandanus Veitchii and Aspidistra variegata. S. Bradley staged a fine specimen of Pandanus Sanderi. Thomas Lee is to read an essay at the next meeting.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The market conditions are about the same as last reported, except on carnations, which are meeting with better demand, due to the scarcity of all kinds of roses. The supply of good and fancy carnations is large. Tulips, narcissi and other bulbous stock is in good demand. On Easter lilies the supply is gradually increasing. Prices on all good stock have advanced somewhat and weather conditions are still unfavorable. St. Valentine's day created no special demand for stock.

Various Notes.

Ernest Zieger, manager of C. T. Siebert's retail branch, reports business good, with a number of good sized decoration orders before Lent.

Pittsburg will be well represented at the carnation convention at Detroit next month; so far the delegation will number fifteen persons.

S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, and D. MacRorie, representing W. A. Manda, were visitors last week. Hoo-Hoo.

OCEANIC, N. J.

The eighth annual ball of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held in Redmen's hall February 12 and was the grandest affair of the season and the best ball the society ever had. Over 100 couples were in the grand march and about 250 guests were present. The hall was beautifully decorated with garlands of flags and flowers and around the picture of President Lincoln was a beautiful wreath of poinsettias donated by G. H. Hale. Refreshments were served at 12 o'clock. Those who were not dancing had some enjoyments of their own, but this is not to be given away. A search is being made for those who did not come. The committee of arrangements were W. H. Griffiths, H. A. Kettel, J. Yoemans, G. H. Ashworth and G. Kuhn.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—The Federal High court at Caracas, Venezuela, on January 28, held that the claim of the Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Co. to the Felicidad mine, under a concession made in 1897, is null and void. P. R. Quinlan, of this city, is a leading member of the syndicate which loses out under this decision. The concession is worth millions.

CARNATIONS IN MINNESOTA.

Just outside the corporate limits of Minneapolis, on Nineteenth avenue north, is located the largest, one of the best equipped and most successful carnation establishments in the North Star state. Twelve years ago Reinhard Will, a German by birth and a florist by profession, purchased forty-six acres of land and erected two small greenhouses, in which he grew bedding plants. His boys grew to manhood and three years ago the first range of houses for carnations was erected, about 25,000 square feet of glass. Just after they were completed a hail storm destroyed more than half the glass. The range was immediately reglazed and the benches planted, fairly good success being achieved the first year. Last summer the place was more than doubled by the addition of another range of houses, containing about 35,000 square feet of glass.

Quite a number of varieties are grown, it being their policy to try the best offerings each year. About 50,000 plants were benched this year. In white, Gov. Wolcott, Peru and Queen Louise are grown, Peru showing the best returns so far. For an all around white variety it fills the bill. Wolcott is a good show variety but hardly as profitable as Peru. Queen Louise is a nice, well built flower, but so far has not been as prolific as Peru. Next season's planting will include several thousand Boston Market.

In dark pink Mrs. Lawson is grown very extensively, there being 10,000 plants benched this season. Guardian Angel is also grown extensively and has proven as profitable as any. One bench of Marquis is grown and seems to uphold its reputation in fine shape.

In light pink Enchantress is the leader and is being propagated extensively.

Morning Glory has done well here, although it is of small size and not as profitable as Enchantress.

I forgot to mention in passing that Lawson will be grown entirely in pots this season. As its greatest growth comes late in the season and any severe disturbance of its root system, like transplanting from the field, checks its growth and causes short stems, consequently the pot method will be tried this season. Nelson Fisher may be planted another season, though Otto Will thinks it but little, if any, improvement over Lawson.

In scarlets, Crane, Chicago and Apollo are grown this year. Apollo is a handsome shade of color, but is too shy in flower to be profitable. Estelle is grown, but is too short stemmed and will be discarded. Flamingo will be grown next season and is considered a most valuable acquisition in its color. Harry Fenn is the only crimson grown.

The new range was completed rather late in the season and, as it was very wet at that time, soil had to be taken from the highest knolls on the place. This has not been conducive to the best growth. Two 25 horse-power high pressure boilers supply the establishment with heat. Water is pumped from a nearby stream. Iron posts and iron gutters are used in the construction of the houses, the drainage being carried inside. The Foley ventilator lift is used. The houses are on a southern slope.

Otto Will is the manager. The goods are all sold at wholesale in Minneapolis.

A WATERPROOF POT SAUCER.

Every plant grower and every pot maker has had repeated experiences to prove the advantage of porous or unglazed pots over glazed ones. But while a porous pot is an advantage a porous saucer is equally as great a disadvantage. Porous saucers will not hold water; they wet through, thus spoiling any article of furniture upon which they happen to be placed. After attempting to overcome these disadvantages by paints and shellacs of various kinds, I finally asked our pot maker to treat the inside of the pot saucers to a coat of glaze, the same as is used for so-called vitrified pipe. This was done and now we have a saucer the outside appearance of which is exactly like the pot, but the inside has a non-corrosive waterproof glaze. This solved the difficulty and, believing that it is worth the attention of pot makers, I take this means of bringing it to the attention of the trade. I know it will be an improvement welcomed by everyone who attempts to grow potted plants in the living room without the jardiniere.

A COIL HEATER.

I wish to ask a question with regard to a coil heater in a box stove twenty inches long. The coil is $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch pipe, one coil of four pipes on the bottom and one on top. The cold water enters the bottom coil, goes to the top coil and then to the $1\frac{1}{4}$ -inch coil under the propagating bed. Have air cocks in the flow pipe near the stove, at the highest point. It works, but not right; it is a regular kicker. There are no headers, but return elbows in the coil.

J. T.

I believe the trouble can be entirely overcome by using headers at each end of the coil, instead of return bends. The headers can be made up from 1-inch T's with $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch center openings. The $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch pipes used to make up the coils can be put together with long screws. The return from the coil under the bench should be taken into the lower header of the heating coil and the riser out of the header at the upper end of the heating coil. The circulation would also be quicker and the heating more efficient if headers were arranged at each end of the radiation coil under the bench, with the riser entering at the far end. This should also be the highest point in the system.

SPECIAL DISCOUNT ALLOWED ON ALL ORDERS RECEIVED DURING FEBRUARY

IF YOU want a boiler for next season we will book your order now, build the boiler and have it ready for you when you want it. You need not pay for boiler until it is delivered.

These Boilers are made of STEEL PLATE, therefore will not cause trouble and expense on account of cracking of sections, repacking, etc., which happens so frequently with cast iron boilers.

Great Fuel Saver

GALENA, ILL., Jan. 28, 1902.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.:—The boiler I bought of you is giving perfect satisfaction. When the thermometer stood at 30 below zero this morning I could hold the temperature at 60 very easily with a saving of at least 25 per cent of coal. It is without a doubt the finest hot water boiler in the land, as it will heat about double the amount of glass that other boilers do with the same amount of coal. It has proved so satisfactory that I must express my feelings.

B. F. VANDERVATE.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1, 1903.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.:—The two No. 4 boilers you installed in my greenhouses at Hartland, Wis., did very satisfactory work last winter. I had been using cast iron boilers previously, but threw them out to put in your steel boilers. Your boilers have done better than I had expected; they require less coal, and much less attention than did the cast iron boilers. I estimate the saving in coal with your boilers was about 15 per cent. To anyone desiring a perfect greenhouse boiler, I would certainly recommend yours.

JAMES A. KIRK.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 27, 1903.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.:—We wish to tell you how much we are pleased with your boiler we put in last fall. It replaced two cast iron boilers, has done the work very much better, requires much less attention, and besides as near as we can judge, will use about 20 per cent less coal than we have been using. This coal item is not compared with only one season, but with at least 20 years' experience with several different kinds of cast iron boilers. We are more than satisfied and have taken pleasure in showing and recommending your boiler to a number of growers.

Novelties in Carnations.

We desire to call particular attention to the following novelties, each of which the most critical growers agree is a great advance over older varieties of the same color:

FLAMINGO. Finest brilliant scarlet yet introduced. Large flower, grand stem, early and continuous bloomer.

MRS. M. A. PATTEN. Finest variegated, will supersede Bratt, which it will out-bloom two to one. Better in stem and more pleasing variegation.

WHITE LAWSON. True sport of Lawson and like it in every respect except that it is pure white.

DAHEIM. Extra fine crimson variety, fully as large as Lawson. Grand stem, brilliant color, ideal habit, early bloomer. Will supersede other crimsons.

Price of above Big Four, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. There is sure to be a large demand; orders filled in rotation; it will pay you to book orders without delay.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

The Easter Stock.

Our Easter crops are now the absorbing subject of hand and brain, and how we would like to know what the weather is going to be in the long month of March! As little difference as the weather makes to some of our midwinter crops, it has all to do with most of the plants that we grow for the Easter sales.

The Lilies.

If you can count the buds in the crown of the Japan lilies by March 1 you will have no trouble in getting them in at a night temperature of 60 degrees, and some sunshine to help, which is due us in considerable quantities next month. If your lilies are earlier than this no harm is done, so don't get alarmed and move them to a cool house to retard them or they will just stand still. When the buds are turning white you can put them into a much cooler house, for when advanced to that stage they will open almost anywhere. I have noticed that the public knows enough to prefer some plants, an azalea, for instance, that is not so fully out. But a lily they want with every flower open, and with many people a fine plant with one expanded flower and "these four buds will all open, ma'am," don't go. After the buds are above the leaves there should be no further danger of trouble from aphids. A moderate fumigation on two successive nights each week will keep them clean.

The Roses.

Crimson Rambler roses should be just about showing the clusters of buds, and will be in time without any extra forcing. If you can get them in bloom in a night temperature of 55 degrees they are much better in color than when you have to give them 5 or 10 degrees higher, and this also applies to the hybrid perpetuals. Keep them cool if possible. Now here is a plant, above all a hybrid perpetual rose, in a 6-inch pot, that your customers don't want with all the buds out. No matter how attractive a few flowers of an Ulrich Brunner may be, every one knows how soon their petals drop, and unless there are buds yet to open they don't want your rose plant, so it takes some careful management to get them just right.

The Azaleas.

The azaleas are now one of our most important plants. Easter's early date will suit most of them better than if it were two weeks later. A few azaleas are selling all the time, and these you have had in a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. But the main lot that you are growing for Easter has done well in a night temperature of 40 to 45 degrees. Now is the time to do the regulating and not wait till some varieties are in full bloom and others so backward that no amount of heat will open their buds. It is not necessary to mention varieties, because it is so easily observed at what stage of development the buds are. Here, however, are a few varieties of the condition of which I have just made note. That great favorite, Mme. Van der Cruyssen, will at about 45 degrees at night be about right, and so will Empress of India. Niobe is showing rather early and must be moved at once to some house where it can be kept at 38 to 40 degrees and shaded, and you know that if it went down to 35 no harm is done. Mme. C. Van Langenhove is too early, and so is that most densely flowered white, Sakuntala. De Schryveriana will also have to go to cooler quarters. Bernard Andre alba may need 55 degrees a little later, as it is rather backward, and so on. It is easy to see what they need, only don't wait till it is too late.

Many a patron is disappointed with an azalea. "It all wilted down; it must have been frozen in delivery," is the little song we often have to hear. It's nothing but want of water, and even greenhouse men, I notice, on some occasions don't realize how thoroughly they should be watered. Last fall's imported plants have made no roots into the soil that we rammed in around the ball of peat, and unless we get water into the old ball we are not watering the plant. On dull, cool days an azalea may not show that it is suffering, but some bright day in March will soon show your neglect; and if the plant is in flower great injury has been done.

The Dutch Bulbs.

In another column I promised an inquirer fuller particulars as to the number of days to give hyacinths, tulips and daffodils to be in flower for Easter. It's a simple subject, and yet it's not so easy to speak definitely about any number of days. There are several things to consider. Some twenty or more years ago, when rather new at the bulb business, Easter came on April 24 or 25, and along about the middle of the month we had a few days of midsummer heat. We had brought in our Tournesol and Murillo, as well as all the single tulips, daffodils and hyacinths, four weeks ahead of Easter. The result was sad. We resorted to sub-basements and cold frames with heavy shade, but to little purpose, for the honey bees hummed through the frames and we lost the greater part. The next year Easter was very early and the weather mostly cold and dull. Remembering our experience of the previous year, but without reasoning about the difference of dates, we allowed only two weeks to get our bulbs in, and that was nearly as big a failure, and instead of the cold frames and cool cellars we had to resort to the Russian bath method, and then only partially got there. I don't remember that we have missed it since.

The weather, whether cold and cloudy or bright and mild, will make a difference of five or six days. One other very important consideration is the fact that those who keep their flats of bulbs out of doors, covered with soil or tan bark and stable litter, have found that this arctic winter has frozen clear through all covering and into the soil of the flats. This has not hurt tulips, hyacinths or daffodils, but it has greatly retarded their growth, which means two or three days more, under glass. After we chop out the flats it takes two days in a warm shed to thaw them out.

After March 1 these bulbs should not be forced in any hot box or warm, shaded bench. They should come along in full light, in any house where the night temperature is from 50 to 55 degrees, and they will be better in texture, color, form and, above all, stem, than those we had to force and shade earlier in the season.

Better be safe and, considering the earliness of Easter and the present condition of the bulbs, I would say give daffodils and single tulips twenty days on the bench, Dutch hyacinths about the same and double tulips three or four days more. There is no need to wait for getting in your bulbs just for these days; take advantage of a fine, warm day, even if it is a week earlier. In a cool shed or beneath a bench in a cool house they will make little progress.

Some years ago we depended for pans of tulips, daffodils and hyacinths entirely on those planted in pans in the fall and placed out of doors, as we do the flats, or perhaps in a frame a little better protected. There was always considerable breakage of pans and many pans would not be uniform in growth. For two or three years past we have made up these pans from the flats just about the time the flower is fully developed. If lifted out without losing much roots the flowers last equally as long, stand up as straight and are in every way as satisfactory as those grown in the pans. There is no fraud about this and you can "manufacture" a more perfect and prettier arrangement than you can get the old way, and save some losses.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

STOPPING GERANIUMS.

Will some one tell me through the columns of the REVIEW how to make my geraniums grow more stocky, instead of running up to single stem. I once read an article about topping. I tried it the last two years, but the most of them would throw out one side shoot and start heavenward again. Should the topping be done at shifting time or some time before, or after? Should they be cut back severely or just a little off the top?

J. N. S.

This very simple subject has been ventilated in the columns of the REVIEW "many a time and oft." If your plants were propagated in September or October and supposing you shifted them into a 3-inch at New Year's, then by February they should be pinched or stopped. The majority should give you a cutting and yet leave two or three eyes on the plant, which if given daylight and not crowded will always break and make a stocky plant. If you don't desire the cutting, or the plant is not large enough, then just pinch out the top and you will have the same bushy plant. Stopping or pinching out the top should not be done at the time of potting. Let them be in active root growth when that is done. If J. N. S. will refer to the REVIEW of February 11 he will see this very subject treated of at some length.

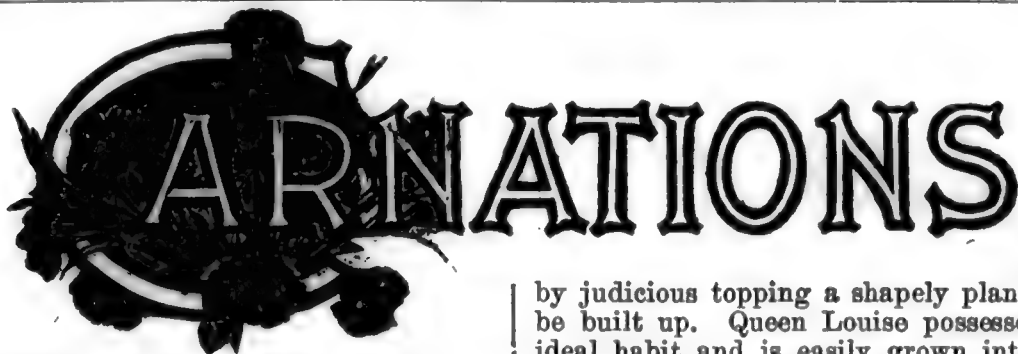

I will just add that the zonale geranium, perhaps our most important summer flowering garden plant, is such an accommodating, free growing plant that it is abused and in many plant manufacturing establishments it is entirely quantity, not quality, that is sought. In one place you will see the lifted stock plants along the side of a walk on the ground; in another place you will see cuttings stuck in the sand as thick as the proverbial hair on a dog's back, crowded so that neither light nor air can penetrate between them, and if you are guileless enough to buy a thousand of these plants at some seemingly low figure, you will find they are worthless for any bedding purpose that year, but may do to plant out for getting a few cuttings off of the following fall. Bench room is what counts in our business and a geranium can't be sold cheap, for it takes room to grow it.

W. S.

Flora Hill, Norway, White Cloud, Wolcott and Her Majesty. J. C. F.

You can divide the list of varieties you ask about into two classes and suit them all pretty well. That is, of course, providing you have a fairly heavy soil of average fertility. I would grow Enchantress, Gov. Roosevelt, Mrs. Palmer, Adonis, Genevieve Lord, Morning Glory, White Cloud and Her Majesty in 50 to 52 degrees at night and I would raise the temperature about 5 degrees for Mrs. Lawson, Flora Hill, Norway and Wolcott. I understand Prosperity wants to be kept just about between the two, say about 52 to 54 degrees. The cool end of the warm section or the warm end of the cool section would be the place for it. Try a few Norway in the cooler section, too. A. F. J. BAUR.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Topping Young Stock.

Young stock will soon need attention in the way of topping and the future habit of the plant will depend much on the manner in which this operation is done. Every variety has its own peculiar habit, and if left to itself the general disposition will be to produce plants of undesirable shape, consequently a constant watch must be kept on the stock in order that some plants may not outgrow others and get beyond control, for in spite of our plan to set plants of one size together we find a certain proportion grow more rapidly than others.

I would not advise pulling out the center shoot when topping, as there is danger of moisture collecting in the heart of the plant, which is apt to result in decay. Let by judicious topping a shapely plant can be built up. Queen Louise possesses an ideal habit and is easily grown into desirable plants.

All varieties tend to draw up somewhat under glass, but in the field take on a more compact habit. A great deal depends, too, on the general make-up of the cutting as to the future shapeliness of the plant, long jointed ones being almost sure to tax the patience of the grower in his desire to obtain stocky plants. A little extra attention now will not be regretted later. GEO. S. OSBORN.

SOIL AND TEMPERATURE.

We wish to know what soil is used and what night temperature is maintained through the flowering season for best results with the following carnations: Mrs. Lawson, Enchantress, Prosperity, Gov. Roosevelt, Mrs. Palmer, Adonis, Genevieve Lord, Morning Glory,

CARNATION GOV. WOLCOTT.

We wish to add a good word for Carnation Gov. Wolcott; to prove what we say we send herewith a photograph of our patch, a flashlight, taken February 1. Alongside of Norway, Queen Louise, Flora Hill, Innocence, Her Majesty, Lorna and White Cloud, it is in every way by far the best white with us. It is more productive, has longer, stiffer stems, larger flowers, finer form, pure color, is a grand keeper and leaves nothing to be desired. When comparing the illustration with others, bear in mind that between December 1 and January 1 every available shoot on the plants was used for propagating.

We also send a photograph of a bench of Lawson in the same house, which is the best we ever had it. By actual count, if we had only Lawson and Wolcott in the house, we would cut six times as many flowers as we do now, not to mention quality or value.

Both Lawson and Wolcott are remarkably even, averaging three and a half inches in diameter, on long stiff stems. Other varieties in the house are lacking in some essential. Mermaid has no stiffness; Innocence, no constitution; Norway, too slow to bloom although a giant in growth. Compared with Norway, Wolcott will make a flower in half the time.

There are about twenty varieties in the house, the main object being cuttings for plants for our catalogue trade. The plants were benched August 16 and were very small, the summer being so dry, the cuttings propagated late and, planted out late, June 1. Every flowering shoot was stopped up to October 10 on all varieties, it being the desire to get early cuttings. Between October 10 and December 1 the shoots were the plants get to that height where the stem can be seen between the joints, then with a sharp knife make a clean cut, leaving from four to six joints above the soil, according to the natural habit of the variety.

I would lay particular stress on the advisability of using a sharp knife in all operations concerning the trimming of carnations. Wounds made by careless breaking or pinching off are slow to heal and many times offer a means for lurking diseases to gain a foothold.

You will notice a great difference in the natural growth of the different varieties and it is by close observance of this difference that we are able to maintain a bushy habit in every sort. White Cloud, for instance, is of sprawly growth, but allowed to form flowers; after December 1 everything available was used for propagating.

Interesting is the record of time made by varieties coming into bloom. First was Wolcott, then Manley, Dorothy, Joost, Flora Hill, Harry Fenn, Crane, Adonis, Cressbrook, Queen Louise, Roosevelt, Lawson, Mermaid, Golden Beauty, Innocence, Her Majesty and Harlowarden, with Norway last. Wolcott bloomed December 10, the rest following in succession as above, Lawson being in about January 15 and Norway February 10. Accordingly it would take Wolcott two months, Lawson three and Norway four months to come into flower.

The house was run in the fall 52 degrees at night and after January 1, 55 degrees. No tobacco smoke or insecticide of any kind has been used in this house and the plants are today as clean as one could wish.

NOTES ON VARIETIES.

The following notes on commercial varieties will be found of interest at this time, when planting plans are being prepared for next season.

C. W. Ward, Queens, N. Y.

White Cloud and Flora Hill have not been grown here for several years. Norway was of no use with us. Wolcott bursts badly. Peru we never grew. Queen Louise does not ship well. Her Majesty was not good. Lillian Pond we did not try. Mackinac is all right, Lorna good and Gov. Lowndes fair.

In light pink Morning Glory is ancient history; Higinbotham of no use to us, but Enchantress is fine. We also grow Mrs. Thayer, which is all right, and Alpine Glow good.

In reds, Estelle did not do well with us. Adonis needs another trial. Crane is discarded, also Roosevelt, for new sorts. Palmer did not do well for us. Harlowarden is in a color where we have our own seedlings. We grow Harry Fenn, Octoroon and President. In scarlet we have Christmas Eve and Gov. Bliss.

In dark pink Lawson is all right. Nelson and Cressbrook did not prove of commercial value. Joost was long since discarded. Guardian Angel we did not try. Ethel Ward is all right, Floriana good and Mrs. Roosevelt fair.

Prosperity is all right. So are Judge Hinsdale and Mrs. Patten. Sensation is good. Stella did not do. Bradt is past history. In yellow Golden Eagle is all right, Gloriosum good and Golden Beauty poor.

E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.

Wolcott is the finest white on the place at present writing; all that could be desired this year; does best in 56 degrees. Flora Hill is the best white for early, late and midsummer; failure in midwinter. Lillian Pond was very slow in getting into condition after housing; very prolific, but inclined to burst during dark weather. Her Majesty does fairly well with us, but Queen Louise does not and White Cloud and Norway do not seem to like our soil. Peru has been discarded. Glacier is fine for side benches. Gov. Lowndes is promising; extremely large and getting into magnificent condition; shall watch carefully throughout the season.

Lawson is the finest carnation to date, but Nelson we consider an extra good pink. Joost we find still in heavy demand. Floriana is an excellent general purpose pink. Everybody likes Enchantress for light.

Estelle is a grand variety; every grower should study its requirements. Adonis is doing extra well this year; unquestionably the finest scarlet. Crane is still one of the best. Gov. Roosevelt is excellent and Harlowarden very good indeed, but Harry Fenn is the best of all the crimsons.

Prosperity is fine, but expensive to grow. Bradt is largely discarded.

H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md.

Mrs. Lawson we consider peerless in its color. Mrs. Nelson is a good producer of good, average grade flowers.

Mrs. Joost was long since discarded on account of stem-rot. Cressbrook is a very free winter bloomer, but it begins business too late and stops too soon. Enchantress is a free producer for its size; a marvel, but does not hold its color any too well and might be a little better keeper. Neither Morning Glory nor Mrs. Higinbotham have been grown in sufficient quantity to warrant a verdict. For a popular shade of pink our own Genevieve Lord excels all other varieties with us, being very productive, a good seller and an ideal shipper and keeper. President McKinley is expected to do better next season. It is a good producer. Mrs. Roosevelt is a very fine color, but not free enough. Sybil is affected by stem-rot, makes too much grass and is not large enough, but it is a fine color. Fragrance has plenty of that rich, spicy odor, is of good size, but not especially free; it is affected with stem-rot. Success is not a success with us; color fine but bloom much too small. Enquirer is large, fine color, but a poor keeper and bursts; not profitable. New Daybreak is a large-sized commercial bloom, holding its color and productiveness well into the summer.

We have discarded White Cloud, Flora Hill and Queen Louise. Norway is our all around white; free, large blooms, fine constitution, extra fine keeper and shipper. Wolcott is good, but must be grown warm or will split. Lillian Pond has produced some very fine blooms of very pure color, but is affected with stem-rot and splits badly; not especially free. Gov. Lowndes is the finest white we have ever seen and had it a constitution like Norway or Lawson it would be in a class all by itself; with careful selection we expect extra fine results. Lorna is a good flower, but not profitable with us. White Bradt is recommended to those who grow Bradt successfully.

Adonis, all things considered, we think easily the finest scarlet; has enough "go" in it to make it profitable; we expect much improvement in so that neither light nor air can penetrate between them, and if you are guileless enough to buy a thousand of these plants at some seemingly low figure, you will find they are worthless for any bedding purpose that year, but may do to plant out for getting a few cuttings off of the following fall. Bench room is what counts in our business and a geranium can't be sold cheap, for it takes room to grow it.

W. S.

Flora Hill, Norway, White Cloud, Wolcott and Her Majesty. J. C. F.

You can divide the list of varieties you ask about into two classes and suit them all pretty well. That is, of course, providing you have a fairly heavy soil of average fertility. I would grow Enchantress, Gov. Roosevelt, Mrs. Palmer, Adonis, Genevieve Lord, Morning Glory, White Cloud and Her Majesty in 50 to 52 degrees at night and I would raise the temperature about 5 degrees for Mrs. Lawson, Flora Hill, Norway and Wolcott. I understand Prosperity wants to be kept just about between the two, say about 52 to 54 degrees. The cool end of the warm section or the warm end of the cool section would be the place for it. Try a few Norway in the cooler section, too. A. F. J. BAUR.

Lorna is a good flower, but not profitable with us. White Bradt is recommended to those who grow Bradt successfully.

Adonis, all things considered, we think easily the finest scarlet; has enough "go" in it to make it profitable; we expect much improvement in it next year and shall plant more. Estelle holds the banner as the best paying commercial scarlet; not a fancy variety, but an up-to-date commercial one. We have discarded Harry Fenn, Crane, America, Palmer and Roosevelt and shall drop Apollo. Harlowarden is the finest crimson we have ever grown and profitable.

Prosperity is the American Beauty of the carnation world, free for its size and profitable. Mrs. Bradt is still the best red and white variegated. We are not satisfied with Marshall Field thus far, but it may do better next year.

We still grow some of the old Buttercup, hoping that through crossing we may be able to transmit some of its matchless color to a larger flower. Gold Nugget is a good, large yellow, if grown warm enough.

J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.

Wolcott is a fine flower, a free bloomer and good keeper, but splits considerably. This latter does not count for much with a grower who sells at retail, but makes it bad for one who sells only at wholesale. We shall grow it heavily the coming season. As done by Benson, of this city, Norway is the best and most profitable white in this market; with others it does not do so well; we shall drop it. Her Majesty is a free bloomer, but not extra quality as grown here; not a good keeper. Have not grown Queen Louise ourselves, but one or two growers here seem to find it a money maker; it is not a fancy. Flora Hill has been pretty generally discarded and have dropped White Cloud; stock seems to deteriorate except in very skillful hands.

Lawson leaves much to be desired in stem and uniformity of color, but it is free and so far nothing in dark pink can take its place. Mrs. Nelson has done reasonably well with other growers here, but cannot be called a fancy.

Morning Glory is small, unhealthy and generally worthless in this climate. On the other hand Enchantress is the best that ever came over the pike; large flower, good stem and calyx, easy to do and very free.

Estelle has been thoroughly tested here and discarded. Adonis has fine color; flower of fair size, but not extra; seems to be improving and may show better results next season. Crane is not satisfactory, but will be grown until some more profitable scarlet can be found. Harlowarden leaves nothing to be desired where one needs a crimson; stem and flower are both excellent and it is very free.

The more we see of Prosperity the better we like it. It is not an easy one to do well, but when its peculiarities are known it can be made profitable if there is a market for it at a fancy price. Stella seems to be the best of its class so far; bloom good size, stem good and flowers freely produced. Bradt has been discarded, flower good but stem too weak to support it. Dorothy Whitney is a profitable yellow.

J. W. Dunford, Clayton, Mo.

Flora Hill is only useful for summer blooming; we have several better whites for winter. White Cloud is still a good one four months in the winter, but Lorna is better. Norway is one of the healthiest and best carnations we know, our best commercial white, but no good in summer. Wolcott is a fine flower, but splits badly with us and seems to be a cropper; worth further trial. Queen Louise is the best all-the-year-around white; no carnation blooms more freely than this. Alba is too slow; shall drop it.

We discarded Morning Glory long ago; poor grower, subject to stem-rot. We like Higinbotham much better this year than last, but it will have to give way to Enchantress, which is proving to be all that was claimed for it, a rather unique distinction.

Estelle is the best red except Adonis; must be planted early to get good stems; many of the flowers come single. The stock of Adonis was exceptionally poor when we got it and did poorly in the field, but it seems to have a vigorous constitution. Roosevelt is good, but superseded by Harry Fenn, which is better in almost every point. Shall have to discard Crane; always off crop when flowers bring the most money and very subject to stem-rot. Palmer will also be dropped. Manley is a good red, but must be planted early. America is a cropper; will discard. Apollo has all the faults of Crane.

Lawson is a hard variety to beat in its color; needs to be planted early to get good stems; stem too stiff for an artistic looking flower. Nelson gives but few flowers in midwinter if not handled properly. Joost is still a standard in its color, but very subject to the dry rot. Shall discard Cressbrook; very poor with us. Old Scott is still a good one for summer, one of the best, with Crocker and Dorothy. Lord is a good one for a shady bench. Enquirer is slow and splits badly.

Prosperity is the only one in its class, but is hardly free enough. Could do nothing with Bradt; threw it out several years ago. Stella is better; shall give it another year's trial. Gaiety is slow and a cropper. Dorothy Whitney is a good yellow.

VARIETIES FOR FLORIDA.

I wish you would give us the names of the three best carnations for Florida. We have some warm days and cool nights, but the average is about 40 at night and 70 degrees in the daytime. The night temperature we can raise very easily, but the day temperature we have no control over. I have not grown carnations; all our space is given to roses. But as there is a demand for them, I want to try a few. Our trade calls for the best and the heavy crop is wanted between January 10 and April 10.

H. V. B.

I would advise you to try more than one variety of each color, as you will have to experiment a little with several varieties before you can find which ones are best suited to your climate, etc. I have never been in Florida, and so I cannot say with certainty that a certain variety will be the one for you to grow. I can only suggest to you a few varieties which I think will be more likely to thrive in your climate than others. I imagine that those varieties requiring a higher temperature than the average would be the ones for you to take up, but I would try many others in a limited way. For white I would recommend Flora Hill as the best warm weather white on the market, and Gov. Wolcott will likely prove a good one for you. Also try a few of Her Majesty. In pink I would recommend Ethel Crocker and Mrs. Lawson, both of which want warm night temperatures. In red G. H. Crane and America would likely be the best, but I would advise you to try a few Estelle. These are all good varieties and any one of them is liable to prove superior to all others under your climatic conditions.

A. F. J. BAUR.

THRIPS.

Please tell me what is wrong with my White Cloud? I send some sample blooms and you will see that they are useless. Half the flowers are like this. The temperature is 52 degrees, pipes under the benches. Have fed with liquid manure and given a little lime at times. In the same house are Crane, Prosperity and Lawson doing all right under the same treatment.

J. R. E.

The White Cloud carnation blooms came in good condition and showed plainly what is causing your trouble. In the half-open blooms I found several thrips, and that is what is doing the damage. Just why they are attacking the White Cloud and not the others I cannot say, except that, like many other pests, they have their preference, and White Cloud is one of their favorites. Take any bud that is about to unfold its petals and pull the petals apart and look for a tiny creature from one-sixteenth to one-eighth of an inch long and about one-quarter as thick. The color varies from a light yellow to a dark brown, according to their age. They are quite lively and you will have to look well to find them. They may be on your other varieties, too, without your knowledge, as the Lawson and Crane would not show the effects in quite the same way. On most of the red varieties and on Lawson they cause white specks along the edge of the petals instead of brown, as you see on White Cloud and all other whites. The feeding would not be likely to cause any such effect.

The remedy for this pest is tobacco in any form you may wish to apply it, and in addition to the tobacco it takes perseverance. While they are between the petals of a bud you cannot reach them, but when the bud opens they will be exposed and then is when you should be after them. Smoking every evening for a couple of weeks will likely rid the place of them, and it is a good idea to dust the plants well with tobacco dust. Get rid of them before warm weather, else you will not pick a salable bloom from the beginning of warm weather on.

A. F. J. BAUR.

VARIETIES FOR BEGINNERS.

What varieties of carnations would you advise a beginner to grow for a retail trade? Have a house 15x60 and would want one-third white and two-thirds pink, the season being from November to June. How many flowers per week would be a fair crop from this space?

G. J. S.

Since you have only one house in which to plant all your carnations, you should select varieties which need about the same treatment and temperature. Although this will prevent you from planting a few of the best paying varieties, you will be better off in the end. In white I would try Flora Hill, Queen Louise and Her Majesty. In pink I would try Mrs. F. Joost, Floriana, Mrs.

E. A. Nelson and Dorothy. All these varieties are good bloomers and of average quality. It would be hard to give a fair estimate of how many you ought to pick each week from such a house. So many different things would have more or less bearing on the results that I would not like to make an estimate.

It would also be wrong to expect the same quantity each week through the season, as some weeks when the weather is bad you may not pick a hundred blooms, while other weeks during a fine spell you may pick a thousand or more toward spring.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

HOW TO HANDLE CUSTOMERS.

[A paper by J. A. E. Haugh, of Anderson, read before the State Florists' Association of Indiana.]

A florist without customers would be like a river without water and as the buyer is a prime factor in our trade, it may not be idle to turn our thoughts to some of the fancies and ways of this often shy being and to describe some of the baits that may lure him to our desires. Do not hope to hear anything new, but a mere rehearsal of what has long been known is frequently of benefit.

First of all, fair and honest treatment to all, and the same to all, is an invariable practice to follow; other things are niceties which, while valuable are not the most important.

Keep an Attractive Store.

Too much emphasis cannot be laid on having the greenhouses bright and attractive. Dirt, litter and disorder will not help sales. A frequent change in the arrangement of the salesroom and houses is valuable. Novelties in plants or supplies help to win visitors. Nothing takes the eye like something new or strange and it pays to always keep a few rarities in stock although the direct benefit be not noticeable; and especially is this so in smaller towns, which have but few attractions to beckon the citizen with an idle hour.

Nothing, we think, helps sales more than the knowledge that the greenhouse is always open to visitors in all its parts, irrespective of intention to purchase. Our practice is to welcome each person with genial courtesy upon his entrance, learn if he has any wants and if not cordially invite him to view the entire place and make it plain that we will cheerfully give any information about plants or flowers the visitor may desire. Or, if a purchaser, after having seen to his business, we ask him also to take a look through the houses. On departure, be he purchaser or not, we extend to him a hearty invitation to visit us again and bring any of his friends he may desire. We believe it poor policy to urge a visitor to buy and often have our reward by unexpected sales. We find it a good advertisement to give a flower for the visitor to keep or give to a friend, but in this one must use discretion.

Guide to Good Selection.

Often it is well to guide the ideas of a customer for his own benefit. An outlandish funeral offering may be modified to something more in keeping with the occasion by a little judicious advice. The ire of a patron who learns that he has unknowingly been permitted to make a mistake against good taste is not desirable. If one finds the wishes of the buyer positive along a certain line, make every effort to meet his ideas and without leaving the impression that you think he has made a mistake by not following your advice.

Giving a little better than is expected is a good rule, but here again you must use discretion. If roses or carnations are ordered and you desire to put in extras of the same kind as sold, better put in the same grade as those purchased. Before we learned this we had several unpleasant experiences with patrons who had received half a dozen extra flowers of second quality added to the full number of those bought. The angry buyer would inquire why such flowers had been sent when the best had been paid for and would be much chagrined on learning that if he had taken time to count the flowers he would not have reproved us when a favor had really been conferred; it does not al-flowers only, leaving out of consideration time and material used. One way to do this is to openly inform your party that you have to make a small extra charge for this, or you can ask how much they desire to put into their offering and thus get them onto the proper basis. In the case of rose bouquets the difference in price between the best and the second grade ordinarily used in bouquets and with just as good effect, sufficiently remunerates the florist for the work of making up, but I believe the first method is the best in dealing with this dilemma.

Send Neat Packages.

Neat and careful packing cannot be too highly insisted upon. Broken buds, bruised carnations and slovenly packages are but poor recommendations for trade, and especially where a gift has been intended. Do nothing to detract from the beauty of the flowers or to shame the donor. We have often been complimented for the very dainty appearance of a really cheap box of flowers, but made attractive by special arrangement of little odds and ends and neatly wrapped and tied. We have seen packages sent from first-class growers that were a disgrace to the concern sending them out and the value in time and paper saved by an overly thrifty man can be more than lost through the feeling of an irate buyer who wonders how low he is rated by the florist who dares to send him so poor an example of thoughtfulness.

Potted plants should always be free of dirt, dead leaves, etc., the soil properly moistened and if a costly plant, especially if intended as a gift, it should often be dressed with crepe paper, ribbon, etc., before delivery. We believe it best to volunteer information about some dainty but delicate plant to an unwitting intending purchaser, for while that sale ways leave the apologizing customer in the sweetest frame of mind.

A rather difficult proposition to meet, is the one where you are asked the price per dozen of certain flowers and are then requested to make an arrangement of several dozen, with the expectation that the cost will be that of the may not be made, the confidence instilled in his mind will not be unrewarded.

Delivery should always be prompt, but here a little discreet inquiry may save a long special run when it is developed that the buyer's train will depart four or five hours later than the designated time, or that the dozen carnations ordered for the morning are to be used for a six o'clock dinner.

The Matter of Discounts.

One of the odd propositions is that of the customer who, in view of the fact that she (it is always she) buys all her flowers from you, possibly $3 or $4 a year, should have a deduction from your price. Never do it. Let her know tactfully but firmly that you have one price for everyone and that it is as low as good business will justify. A firm yet respectful stand will not injure you, as the individual unquestionably is one who has the habit of depreciating prices and will have more respect for you when she learns you are the same to all. Moreover, if you should yield it will leave her with the haunting fear that you still got the best of her.

To the same category belongs the request to cut prices on work for some lodge or church. I say most emphatically, don't do it. First, flowers are not a necessity and most assuredly an organization can better afford to pay for luxuries than the individual. If you do it once the next time they expect more and there will be no end to the demands, and a suspicion will remain that, as you have made deductions in one sale, your general prices are exorbitant. Give first class work invariably and have a fixed charge, and don't let the idea get out from your very charities that you are a robber in general as it is past human nature to expect the belief that you lose money even at the cut price.

If a customer asks you to express him C. O. D. always do it. He will not be offended and your failure to do so to save him return and collection charges may leave you with an uncollectable account. Several unpleasant experiences have impressed this upon my mind.

Getting the Cash.

How to treat the bereaved stranger or the party with known shady financial reputation is often a delicate question. Usually we have found that such people have the honor to pay for funeral flowers although their grocer may suffer. My own habit is to ask if they desire to pay cash, so that they may be properly credited on the order sheet, as I am careful to explain. We never intrude the bill with the flowers at the home, yet have the delivery man prepared with proper receipt if asked for at the house. In case the request has been made that the bill come with the designs we have the purchaser unobtrusively called to one side and an opportunity furnished him to pay. We believe that the bill should be presented in all cases if so requested. A failure, from oversight or delicacy, to do so, has long delayed and even lost us some accounts.

Short accounts make long friends. When flowers are sent to the purchaser it is a good policy to mark the price on the package and give the delivery man change. We keep a purse of $5 always ready. Let the purchaser have a chance to pay cash and thus save booking and a running account. A monthly collection should be made of all accounts, when possible, and I need not say great discretion must be used in collections. I have found the husband often angry if he gets the family statement. In other cases it is the wife who is indignant. These little idiosyncrasies have to be remembered. In other cases the patron thinks he paid when giving his order. This may have been given by telephone and a memorandum to that effect, such as we use, is of benefit. If the customer is an honorable man and honestly believes the bill settled, it is better to pocket the loss, although you know it has not been settled.

The Unreasonable Customer.

Do not be overly worried by an unreasonable customer when you know you are in the right; treat his statements with cool temper and respect and nine times out of ten you will have a renewal of his trade. Be quick to acknowledge and amend your mistakes, for you will make them. An honest confession will benefit and raise you in your patron's estimation. But manly dignity and self-respect should not permit you to cringe to the blusterings of anyone, provided you are in the right.

Many other points might be produced, showing how best to maintain friendly and profitable relations with the buying public, but the ones mentioned seem to me to be of great importance and, while the views here expressed may not be that of all those present, yet I believe in the main you will agree with me in this presentation.

TRADE OUTLOOK GOOD.

R. G. Dun & Co., in its weekly review of trade, says that inclement weather alone prevents a definite revival of business. With wheat commanding present prices and other produce sharing in the advance, the gratifying measure of added prosperity means much to the agricultural classes and provides a healthful stimulus to general business. The movement of merchandise increased during the week, buying became more active in the jobbing lines, and retail trade has shown increased activity.

TUBEROUS ROOTED BEGONIAS.

Will you please tell me through the REVIEW how long it takes tuberous rooted begonias to flower after planted and also if they should be kept in the dark while growing. J. W.

The time it will take to bring these begonias into flower will depend on what month they are started. If started in January they might not flower before May. If started as late as early April they can be had in flower by June 1. They by no means should be kept in the dark. This begonia is not a bulb, like a tulip or hyacinth, but is a corm and will make a leaf growth almost directly after it begins to make roots.

If you want them to sell as pot plants for house or conservatory you can start them now. Either place the corms two inches apart in flats containing three inches of light soil (a mixture of light loam and leaf mold) or put them singly in 3-inch pots. Let the top of the corm be even with or very slightly below the surface of the soil. Water once and keep the soil rather on the dry side until leaf growth appears, after which they should never be allowed to get dry. When well rooted in the 3-inch pots shift into their flowering pot a 5, 6 or 7-inch, according to size of the corm and vigor of growth. Those in the flats, after they have made a leaf or two, can be lifted out and put into 4-inch and later shifted on.

Few people favor these begonias as summer bedding plants, but nevertheless the writer has seen beds of them in our parks that surpassed for brilliance and richness the most glaring bed of zonale geraniums. For bedding I would not start them till April 1 and then in flats, putting them about May 1 into 4-inch pots and then plunging them in a mild hotbed where for a week or two you can expose them to the full sun and air before planting out, or protect them from a late frost. For a bedding plant you don't want a large greenhouse-grown plant. W. S.

CALANTHES.

I consider myself under an obligation to W. N. Craig for the very courteous and at the same time emphatic way in which he corrects me in my error anent the cultivation of calanthes. I consider it a compliment that such an eminent orchidist and all-round good gardener as Mr. Craig reads my notes at all, but to the fact that he does we are indebted for his timely corrections of a careless piece of writing. As he "read with special interest" the notes on other orchids and up to date has made no criticism, let us fervently hope that on the cattleyas and others I made no serious mistake. Mr. Craig has got me cornered and I am not going to squirm out of it by saying that I was misquoted. I wrote just as it was printed. I had been very careful what I said about the cattleyas, cypripediums, etc., and with a few moments to go to mail I hurriedly wrote the few notes on the calanthe. Some fifteen years ago we had a few dozen of these pretty orchids, but do not think them very desirable for the commercial florist. Since Mr. Craig has called me down I have had a chat with two men who are both well posted on all familiar orchids, and this is what they say and it substantially agrees with Mr. Craig.

"After the flower is cut or gone the plant is at rest and should be kept perfectly dry till it starts to make new growths, which may be in March or it may be April. Then pot them and encourage growth during summer and fall, say till October, when for a month or so they can be kept rather on the dry side, or till the flower spike appears. This "dry side" must by no means be anything like the perfectly dormant state that is proper for them after flowering, but merely a little less moisture than you gave them when they were growing fast during the summer. Liquid manure is of great benefit to them and the time to apply it is, of course, during the summer months, when they are making the most active growth."

I am sorry to disappoint Mr. Craig, but I have discovered no new method of culture and will therefore have to creep about on the surface of the earth and forego the honor of being hoisted up aloft on a pinnacle. When wireless telegraphy is more perfected I shall call up Mr. Craig whenever I feel any doubts on a subject and, as above said, I am really glad that he corrected me. We all can stand it. It makes us careful and wiser, and in conclusion will say again, thanks. Under separate cover I have forwarded to Mr. Craig one-quarter of a pound of radium. Keep it in the odontoglossum house or some cool place.

YOUNG ROSE STOCK.

Can I keep my rose plants growing by shifting them regularly, or whenever they need it? I am building a house, but cannot get it up before July 1. Can I keep the plants in the carnation house until the rose house is ready? L. H. W.

The young stock can be kept growing and in perfect condition till July by giving the plants half-inch shifts when necessary and never allowing them to become pot-bound, particularly after hot weather commences. For best results the temperature should not be allowed to drop below 55 degrees, which may in the meantime be a little high for carnations. Day temperature should be at least 70 degrees during sunshine.

RIBES.

VALUES OF FERTILIZERS.

What is the relative value of sheep manure at $28 per ton and cow manure at $2 per ton? I would like to know what would be the most profitable to use at above prices for either garden or greenhouse? S. S. P.

From experiments conducted by M. Schubler, a noted French agriculturist, and others, the following results were obtained: If a given area of land planted with seed without using manure yields nine times the quantity of seed employed, the same area, if cow manure is used, will yield twenty-one times, and if sheep manure is used the yield will be thirty-six times the quantity used.

Of course a good deal depends on the quality of manure used, which is in a great measure regulated by the class of food given to the stock and by the after care of the manure. Also it must be taken into consideration that when manure is used on the farm little danger is to be apprehended from excess of gases released during decomposition, whereas in a greenhouse these gases accumulate and often have a very deleterious effect on the foliage.

For economy, safety and satisfactory results in the greenhouse cow manure is best, and unless for some special crops it is also better, and at the prices stated more economical for the garden also.

RIBES.

DUTCH BULBS.

Will you kindly give me some information regarding forcing daffodils, hyacinths and tulips for Easter in a house of 50 degrees at night and 70 in the daytime. This is my first year in the business and I would like to know when to bring them in. I am a subscriber to your paper and have gotten some very valuable information from it. Kindly let me know so I will not get them in too late. L. S.

This has often been written up in the columns of the REVIEW, yet as the date of Easter varies so greatly and our fickle climate changes her mood without our orders, there is no definite number of days to allow for these bulbs to be brought into flower. As I intend to comment on this subject under the head of Miscellaneous Seasonable Hints for this week, I will refer L. S. to those notes and will simply say that Easter being so early there is not much danger of your being too early if you give all these bulbs from twenty-five to twenty-eight days in your night temperature of 50 degrees. For a fuller answer to the question "to the best of my ability" look to another column. W. S.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.Department of Plant Registration.

John Cook, Baltimore, Md., submits for registration two seedling roses, described as follows:

Cardinal, a cross between Liberty and an unnamed seedling; color, crimson maroon; growth very strong; flowers large, full double and deliciously fragrant; a continuous bloomer.

Enchantress, a cross between Mme. Caroline Testout and an unnamed seedling; color pink; growth rapid and continuous, never resting and flowering at every shoot. Wm. J. STEWART, Secy.

CARNATIONS REGISTERED.

Jerome A. Suydam, Flatbush, N. Y., registers Alarm, pure white, without any tint of color at any season of the year; a cross between Flora Hill and Day-break, in size three and one-half inches, on an excellent stem, well formed flowers and nicely fringed.

There will be a number of new candidates at Detroit March 2, and any grower who wants to get some idea of the novelties should attend the meeting. There are plenty of good hotels. Nothing has been said about any certain one, but it is likely that the Cadillac will be a sort of headquarters. There will be a committee having this matter in charge and they can help all arrivals out, both on hotel matters and how to get to the meeting hall. ALBERT M. HERR, Secy.

CHICAGO.The Market.

A few days of bright and warmer weather have been felt in increasing receipts in the market and by Saturday of last week there was a small accumulation, even in roses, something which has not been seen for many weeks. But Monday saw a brisk shipping demand and everything was cleaned up. Tuesday was quiet, as is almost always the case, and stock again dragged, with little prospect of more active demand before the end of the week.

Beauties are the shortest item, but enough to go around. Brides and Maids are of very fine quality and should there be a little more bright weather, very large cuts will be in, large, at least, by comparison with those of the past couple of months. Not many Liberty are seen, most of them very short. Prices are weakening in the rose department, not materially on the better grades, but enough on small stock to make the fact apparent in growers' averages.

Carnations are in large supply, but are cleaning up well, for requirements are heavy and there is always a place for stock of the good grade now at hand when it can be offered in quantity at what the buyers call reasonable prices, say $15 per 1,000. The call for white has lagged a little in the past few days. Callas and Harrisii have also become abundant. There is a fair sale for the fancy qualities in tulips, but the common stock is going slow. Other bulbous stock is in the same way. Violets are again in large supply and hard to move. Considerable quantities of the eastern product are received, but do not sell any better than the singles grown locally. Campbell is out of the running. Green goods are equal to all requirements.

Various Notes.

Poehlmann Bros. have recently acquired about four acres of land contiguous to their original plant at Morton Grove and are contemplating a few more houses, but have not yet fully decided what they will do.

George P. Ball has made a three-year lease on the A. C. Harms greenhouses at Berteau and Oakley avenues and will devote them to carnations for the wholesale market. The houses are empty at present, having been frozen up some months ago while in the hands of A. B. Everett.

L. Coatsworth went to New Castle on Tuesday, accompanied by J. A. Budlong and A. H. Budlong.

Phil Hauswirth would like to be notified by those who will go to Detroit in order that adequate accommodations may be assured. Call him up on Harrison 585 or drop a postal to 227 Michigan avenue. There will be a parlor car for the party on the 3 o'clock Wabash next Tuesday afternoon.

The Washington's birthday business was a disappointment to the retailers. A. Lange says that for Valentine's day he could not wait on the people in his two stores, but for Washington's anniversary there was nothing doing, either in transient trade or decorations for social affairs. John Mangel had the decoration for the dinner at the Union League Club, about the only affair of any importance. He used 600 Lawson carnations, a few hundred short Beauties and some green.

Peter Reinberg's exhibit at last week's flower show was sold to the Consumers' Flower store and made a fine window display for several days. The Chatenay was a wonderful vase of flowers when fully developed. A shipment of their Uncle John rose was sent to J. H. Small & Sons, New York, one day this week.

The Anderson Floral Co. will retire from business shortly after Easter. It is reported that the fixtures have been sold. The building is to be torn down May 1.

C. M. Thomas, of the A. L. Randall Co., says it looks to him as though the supplies of Harrisii may be short at Easter, owing to the inability of many of the growers to get their stock in by April 1.

Wieter Bros. are cutting fancy carnations in large quantities. They have never had better success in this department and the cut all grades high.

E. F. Winterson Co. will handle Reed & Keller's folding Christmas bell next season.

The wholesale houses are being equipped with the new automatic telephone.

John Thorpe says that a flower show is assured for Kansas City this year. It is now only a question of dates.

Bassett & Washburn will take 1,200 or more carnations to Detroit for the A. C. S. show.

Sam Pearce cuts his Romans in a manner which might well be generally adopted. He pulls up the whole plant and merely cuts the bulb through the middle, leaving enough of it to retain all the foliage with the flower spike.

C. A. Samuelson will take in the Detroit carnation convention.

On Tuesday night fire in an adjoining store caused a smoke and water loss of nearly $1,000 in the store of Johnson & Swan, at Forty-seventh street and Lake avenue.

Among the week's visitors were J. A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.; Wm. Murphy and Thomas Windram, Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. John Young, St. Louis; B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, and a representative of Reed & Keller, New York.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade kept up well the earlier part of the past week, but since Wednesday, which wound up the social season, business has been slack. On Monday of last week cut flowers of all kinds were very scarce and funeral work in plenty. Everybody seemed busy with that kind of work and most every one was hunting up stock to fill orders. The wholesalers reported plenty of telegrams from neighboring towns asking for shipments, but as the local trade demanded all, they had to be turned down. Prices of course went up at once on carnations and roses, which were hard to get at any price.

There has been a decided drop in the temperature, with snow and cloudy weather, which made cut stock scarce, and the market cleaned up nearly up to Wednesday. Since then the market is much better and stock of all kinds more plentiful, with prices still up on first-class stock. But common grades have come down in price. Quite a lot of this material can be had at the present time and we look for no scarcity from now on until Easter.

In roses Brides and Bridesmaids of the highest grade stand at $10 per 100 and running down to $5. The best demand has been for light colored stock. White stock also sold well. Beauties are in their usual demand, with fancy stock not to be had and firsts and seconds selling well. Carnations are again becoming more plentiful—that is, colored stock. Whites are pretty well cleaned up each day and so are good fancy Lawson and Enchantress. Wolcott, White Cloud and Queen Louise are among the best whites in the market, Crane and Estelle in red and Mrs. Nelson, Joost and Guardian Angel in pinks. Prices range from $3 to $5 and common sorts are sold at $2.

Violets held their own during the week and enough were in to supply the demand at 50 and 75 cents per 100. From now on there will no doubt be an overproduction of these. The bulb market is also well supplied at the present time. Harrisii sell well, with not any too many in the market; $15 per 100 is the price, with callas the same. Valley improves in quality, also freesia. Romans and Paper Whites have quite a demand. Tulips are very plentiful at $3 and $4 per 100. Smilax is abundant and of good quality, also asparagus strings.

The Club Entertainment.

The entertainment and ball given by the Florists' Club last Friday night was a grand success in every way, and those who did not attend missed a good time. The florists, with their families and friends, began to arrive at 8 o'clock, and at 9 the dancing floor was well filled. The entertainment was interspersed between the dances. The hall was beautifully decorated with carnations, kindly donated by Messrs. Kuehn and Ellis. The wild smilax, donated by Caldwell the Woodsman, arrived a day late. The entertainment was furnished by Mrs. Otto Koenig and Mrs. John Koenig, who sang beautifully. Miss Pearl Ellis rendered difficult selections on the piano. Miss Willow gave an interesting Spanish dance and Miss Stamm played the latest selections on the piano, each lady receiving a large bunch of roses and carnations. The affair was managed by Otto Koenig and Fred C. Weber, who deserve great credit.

Mr. Brown, the English gardener, and his assistant, R. J. Mohr, better known at the World's Fair grounds as "the long and short of it," in company with the French gardener, thoroughly enjoyed the ball. Frank Fillmore acted as usher in presenting the bouquets to the performers and did his part in a graceful manner. The bouquets were furnished by Fred Weber. We missed our suburban members very much. W. J. Pilcher and wife, of Kirkwood, were the only ones to attend. The east side members were also noted in their absence. Mr. and Mrs. John Young left for Chicago Friday night on a visit to their daughter, and so missed the ball. Refreshments were served on the second floor and enjoyed by all.

Club Meeting.

Don't forget the club meeting next Thursday afternoon, March 3, at 2 o'clock. This will be one of the most important meetings of the year. J. H. Hadkinson and Henry Emmons will be the essayists at this meeting. The arrangement committee will have its report ready on entertaining the executive board of the S. A. F., which meets at the Southern Hotel March 5, 6 and 7. The tickets will also be handed out for the trolley ride to the World's Fair grounds on Sunday, March 6, to which all members are eligible. Members who wish to take part in this trip must attend the meeting. No tickets will be sent by mail.

A team composed of Beneke, Beyer, Miller, Kuehn and Ellison will roll a match game with the Belleville Difficulties, which team is captained by E. W. Guy, on next Monday night on Worden's alleys, and the following week the same team will tackle Uncle Sam's team of letter carriers, which is captained by John W. Kunz, a former florist. J. J. B.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business is exceptionally good for the beginning of Lent, although there have been one or two quiet days. Violets have sold well and are of fine quality. Brides and Maids are more plentiful, also fancy carnations. Bulbous stock in general and daffodils in particular drag at times. Easter lilies are to be had in quantity, also white violets, both rather scarce until now.

Flower town.

The tavern keeper and all the natives spell it Flower town, at least all of them who adhere to higher education, but visitors who trudge out the Bethlehem pike to the second rise beyond the one where they tell such famous yarns that the place is known as Chestnut Hill, one part of it even as "Windy Moor," shortened latterly for the sake of euphony, will agree with the above spelling. For there George E. Campbell has taken root and flourished exceedingly, as may be seen at a glance or learned from the statement that he cut 110,000 Brides and Maids from two houses each 20x150 feet in twelve months. The romantic days of camping out in a big tent are over long since; his home is too comfortable to make that a regret. There is a nice stable and a newer icehouse, just filled with sixty solid tons of frozen water that makes their possessor feel that summer heat has no terrors for his rose buds. There are four 150-foot houses now, two each in Brides and Bridesmaids in the pink of condition, throwing up strong bottom canes that make specials and firsts easily outnumber seconds and thirds just at the right time. Mr. Campbell says that "care" does it. Certainly, as my friend K. would put it, the combination between care and Campbell seems to make a winner. Perhaps it ought to be Campbell and care; he takes care you know.

Little Acts of Kindness.

It is generally admitted by the intent in and about this City of Brotherly Love that if you strike a heating snag you run out Woodland avenue and consult George Anderson. It would be interesting to know how many of our florists have done this; when the number is told you will know how many have benefited by his knowledge and experience. George Anderson is thoroughly up in steam fitting, as well as in all kinds of iron work relating to greenhouse construction. He is said to have been the first florist here to heat his place by steam and to cut and drill his own purlins. He is not practical, but he understands the principles that govern steam circulation so that he secures results for his work. Many a knotty problem has been submitted to him, why this or that arrangement wouldn't do, that he has solved, making the remedy clear with a rapidly drawn sketch on some convenient post or board. Yes, post, because though a firm believer in iron, Mr. Anderson thinks the iron post of today must be strengthened to fill its place properly in the modern greenhouse. And so with the little sketch in mind each one has returned to his own place with a warm spot under the left side of his jacket for the man who had so freely given of his knowledge to help his fellow-men.

The William Graham Co. has a fine window display of yellow calla lilies with caladium-like leaves.

A. G. Campbell will on Monday succeed John McIntyre, now with H. H. Battles, as Edward Reid's assistant.

Mayberry & Hoover, of Washington, were large purchasers of decorative plants lately.

Wednesday was ladies' night at the Florists' Club, when a reception, games and refreshments were enjoyed by many fair women and brave men. PHIL.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market feels keenly the Lenten season. The general tendency is downward. The supply of everything has been in excess of the demand and of violets it may safely be said the ice boxes are never empty. The best Beauties hold steady at 50 cents and occasionally command a little more. The supply of carnations is increasing. The holiday on Monday found a stagnant market, which it failed to energize. Many of the wholesalers closed early in the afternoon and the street merchants seemed to be doing the bulk of the business. There was a flood of violets in the market and hardly any demand for them. The weather turned warm and rainy Sunday.

The Club Dinner.

On Saturday night the annual banquet of the New York Florists' Club was enjoyed at the St. Denis hotel. The attendance was not as large as was anticipated. However, the enthusiasm and enjoyment were quite up to the record of the club. President Traendly filled the toastmaster's chair with dignity and skill. The committee displayed rare selective ability in the choice of orchestra and "vaudevillians," some of the best artists in the musical and elocutionary line having been engaged. The toasts were fine and the orators of the club, Messrs. O'Mara and Wallace, did them ample justice. Mr. O'Mara spoke to the toast "Our Night," and gave a brilliant address, referring to the fact that ten years ago it was his privilege to respond to the same announcement. He descanted feelingly upon the faces that had vanished and the tender recollections that crowded upon us of the men who "fought the battle of the flowers." He asked for pledges of mutual support and loyalty to the president and to each other. He referred to the healthy condition of the club, the success of its new departures in the triumph of the carnation exhibition at its rooms and the prospect of duplicating its success on rose night on March 14; never in his memory did the future of the organization seem so bright. He interspersed his eloquent address with many amusing stories and evoked considerable demonstrative enthusiasm throughout.

Alex Wallace was at his best on the familiar subject, to him, "The Press," which he himself declared "could not have fallen into better hands." John H. Taylor made a strong plea for the strength and effort of the young man in horticulture. He spoke eloquently of the glorious field that opens to his view and the heritage which the older ones are gradually but surely yielding to the coming generation.

The flowers on the table were contributed by Lager & Hurrell, William H. Siebrecht, Alex. Guttman, Traendly & Schenck, Walter Sheridan and John Young. Those present were F. H. Traendly, S. S. Butterfield, John Young, P. O'Mara, L. B. Craw, L. R. Cobb, Frank Moore, Henry Hentz, Jr., John Nash, Chas. Lenker, Alex Guttman, John Scott, A. L. Miller, Paul Kessler, Chas. Schenck, Jos. Hayden, John H. Taylor, Lawrence Haffner, John E. Lager, H. Hurrell, A. H. Langjahr, Alex. Wallace, Theo. Lang, Benj. Slinn and brother, J. B. Nugent, Lewis Haffner, W. H. Siebrecht, W. F. Sheridan, Chas. Plumb, William Plumb, W. J. Stewart, W. C. Mansfield and friend, Dr. S. C. Roland, John Dowsett and J. Austin Shaw. Each guest took home a bottle of Mum's Extra as a souvenir.

Various Notes.

J. K. Allen has had a strenuous week with the grippe, but is convalescent.

Josephus Plenty, of Jersey City, a greenhouse builder, died at his home on Monday after a three months' illness, in his fifty-fourth year.

Miss Josie Rieley, bookkeeper for J. K. Allen, has been ill a week with the grippe.

Arthur C. Dacre, of the Kurzman, Dacre Co., has fully recovered and has joined the force of Young & Nugent. This firm is handling some splendid catleyas and gardenias.

The father of W. A. and Jos. Manda, of Orange, N. J., died on Saturday. The sympathy of their many friends in the trade of New York is extended.

Rose night, March 14, promises to be one of unusual interest at the New York Florists' Club rooms. All the new roses will be displayed and exhibitors from all parts of the country have promised co-operation. Notwithstanding Carrie Nation's objection, the canteen committee promises special demonstrations.

The Detroit carnation convention will have a fine representation from New York and vicinity. Mr. Haffner, of the West Shore, has been particularly courteous and attentive to intending travelers and it looks as if a Pullman will be comfortably filled under his chaperonage. The display of new varieties from this center will include some eye openers.

The firm of Wadley & Smythe has been incorporated with a capital of $50,000. Mr. Wadley retires and the firm will consist of Z. W. Van Zelm, C. H. Clark and F. W. Smythe. No change of location is contemplated.

Someone burglariously inclined evidently thinks Scottii must be the coming fern, for he endeavored to burgle the houses of John Scott, at Flatbush, last week Sunday. Fortunately he was detected and the new fern is still unmolessted.

The New York Florists' Bowling Club celebrated the birthday of the immortal George, somewhat depleted as to numbers, but nine of the faithful enjoyed the alleys, and we select the three best games of each as an example of what was accomplished. Capt. Lang came very nearly making a record.

BUFFALO.

The Carnation Show.

The chief event among the fraternity last week was the meeting of the club on Wednesday and a very fine display of most all of the carnations being disseminated this spring. The program was not carried out just as it was arranged. The exhibition was intended to be in one of the rooms of Turn Hall, the recently acquired spacious quarters of Wm. F. Kasting, but the very severe weather and the heating system not being complete, it was thought best to make the display in Mr. Kasting's present wholesale emporium. The vases of flowers had ample room, but spectators were rather congested. We were glad indeed to see such a gathering of the local craft, as well as many from nearby towns. At 8 p. m. we gathered in the large dining room of the Genesee hotel, where Mr. Gammage, of London, Ontario, gave us a half-hour's talk on the divine flower. Mr. Gammage did not enter into cultural directions, but most entertainingly discoursed on the rise to popularity, the present status and possibilities of the carnation. The discussion which ensued lasted a full hour and touched upon every phase of the subject, benches, tile benches, solid beds, sub-watering, propagation, field culture, all-under-glass culture and, in fact almost every other feature that perplexes the carnation grower.

The talkers were principally Charles Roney of Jamestown; Henry Wise, M. Bloy, Charles Guenther, L. H. Neubeck, Prof. Cowell, Mr. Foss, C. H. Keitsch, C. Sandiford and others more or less, and the chairman, W. S., sandwiched in a little "jolly" between speakers. It was a good meeting and I think enjoyed by all.

Now, where there were so many fine varieties it would not be my province to speak of any that seemed best to please. Prof. Cowell, George McClure, C. Sandiford and Charles Guenther carefully scaled all the new varieties as per scale of the A. C. S., and in their judgment rendered the following:

Variety.	Exhibitor.	Scored.
Cardinal	Witterstaetter	91
Red Lawson	Palmer & Son	88
The President	Cottage Gardens	89
Crusader	Chicago Carnation Co.	89
Mrs. Patten	Peter Fisher	86
Judge Hinsdale	Cottage Gardens	88
Ethel Ward	Cottage Gardens	87
Nelson Fisher	Peter Fisher	88
Indianapolis	Baur & Smith	85
Albatross	L. E. Marquisee	87
Flamingo	L. E. Marquisee	91

Besides the above there were exhibits of some of the later introductions by Wise Bros., C. Guenther, Cottage Gardens, W. J. Palmer & Son, Wm. Scott and F. G. Lewis. We regret very much that Mrs. Patten and Nelson Fisher from the Thompson Co. and Lady Bountiful and The Belle from F. Dorner & Sons Co. splendid flowers, arrived late the same evening, after the meeting was over. Considering the weather of the previous day it's a wonder that anything arrived on time and in the perfect condition that without exception all seem to have done.

And now I take this opportunity for the Buffalo Florists' Club to sincerely thank all those gentlemen who so kindly sent us such fine exhibits.

Keeping Qualities.

It just occurred to me that a word about the keeping qualities of some of these varieties might be of interest. On a table in front of me are a few flowers of several of the varieties. When they were picked I can't say, but they arrived in this city last Tuesday morning. They must have been cut eight days ago. They withstood for eight or nine hours a most crowded room. They have been lugged out of an ice box fifty times, then brought over in their declining days into a warm room. And this Tuesday morning, here are some that are standing up with petals expanded and scarcely a blemish to mark the ordeal they have undergone: Cardinal, The President, Ethel Ward, Judge Hinsdale, Indianapolis, Mrs. Patten, Crusader and Lady Bountiful. I have nothing to say about the keeping of other varieties, because I did not have an opportunity to test them and this was no test, it is simply a fact observed.

Various Items.

Business has been decidedly improved the past two weeks. A call at the Main street stores last week found them all rushing and when W. J. Palmer says, "We have been awful busy today," it sounds good.

Mr. Miller, of Timothy Eaton fame, all the way from Toronto, came to attend our meeting.

Peter Croweum, of Utica, has spent a couple of days in town.

Mike Bloy, of North Olmsted, O., and Jas. Mc Hutchison, of New York, were recent visitors.

Mr. Snell, formerly with W. J. Palmer, has taken a permanent position with S. A. Anderson. This makes his store help strong, both in working force and artistic ability.

Now my story is long enough, I hope, and think the attendance from here to La Detroit will be good, as it should be. It is but six hours' ride from this city.

The Market.

The first week of Lent had really a stimulating effect on the market. Contrary to all expectations, business was very good and prices did not decline. At the present writing this market is in a very healthy state. Roses of extra fine quality are arriving in quantity now. The best grade of Maids and Brides bring $15 per 100, but the ordinary grades are considerably lower in price than they have sold for some time. Beauties are decidedly off crop. At present carnations are moving out at very fair figures; the supply is sufficient to meet all demands. Daffodils and tulips, in fact all bulbous stock, are abundant. The demand for red flowers and violets for Washington's birthday was heavy, but the supply was equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

Quantities of grand Maids and Brides are being sent in by Fred Burki and B. L. Elliott. Blind Brothers also report a very good cut of roses.

As usual, John Bader has a splendid collection of blooming plants, palms and ferns. His Easter stock will be in just right.

Wm. Lauch, of Carriick, is sending the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. some extra fine specimen plants of azaleas. This firm is also getting daily consignments of very choice lilies, mignonette and lilac.

The Valley Greenhouse Co. is cutting some of the finest Harrisii lilies seen in

NEXT WEEK THE CARNATION NUMBER

Next week's Review will contain a full report of the Detroit Carnation Convention. It will be an issue of particular interest to the thousands of growers of carnations, many of whom wait for the verdict of the Convention before placing their orders for cuttings.

this market for a long time. Mr. Buechler, their foreman, reports practically no disease among his lily bulbs this season.

E. C. Ludwig will open his new stand in the Allegheny market, March 1. Mr. Ludwig makes a specialty of design work and has made considerable outlay in the way of advertising; a new floral album, issued by him, should bring good returns.

The modes of handling flowers in the Allegheny market are a little different from the usual methods employed. The displays of cut flowers and plants are on a very large scale, in fact, G. & J. W. Ludwig, Frank Falk and F. Breitenbaugh & Bro. all make daily exhibits which compare well with any small sized flower show.

T. M. Ulam & Co. received the order for the Americus Club floral emblem, which was sent to the funeral of Senator Hanna.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club has been postponed until Tuesday, March 15. At this meeting carnations will be discussed and the members who attend the carnation convention will be called upon to tell us what good things they saw at the convention. This meeting will be one of the most interesting and profitable of the season. A large attendance is expected.

Xavier E. Schmitt, head gardener of Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, Pa., was a visitor last week. Hoo-Hoo.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

On an average trade is very good. There are a good many funerals, in spite of the so-called cold, healthy weather we have been having. Lent has had little or no effect on the market. While there is but little rushing about to fill orders, yet there is very little stock left over. Roses are coming in larger quantities and the quality is first-class. All grades are sold out clean. Carnations are in much larger supply and some fine stock is seen. They also sell out well. Bulbous stock is doing better. Harrisii and callas are especially good property. Valley moves a little slow. There are lots of violets, especially single, and they are very good. At times they sell well, but at others they are hard to move at any price. Smilax and asparagus have been in heavy demand. Ferns, too, have been selling well.

Notes.

During a heavy wind storm the roof of one of Geo. Murphy's greenhouses was lifted off and thrown upon an adjoining house, causing considerable damage.

Mrs. Garges, of the firm of Coates & Garges, is confined to her bed with the grippe.

Wm. Murphy and Thomas Windram left Monday night for Chicago, where they will spend several days visiting the large establishments. From there they will go to Detroit to attend the carnation convention.

The carnation meeting is almost here and it looks as if there will be quite a representation from this city. They will leave this city next Tuesday at 9:45 p. m., via the C. H. & D. The rate will be a fare and a third. Any one wishing to join the Cincinnati party is cordially invited to do so.

H. M. Altick, of Dayton, Ohio, was in this city representing the florists' end of the McKinley monument fund. He is working very hard to raise as large a sum as possible among the florists, and certainly deserves success. The fact that McKinley day brought forth such a heavy demand for carnations, thus bringing the florists a large profit that they would not otherwise have realized, makes it look as if every florist in the country could well afford to make a donation, however small, to this fund, and still be money in pocket, with many McKinley carnation days coming in the future.

A trip through R. Witterstaetter's carnation houses was a treat that the writer recently enjoyed. There were seedling carnations by the thousands and of almost every color, and the general excellence of them all is surprising. Several houses of his new scarlet, Cardinal, were a mass of bud and bloom and a great sight. The color is extra fine and that Dick has a good thing in this variety cannot be doubted.

C. J. OHMER.

MOVE YOUR SURPLUS.

Please discontinue the advertisement of Mt. Blanc cannas; have sold the lot through the first insertion in the REVIEW. Will want to move some other stock a little later. EDWARD HARRIS.

GRAND RAPIDS.

Coal Scarce.

The temperature still persists in dodging from zero to 20 degrees below, frequently accompanied by a stiff breeze that penetrates through every crack and crevice, taxing boilers to their fullest capacity. It will take at least forty per cent more coal to get through this winter than last, with the same amount of glass. Besides we are beginning to face a coal shortage which, had it occurred thirty days earlier, might have caused serious concern. There are plenty of cars of coal between the mines and Grand Rapids, but it cannot be gotten into town by the railroads.

The boiler at Frank Strong's, vegetable grower, gave out recently. He is temporarily out of commission, but will start up as soon as the boiler can be put in repair. There are rumors daily of frozen plants near the far ends of houses, or near a crack in the glass, but so far no serious freeze-up is reported, except the one noted.

Carnations welcome the sun, for they were very weak in the stem. Roses are beginning to improve in quality; in fact everything is beginning to feel the influence of the sun's rays. Business has been good, the out-of-town call for flowers being so heavy that no flowers have been wasted. Prices remain the same as at my last report. Bulbous stock is becoming more plentiful.

Several have signified their intention to attend the Detroit convention, provided this kind of weather don't hang on that long. Anyway we are praying for fine weather and a successful convention.

THE Reliance Nursery Co., Geneva, N. Y., has been incorporated with $20,000 capital stock by John M., Timothy J. and Mary E. Twomly.

THE Jewell Nursery Co., Lake City, Minn., incorporated with $100,000 capital stock, has been licensed to operate in Wisconsin with $10,000 capital.

THE sugar and Norway maples are preferable for permanency to the more rapid-growing silver variety. These do well in most soils and are probably the most frequently used trees for street planting.

THE Wm. H. Moon Co. has issued one of the handsomest nursery catalogues of the year. The cover is white, green and gold, the paper and presswork good and text and illustrations commendable. The book is sewed with thread so that it opens flat.

It is stated that Otto Katzenstein, formerly with the Pinehurst Nurseries, has formed a partnership with S. Z. Ruff to handle extensive southern fields of Rhododendron catawbiense and Kalmia latifolia which they have acquired. Their headquarters will be at Atlanta, Ga.

EVERY retail florist who has a piece of ground should plant specimens of a few of the best and most salable trees, shrubs and fruits. With well-grown specimens as samples he can take many orders for planting at the proper season, obtaining his stock from any one of the many reliable wholesale nurseries.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—Radishes, 20@40 cents doz. bunches; lettuce, 25 cents case; heads, $1@4 bbl.; cucumbers, 50 cents@ $1.25 doz.

RADISHES.

It is better to continue sowing this crop in the greenhouse for some time yet. Frames would be rather too cold to insure the quick growth on which depends the quality of the radish. Besides, the returns would be so slow that it would hardly pay for the trouble necessary in caring for them in cold frames. We have tried several varieties of radishes this winter, but have failed to find any better suited to our purpose than Non Plus Ultra. W. S. CROYDON.

APHIDES ON LETTUCE.

I am sending a few leaves of lettuce and would like to know if aphides are responsible for their appearance? I know there are aphides on some of these leaves but I find some leaves that look the same way but on which I can find no insects. G. B.

The plants are undoubtedly affected by aphides and they seem to be causing all the trouble, as I can find no trace of any fungus or other disease on the samples sent. The fact that on some of the affected leaves no aphides are found does not prove that aphides did not do the harm. These leaves have probably been injured while in a younger and more tender state; they would not assume the appearance they have now, immediately after the insect had done its work, but would probably take eight or ten days to reach the present stage. The aphides after reaching the mature state seem to give their attention more to the production of offspring than to feeding. It is while in the more minute stage that they seem to do the most harm. The first indications of their presence is the curling of the young, tender leaves. This curling is caused by the nerves or stronger veins of the leaves being punctured by the insects. The leaves will outgrow this curling to a certain extent, but the withered appearance of the nerves of the leaves, as on the sample sent, is proof of this having been damaged at an earlier stage. W. S. CROYDON.

WHITE FLY ON TOMATOES.

Our experience with this tough little customer is that nothing short of hydrocyanic acid gas will eradicate it when it once gets a foothold. Though we have kept it in check with tobacco, we were never able to clean the house of it until we used the gas. Our first experience with the gas on tomatoes was in a house containing about 2,700 feet. In this we used one quart water, one quart sulphuric acid and five ounces cyanide of potassium, using one jar only and placing it on one side, about half way along the house. We had to set it on one side as there is no passageway in the center of the house; the passageway runs around the house between the center and side benches. On the center bench were two rows of tomatoes on which the first fruits were just beginning to ripen, while the side benches were occupied by smaller plants. To the plants in the center little or no damage was done, but where the gas went over these and struck the young plants the tips and more tender leaves were pretty badly scorched. At the ends of the house no damage whatever was done, nor was any damage done on the side of the house where the vessel stood.

The next time we had occasion to use the gas in the same house, in place of using one vessel we divided the same amount of material into two equal portions and used two jars, placing them in the passageway at either end of the center bench. This gave a more even distribution, but still there were a few of the tender leaves slightly scorched. No fly was left alive in either case and we found this sufficient to clean the house, no eggs even hatching out afterwards. Wherever this persistent little customer comes from, we find that he pays us a visit in the tomato house every year.

This year we used only about two-thirds of the former quantity and no damage whatever was done, but we found it necessary to give a second application about eight days after the first. This last was given about Christmas time and we have seen no white fly since.

In a former article I said that I hesitated to recommend this gas, on account of its being so poisonous, but I am glad to see the articles relating to it in the REVIEW. The better it is known the less danger of accident from its use. The great danger lies in people attempting to use it before they are thoroughly alive to the harm that may result through carelessness. W. S. CROYDON.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 23d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

It looks as though onion sets might soon be worth as much as last spring.

THE Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, expects to open its new retail store at 81 Kinzie street about March 1.

MARKET gardeners' trade is brisk at Chicago, compensating in a measure for slow business in the mail order department.

THE new Wm. S. Gilbreath Seed Co. of Indianapolis, Ind., is doing business at its temporary quarters, 368 S. Meridian street.

A REPORT from Traverse City, Mich., states that the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co. has contracted for 4,000 acres of peas in that vicinity. In lower Michigan 1,500 acres of beans, radish, squash, pumpkin and cucumber are said to have been contracted for.

THE season is not far advanced and the outlook is for a steadily rising market up to the limit of what the consumer can afford to pay for all stocks that are scarce. The more plentiful stocks are likely to be influenced by the prevailing conditions and an advance in the prices or at least a stiff demand for all of them is anticipated.

THE canners' varieties of peas seem to be up to the demand, but many of the popular garden varieties are becoming short.

ONIONS?

A novelty in the advertising line is the street car card appearing in Chicago. It reads as follows:

Have you asked your grocer about Budlong's Boilers? Why not? They are Tender, Juicy. Either kind, Yellow or Red. L. A. Budlong Co., Chicago.

LITTLE THINGS THAT COUNT.

Ofttimes the little things in business matters are overlooked, and as often, instead of being unimportant, they have the greatest possible of influence in determining the customer to buy or not to buy, as the case may be. Facts of this sort were noticeable during a recent trip taken by J. R. Bonwell, secretary of the Bonwell Seed Company, Nebraska City, Neb., who writes Agricultural Advertising. He says:

I have just returned from a little trip over the State and have picked up one or two things that may be of interest to agricultural advertisers. During the trip I came in contact personally with a great many farmers and secured from them their views on the advertising question.

Early this season we used some perforated gummed addresses and mailed some special matter direct to the farmers. While on this last trip one farmer called my attention to this in about the following words: "You spend a good deal of money and time in trying to have your printed matter effective, and then when you mail it you use a little printed address stuck on the envelope, sometimes curled up or crosswise, and expect us to make no comparison between the outside and inside of the envelope. I can tell you that in order to get the business of the farmers today you will have to look to the small things in your advertising and cut out all things that will tend to spoil the effect of your printed matter."

"This year we made a comparison of the matter sent out under seal and circular advertising and found the sealed matter brought us forty-four per cent more returns than the circulars. As we used the printed slip addresses on the circular, I have about concluded that the farmer is a little bit particular in small matters, and in the future I think we will pay a little more attention to our circularization.

During the season we have used the rural route lists to some advantage along with our agricultural advertising. In this connection I would like to say that there are several persons in Nebraska and Iowa getting out small booklets under the style of rural directories which they mail to the box owners on the routes direct. One has come to my notice from this (Otoe) county claiming to be a directory of the rural routes of the county. It has four routes from this city and two from Unadilla. As a matter of fact, there are three routes from Syracuse, one from Talmage and one from Palmyra in addition to these, and a good many farmers in this county are on routes running out of Cass county towns. Agricultural advertisers should know how thoroughly the directory covers the county before entering such a booklet.

DETROIT.

Various Notes.

The lovers of an old fashioned winter are surely satisfied with this one, for it began here about April 1 last and has been severe enough to suit most anyone, especially the coal man and the ice man, but the latter is deliberating on putting the price up on account of the increased expense of harvesting and delivering the crop by reason of the extra thickness of the ice, showing what combined effort can accomplish.

But in the way of combined effort, I think the coming carnation meeting will be a proof of what the Detroit Club can do when it tries. It is the desire of the club that all delegations notify our secretary as to their time of arrival, so that they may be met by our reception committee and escorted to the hotel in safety. It is also urged upon all members of the society to show their badge and register at once on the first day with our chairman of arrangements, Mr. Beard, and secure their banquet and other tickets so that all members can be properly cared for. Please do so as early as possible and help the management out, so that they can have some time to enjoy the company of the visitors. Everyone will be required to be a member of the society to secure tickets to the banquet, with the exception of members of the local club.

Arrangements have been made with all the express companies to deliver at once all packages directed to J. F. Sullivan, Harmonia Hall, day or night, to the end that we shall have no stock frozen in Detroit.

About three weeks ago Mr. Rackham, wishing to change the diet of his carnations from cow and sheep manure gave three houses a very light dose of horse manure and the result was the complete ruination of every bud and flower by the ammonia. He says no more horse manure for him in the greenhouse.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL

by
WILLIAM SCOTT

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid.

Florists' Publishing Co.,

CAXTON BUILDING, Chicago.

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

SAN FRANCISCO.The Market.

We have had an almost continuous downpour of rain for the past week and it is beginning to have the effect of shortening our supply of flowers, especially roses and carnations. Business, with the exception of funeral orders, has been quiet and as Lent has arrived the situation is not likely to improve to any extent. Beauty roses are few and far between and the only really good flowers I notice are Bridesmaid and Bride, and they are not abundant. Carnations are scarce and the best Lawson are selling today at 60 cents per dozen wholesale. Fancy varieties bring 75 cents and Hill, Estelle, Schwerin and Cressbrook 50 cents. Tulips are in their prime and the yellow and red sorts are being handled in large quantities. Rembrandt seems to be in the best demand and most of the flowers shown are of good quality. Valley is plentiful and sells fairly well, although some growers complain they are having a little difficulty in keeping their stock moving. Owing to the fact that many violets are grown on low ground and the rain has been so heavy that many of the growers have been unable to get on the field to pick, on several days of this week they were impossible to procure; however, we received an avalanche of them the past few days and the price has dropped. A few Marie Louise are seen but they will not be plentiful until next month. The wild maiden-hair fern, although a very poor keeping article, has had to take the place of the cultivated and it is a poor substitute. Smilax is about out of the race. Azaleas are displayed everywhere and they make an elegant showing. F. Schwerin has had the finest specimens I have seen in market this season and they are a splendid advertisement for his ability to handle them.

Notes.

H. B. McGowan has been appointed deputy superintendent of parks for the city of Oakland. Mr. McGowan was for many years with the Thermal Vale Nursery and is well known to the gardening fraternity.

authorities will regulate the peddling of flowers by the Italian venders on our public streets and compel them to move to less busy thoroughfares than they at present monopolize with their baskets. The Chronicle corner, one of the busiest spots in San Francisco, is a favorite place for them to congregate and some of the merchants as well as the florists are complaining. It is a long existing nuisance and it is probable that they will be driven completely off the streets along with the sandwich men and bootblacks who have all had to remove their stands inside the property line.

FLORISTS' GREENS.

The florists of the Pacific coast are depending more each season on our native green stuff, both for background and trimming in floral designs and to use in bunches, or in the making of festooning for larger decorations. It is only within the past few years that the wild dagger ferns were made any use of and now they have become almost indispensable to the florists. We formerly used smilax for the edges of our set pieces and when that was not in season pittosporum tips or something of that nature. But now smilax is used almost entirely for festooning and several varieties of ferns have taken its place.

The cutting and marketing of the wild huckleberry, however, has become quite an industry among our Italian woodsmen and many tons of this beautiful native shrub are sent into the San Francisco market yearly. The demand is still growing so that the gatherers are pushing farther each year into the mountainous country in pursuit of this evergreen. The huckleberry grows in California to the height of eight feet and inhabits the coast ranges from Monterey to Vancouver island. Its leaves are of a particularly rich shining green and in the spring the stems are covered with white, waxen bells. It grows most luxuriantly on the high mountain ridges in the fog nurtured portions of the red-wood belt. Its abundant berries grow very juicy and delicious and are much sought for preserving and pie-making. The branches are cut to the length of three or four feet and bunched in bundles weighing about five pounds each. They keep splendidly from ten days to two weeks in water and cost the florists about 25 cents per bunch. This is easily the most valuable of our native greens and one that, although it has been handled but a few years, it would be indeed hard to do without.

The common fango or marsh grass is used in large quantities for parlor decorating and mixing with chrysanthemums and other large, long-stemmed flowers. It grows abundantly in our northern marshes and is bundled in bunches weighing four to five pounds and sells at 25 cents wholesale. Acacia molissima, although not a native tree, is in high favor at this time of the year, when it is in full bloom and its great bunches of fragrant yellow blossoms are seen everywhere. It is a fair keeper and very decorative. In the early winter in the south and somewhat later northward the wild currant (Ribes glutinosum) becomes a thing of beauty hardly to have been expected. The young foliage, of a clear, brilliant green, is gayly decked with the long clusters of peculiarly fresh pink blossoms. The stems and flowers have a strong heavy fragrance and keep well in water.

The holly-leaved barberry, Beberis aquifolium, is gaining great favor with us as a decorative green. Like the huckleberry, it grows on the high coast-range mountains of both California and LOOMIS FLORAL CO., Loomis, Cal.

Oregon and at this season of the year the leaves are richly touched with bronze scarlet and yellow markings. In the springtime it is covered with masses of bright yellow blossoms and in the summer the leaves turn a beautiful dark glossy green.

The Californian trillium makes its appearance in market early in the spring and helps the florist to boom the season. They grow about a foot high and are very showy with their wine-colored blossoms. Like the wild flower I have just mentioned, our dealers make considerable use of the Solomon's seal during the months of March, April and June. It is gathered in vast quantities in our northern counties and shipped to market where it finds a ready sale. It is sometimes called wild valley but it belongs to an entirely different class of plants. Oak branches, buds and blossoms of several kinds of eucalyptus, flowering stems of the scrub willow and wild blackberry branches all help to decorate the florists' windows and fill in where flowers could not be used to advantage. SAN FRANCISCO.—The Retail Florists' Association, composed of twenty-eight of the leading retailers, has filed a protest with the Board of Works, seeking to secure the restriction of the privileges of the street venders who occupy prominent sidewalk stands and are said to sell $100,000 in stock each year.

CHICAGO CARNATION COMPANY, James Hartshorne JOLIET, ILL. Manager.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Trade during the last two weeks and up to ash Wednesday was almost all that could be desired. The demand was good and, although we heard complaints of an oversupply of bulbous stock, yet that was not the fault of the market. This was the fault of the growers themselves, who overestimated the demand, and more bulb stock was forced in than the market at its best could consume. Roses have been fairly scarce, especially good stock. In carnations the supply of good stock about equals the demand, while the inferior grades have to hunt a purchaser. Since Lent began we have noticed a slackening of demand, and the supply does not seem to take the hint to hold up accordingly. However, at the time of writing, prospects point to a good week's business.

The severe weather has played havoc with the wholesale shipping business and the large retailers have felt it considerably, as well. Throughout Ontario during the last two or three weeks the express companies were backward about accepting perishable goods.

A Freeze-Out.

We are sorry to have to report a very disastrous freeze-out with the Georgetown Floral Co., of Georgetown. This is a new concern, which took over the business of the Floral View Greenhouses and built a new plant last summer. It was considered one of the most up-to-date greenhouse plants to be found anywhere. During the night of February 15, with the temperature below zero and a stiff wind blowing, one pair of boilers sprung a leak. This left the whole strain on the other pair of boilers. The heavy firing in the endeavor to keep frost out was too much for them and before morning they gave out, leaving the whole plant without steam for some four or five hours, until repairs were made. During this time the temperature fell to about 18 degrees.

D. J. Sinclair, who has been at Preston Sulphur Springs for the past two weeks, has returned home much improved.

D. J.

DAVENPORT, IA.—Mrs. Otto Klingbiel died very suddenly February 16 at Mercy hospital where she had been taken for an operation.

BREITMEYERS' NEW ROSE

TO BE DISSEMINATED APRIL 1, 1904

COLOR—Prevailing color a beautiful shell pink, shading in the center to a soft rose pink. The reverse of the outer petal is of a creamy, flesh tint, shading to silvery toward the base, which may best be described as opalescent. The full open flower discloses a vivid richness of coloring, rare and fascinating. FRAGRANCE—Subtle, strongly tea-scented; reminds one of old Bon Silene. FORM—Large cup-shaped, heavy petal, shell-like in formation. GROWTH—Strong and healthy, with a rich, glossy foliage, rampant and vigorous, with a strong tendency to long shoots; very prolific. ALL ORDERS BOOKED FILLED IN ROTATION, BEGINNING APRIL 1.

GREENHOUSES,
HINSDALE, ILL.

Office and Store, 76 Wabash Avenue, CHICAGO.

RICHMOND, IND.

The firm of Chessman & Schepman was visited by a disastrous fire on Sunday night, February 21. They had a range of nine houses and of these seven were practically destroyed and the contents ruined. The loss is estimated at $7,000 and there was but $1,000 insurance. The proprietors are hard working, conscientious men and popular in the trade. They have the sympathy of everyone in the setback they have suffered.

The Richmond Florists' Club met in regular monthly meeting at the greenhouses of E. T. Grave, with a goodly number present, President George R. Gause in the chair. In the absence of Mr. Schepman, who had been appointed to prepare the paper, the secretary read the paper, the subject being "Heat and Heating Systems," a subject near and dear to the heart of every florist. The paper brought out a full and free discussion by the growers. Refreshments were provided by the hosts of the evening. Mr. Schepman appointed Vernon D. Grave to prepare the paper for the March meeting, to be held at the ventilator works of John A. Evans.

L. H. Schepman is the proud father of a baby girl, born February 16.

DUNNVILLE, ONT.

L. H. Weaver is not a large grower of carnations but is doing a nice business and adding to his plant every year. He has a carnation house 20x85 feet, with glass ends and side and grows first-class stock. Last year he averaged 61 cents per plant all through the house. Lawsons are extra and money makers but Joost is a close second; he has them of remarkable size. He tried a few Lorna but is disappointed with them; they are sprawly and did poorly until January; now they are giving some very good blooms, but the variety will be discarded. Harry Fenn is good but the flowers burst badly. White Cloud and Morning Glory are always good and pay well here. Estelle is short in stem and will be discarded for Crane, which is nearly as large a flower on a better stem.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Business the past week has been all that could be desired, with a great deal of funeral work. White flowers are in demand. We are having some real winter weather here at present.

Jos. Coenen & Co. have a bench of Lawson carnations in fine shape that would be hard to beat anywhere.

Jacob Schulz's carnation houses are in fine shape. His Enchantress is the wonder of everybody, having large flowers and good, long stems.

Henry Fuchs will soon move to his new residence, adjoining his greenhouses.

Wm. Mann, out in the southern part of the city, reports trade good.

Nanz & Neuner made a handsome display in their show window on Valentine's day. It was admired by everybody who passed by.

John Bohrmann, of Jos. Coenen & Co., is confined to his bed with a bad cold.

F. Walker & Co. report trade very good for February.

HY. LICHTFELD.

BATAVIA, ILL.—The Williams & Sons Co. is preparing to rebuild its greenhouses and put the plant in modern shape.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—There is a pretty little story going the rounds as to how Daniel Cole put a cage containing a lion cub in his show window to attract attention to his flower store; the cub broke loose and destroyed the lion's share of the contents of the store.

KILLS ALL KINDS OF APHIDES.

DIRECTIONS FOR A HOUSE 100x24 FEET.

50 lbs., $1.50; 100 lbs., $3.00.

Use four to five pounds of TO-BAK-INE FUMIGATING POWDER, equally divided into four or five portions, and placed on fine wire cloth or tin pie plates. Pour a little kerosene around on thin edge of piles and then light; it will burn slowly without blazing. Note the fumes of nicotine. Best to fumigate in moist atmosphere.

NOTE—An ordinary 6-inch POT will hold, heaping full, about a pound of TO-BAK-INE POWDER.

SOME ANNUALS.

I am trying to create some interest in gardening in this town. I intend to distribute flower seeds among the school children. Which two varieties of annuals would be best for continuous blooming and easy culture? J. J. L.

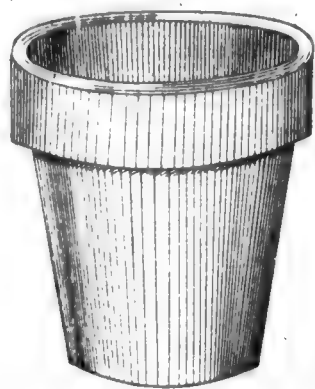

We suppose that the annuals wanted to distribute to the children should be those only that would need no protection of any kind to start in spring, such as asters, ten-week stocks, dianthus, etc., which in our climate are hardly worth sowing unless you have the help of a greenhouse or cold frame. Presuming the above to be the case and that they must be sorts that will thrive and flower where they are sown in the open ground, I would say let mignonette be one, and it is difficult to choose the other where there is such a field to choose from. Let sweet peas be the other, because industry, care and attention would be rewarded by superior flowers and that might bring about harmless rivalry and that is what would tend to create a love of flowers and gardening. W. S.

WINDOW GLASS SITUATION.

The labor organizations of the window glass workers have recently issued quite an elaborate plan for consolidating the two rival unions and compelling all manufacturers to join the window glass and selling agency. If this movement is successful, it is obvious that higher wages will be paid, higher prices obtained, and a stable market enjoyed once again. In the meantime, however, the stern law of supply and demand is controlling the market and as the production is limited, and there is more than a fair chance that the workers will be successful in their efforts to consolidate, it would seem that glass at present prices is cheap.—Patton's Monthly.

We are sold out of asparagus seed and will have to return orders unfilled. The REVIEW does the business.—WONSETLER GREENHOUSES, Bryan, O.

WAYSIDE JOTTINGS.

The craft at Titusville, Pa., complain of a hard winter, which, with the recent flood, has dampened their spirits somewhat. W. Bay says it was pump, pump or be drowned. Thos. Murdock, says it was fire up or be frozen up. L. J. Rowe is the latest addition to the ranks and says there is more money in tapping oil wells.

W. M. Lott, of Warren, Pa., has returned to his former love and can be found in a snug store downtown. Will was compelled to give up the greenhouses, owing to expiration of lease, and is looking for a desirable location for a new plant. Dan Offerle has built a handsome store with residence above. The store is 26x50 feet and is thoroughly up-to-date in every respect. The old office is still standing, a striking illustration of the rapid strides made in our profession during the past decade.

Mrs. F. H. Johnson, of Olean, N. Y., is the proud possessor of the only orchids in town just now. Cattleya labiata and Cœlogyne cristata are in bloom and attract much attention. Llewellyn had the misfortune recently to lose one house of roses in some unexplained way. D. R. Herron has had excellent carnations, but fewer in number than usual.

W. C. Rockwell, of Bradford, Pa., will be missed from the convention at Detroit. He is rusticated in Florida hunting 'gators.

Walker & McLean, of Youngstown, O., are giving up foliage plants for flowering stock. Space is too valuable unless a specialty is made, when doubtless well-grown stock such as is produced here will always find a steady sale. Carnations have not done so well as usual. Enchantress has proven as profitable as any, not excepting Lawson, which is as profitable as ever. Queen Louise is the best all-around white. While it splits badly the flower can be used in design work and its free flowering qualities overcome this defect. Boston Market is considered a profitable white and will be grown more extensively another season.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a monograph entitled "Beautifying the Home Grounds," by L. C. Corbett, horticulturist in the Bureau of Plant Industry. It is a pamphlet of twenty-four pages, which would make business for any florist if placed in the hands of his customers. Copies may be obtained by writing the department for Farmers' Bulletin No. 185.

SPECIAL DISCOUNT ALLOWED ON ALL

ORDERS RECEIVED DURING FEBRUARY

IF YOU want a boiler for next season we will book your order now, build the boiler and have it ready for you when you want it. You need not pay for boiler until it is delivered.

These Boilers are made of STEEL PLATE, therefore will not cause trouble and expense on account of cracking of sections, repacking, etc., which happens so frequently with cast iron boilers.

Great Fuel Saver

GALENA, ILL., Jan. 28, 1902.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.:—The boiler I bought of you is giving perfect satisfaction. When the thermometer stood at 30 below zero this morning I could hold the temperature at 60 very easily with a saving of at least 25 per cent of coal. It is without a doubt the finest hot water boiler in the land, as it will heat about double the amount of glass that other boilers do with the same amount of coal. It has proved so satisfactory that I must express my feelings.

B. F. VANDERVATE.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1, 1903.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.:—The two No. 4 boilers you installed in my greenhouses at Hartland, Wis., did very satisfactory work last winter. I had been using cast iron boilers previously, but threw them out to put in your steel boilers. Your boilers have done better than I had expected; they require less coal, and much less attention than did the cast iron boilers. I estimate the saving in coal with your boilers was about 15 per cent. To anyone desiring a perfect greenhouse boiler, I would certainly recommend yours.

JAMES A. KIRK.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 27, 1903.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.:—We wish to tell you how much we are pleased with your boiler we put in last fall. It replaced two cast iron boilers, has done the work very much better, requires much less attention, and besides as near as we can judge, will use about 20 per cent less coal than we have been using. This coal item is not compared with only one season, but with at least 20 years' experience with several different kinds of cast iron boilers. We are more than satisfied and have taken pleasure in showing and recommending your boiler to a number of growers.

Novelties in Carnations.

We desire to call particular attention to the following novelties, each of which the most critical growers agree is a great advance over older varieties of the same color:

FLAMINGO. Finest brilliant scarlet yet introduced. Large flower, grand stem, early and continuous-bloomer.

MRS. M. A. PATTEN. Finest variegated, will supersede Bratt, which it will out-bloom two to one. Better in stem and more pleasing variegation.

WHITE LAWSON. True sport of Lawson and like it in every respect except that it is pure white.

DAHEIM. Extra fine crimson variety, fully as large as Lawson. Grand stem, brilliant color, ideal habit, early bloomer. Will supersede other crimsons.

Price of above Big Four, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. There is sure to be a large demand; orders filled in rotation; it will pay you to book orders without delay.

F. R. PIERSON CO., Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y.

Adiantum Croweanum.

The new introduction in the Maldenhair Fern family.

Will be ready to distribute among the trade about July 1st, 1904: Out of 3-inch pots.

Write for prices and place your order in time.

THE TWO BEST COMMERCIAL WHITE CARNATIONS:

Lady Bountiful.

THE BEST OF ALL WHITE CARNATIONS.

It is clean and healthy. It has a strong, robust growth, but produces no surplus grass. It is early flowering and the best producer throughout the entire season. Its keeping and shipping qualities are far superior to any other white carnation. If you grow Lady Bountiful you have a white carnation where every flower is a flower with a stiff, wiry stem, a perfect calyx and no splits. It does well in either a medium or heavy soil. You cannot miss it by placing your order now before all the early stock is sold. We have, up to date, booked more orders for Lady Bountiful than the whole season's sales of any new carnation we have yet introduced. ——— IT IS A WINNER. ———

The Belle

Is an excellent companion to Lady Bountiful, with equally good points to make it a favorite paying variety with all growers. Our large stock and easy propagation still enables us to offer March delivery.

Price for well rooted cuttings, $12 per 100; $100 per 1000

UNCLE JOHN

The finest light pink rose yet introduced. Beautiful in color, free bloomer, best money maker. A sport of Golden Gate, with all its merits, but the bud opens like Bride or Maid. Strong 2½-in. plants, $20 per 100; $150 per 1000.

CHATENAY

far out-blooms Bridesmaid with us; better crops, better quality, more money. It has been the most profitable variety we have grown in quantity this season. Strong 2½-inch plants, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

THE DETROIT CONVENTION.

The American Carnation Society Holds a Successful Meeting and Splendid Exhibition.

President, James Hartshorne, Joliet, Ill.;

Vice-President, Wm. Gammage, London, Ont.;

Secretary, A. M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa.;

Treasurer, Fred. Dorner, Jr., Lafayette, Ind.

NEXT MEETING AT CHICAGO.

Detroit did herself proud this week. There is an old superstition that thirteen is not a number of happy augury, but the fallacy of the belief was never more fully disproved than by the successful culmination of the thirteenth annual meeting of the American Carnation Society, a success which was in part due to the large attendance and wonderful exhibition of masterpieces of the growers' art, but in no less measure to the hard preparatory work by the officers and members of the Detroit Florists' Club. To J. F. Sullivan, for his management of the exhibition, a large measure of praise is due.

The attendance was large and representative, although certain of the principal cities were not on hand as usual and some of the familiar faces were missing. There was a large representation of the smaller growers and most of the better known workers in the field were present, but Peter Fisher was missed, and the man who made his Mark-you-see was not in evidence. Doubtless he was too busy taking cuttings of Flamingo. But there were enough of the wheel horses and the younger, progressive element present, with their blooms, to give the cause of the carnation such an uplift as it has never known before.

An idea of the extent of the exhibition may be gained from the statement that in several of the classes as many as 800 blooms were staged. Several exhibitors brought from 1,500 to 4,000 blooms, one of them having twenty-seven boxes and another nearly as many. It was a great task to stage so large a quantity of stock, but the work was accomplished without disorder, due to the careful preparations of the secretary, the manager and the Detroit club. It looked as though the fate of having a large number of exhibits barred by the time limit was to overtake the society again, as the eastern people were delayed five hours by storms and only reached the hall at the very last moment. Many willing hands made short work of getting their stock into place.

Harmonia hall is a big affair, but it was not large enough. It accommodated the exhibits and the society very nicely, but the public was admitted by card during certain hours and then the place was crowded to the last inch and utter demoralization of many a fine exhibit. And it was a show worthy of the praises heard at every hand. Not alone in quantity was it ahead of all records, but quality was there. Better stock was never shown; it seems, almost, that the pinnacle has been reached. What more could we ask? Certainly it looks as though much of the improvement to come in our carnations must be along the lines of productiveness, fragrance, keeping quality, etc.

One notable feature of the show was the uniform high standard of the exhibits; true there were some poor vases, but

Smyth, Hauswirth and Lange putting in a busy morning, and the stock they handled showed the benefit. Occasionally there is a grower who can stage his own stock to best advantage, but he is a rare bird. While it was a carnation show, and a trade exhibition at that, yet there were enough exhibits in other lines to give a touch of variety. Three new roses were shown, and one not so new, also some old favorites so well done as to excite much comment. There were violets, sweet peas and pot plants, even heating requisites. But the pictures we will publish next week will tell the rest about the exhibits.

The Opening Session.

Judges having been appointed in the morning, the society was called to order for the business session at seven o'clock Tuesday evening, President Rackham introducing Robert Flowerday, president of the Detroit Florists' Club, who made a neat little speech of welcome on behalf of this most active organization. He then introduced Mayor Maybury, whom many present had met before. He is one of the few municipal chief executives whom the trade societies have encountered who never makes a slip. An ora-a perusal of the awards will show that no one grower monopolized the show; in fact competition was so keen that in one case one set of judges reversed the action of another when called upon to pass upon the same class. One item worthy of note is that the growers who had the forethought to arrange for capable assistance profited largely thereby. Get the retail men to put up the stock. Several of the Chicago retailers arranged vases for their friends, Samuelson, tor of attainments, he extends the glad hand of a cordial welcome in words well chosen and with phrases which show that he knows whereof he speaks. He was at his best this night and was listened to with evident appreciation. William Scott, of Buffalo, was called on to respond and received a round of applause which put him on his mettle.

President Rackham then delivered his annual address, which was as follows:

President Rackham's Address.

Were I a believer in signs or omens, I should be fearful of the success of this meeting, for it is the thirteenth convention of our beloved society; but I cannot doubt when I look at this large body of enthusiastic carnation growers present, but that this will be the blue ribbon meeting of the society, and I ask you as a personal favor to myself and the local club, to help make it so by attending the business meetings and taking part in any matters of interest to the society, for all meetings of any organization are dependent upon the help or the lack of interest of its members for their success or failure, and it is for you to make this meeting one of profit and benefit to each and every member of this society, if you will.

We are gathered together for the purpose of considering matters of interest be located in different sections of the country. Now, I believe if that was a good object then, it is one at present, and I think no variety should be eligible for either a certificate or registration which has not been shown at least three times during the season, say October, January and April, for two years before such a committee, but as we are to have a paper on this subject I will leave the matter in your hands, with another quotation from the same source, but by the committee on awards, composed of John Westcott, Robert Kift and H. H. Battles. "We are confident that the time is not far distant when the American Carnation Society will endorse certain new varieties. This once done the buyer need have no doubts about the merits of that variety," and I venture to say were that done in some honest and satisfactory way that our membership

I am glad to say is being done to some extent, but not as largely as it should be.

In the matter of registration and certifying of new varieties, I find that of twenty varieties registered in 1897 and 1898, there is not one now under cultivation, and of twelve that received preliminary certificates and certificates of merit, there are but two, namely, Lawson and G. H. Crane now grown, and in 1900 the list comprising those that received the three-year certificates twelve, of which only two are grown, namely, Estelle and Prosperity, and in another year they will be classed among the has-beens, while the registered ones number twenty-nine, and but one, Queen Louise, is grown, and in 1901 we find thirty-six varieties registered with but eight that are considered worth growing. In 1902 and 1903 we have thirty-two registered, with but nine that are thought good enough for sale. The list of names of varieties, February 1, 1899, only four years ago, gives the grand total at that time of 726, and it would seem to me that if worthless varieties are all registered and given certificates of merit, that in the near future it will tax the brain of originators of really meritorious varieties to find suitable names for the products of their skill.

From an educational point of view one who has not had the opportunity and pleasure of reading the proceedings of the twelve meetings which this society has held can have no conception of the work of the society in the past. Papers have been read and discussions had upon every subject in connection with the carnation, and such results have been obtained through the study and experience of the workers of this body that we can truthfully say it pays to be members of the American Carnation Society, for in the minutes of the first meeting, 1892, I find this paragraph: "First-class blooms will readily sell for 75 cents to $1 per hundred for blooms at any time, and during seasons of particular demand $2.50 to $3 is frequently obtained." Note the difference. At the present time first-class flowers readily sell for $2.50 to $3 per 100 and during seasons of particular demand from $6 to $12 is frequently obtained. This change has been brought about through the introduction of better varieties, through better methods of growing gained by study and interchange of experience, through the making of the carnation more popular by exhibitions throughout the country and especially those of the American Carnation Society.

But we still have a great work to do, and one of the most important I believe is to produce and popularize the carnation as a pot plant, for what could be more beautiful than a short, stocky carnation plant with from twenty-five to fifty open flowers of the shade of Flamingo or Enchantress for Christmas, that in an 8-inch pot would retail from $2 to $5! Our growers of new varieties will do well to give a portion of their time and skill to the finding of a variety that will produce such a plant.

Mr. Edwin Lonsdale, in his address to the society at New York on November 4, 1891, says: "The cultivation of the carnation as a pot plant is sadly neglected. To inaugurate a successful carnation exhibition, we must have well-grown specimen plants." Again Mr. Thomas Cartledge, of Philadelphia, at Pittsburg, February, 1893, in a paper to the members of this body, financial, educational and social.

In a financial sense, the introducers of new varieties have come to exhibit the results of their patience and skill for your approval, and to sell as many rooted cuttings as possible. The growers have come to inspect, find fault with, compare, criticize, and buy as many as they feel they can afford to risk trying. And right here I wish to quote from the minutes of the first meeting of the society in Philadelphia, 1891 and 1892, one of the paragraphs in the report of the committee composed of Edwin Lonsdale, Wm. Swayne, C. W. Ward, C. J. Pennock and Wm. Scott, upon the subjects of the society, namely: To submit all new varieties to a test committee of practical and successful growers to would be increased 100 per cent within two years, for it is not the distributor who buys, 20,000, 30,000 and 40,000 lots of new carnations who suffers by the failure of success of the variety, but the one who buys 100, 250 or 1,000 of them from the distributor.

To me the matter seems a serious one and very difficult of solution, but I will again quote from the proceedings of the society. Ex-president Nicholson, in his address at Philadelphia, says: "There is one thing that I think we ought to encourage as much as we can. People who have seedlings of merit and are thinking of disseminating them should send a few plants to prominent growers in the different parts of the country for trial, then people could see them growing without so great an expense." This entitled "A Retailer's Views," in the division of subjects makes one of "Good pot plants for spring sales." "These have been totally neglected, almost forgotten in the rush to grow cut flowers. We used to grow plants well in 4 and 5-inch pots, and they always sold. Do not remember any plant that was more attractive or sold better."

The season that is past has been a hard one for the grower from various causes, but Hope, that beacon light, leads us on to look for better in the future. And when we have secured Fiancee, Flamingo, Reliance, The Belle, Lady Bountiful, Indianapolis and Albatross, and several other "best" commercial carnations, the life of the carnation grower will no doubt be one of joy and a continued round of pleasure.

And now to come from labor to refreshment and consider our meeting socially. It is a well known fact that all work and no play becomes monotonous and tiresome, and we in the business know that times of play are few and far between, so let us improve the present in greeting old friends and making new ones; let us be free with one another and gather round the festal board, showing the sunny side of our natures in relaxation from the cares and worry of the daily grind. Let us forget for a portion of the time, at least, stem-rot, aphids, thrips and all kindred pests and troubles.

In conclusion I wish to remind the society that it is now without by-laws (except those adopted by the directors at Milwaukee regarding exhibits) and I cannot see how our secretary can register new varieties, collect a fee for so doing, etc. As we are a new society, old things have passed away, and we are an incorporated body, working under a new constitution.

Thanking you for your attention and forbearance, I hope that you may all have a good time and feel well repaid for coming to the meeting at Detroit.

The address was referred to a committee consisting of E. H. Cushman, William Scott and J. S. Wilson, who were instructed to report on the recommendations therein.

Secretary Albert M. Herr was called upon for his annual report, which was as follows:

Secretary's Report.

Your secretary reports having issued the proceedings of the Brooklyn meeting after considerable delay, caused by our stenographer getting sick and losing part of his manuscript. He also reports that aside from the few years that Mr. Wallace kindly did this work, there always has been trouble and that imperfect reports of the proceedings were a result. It has been impossible to get a stenographer who was acquainted with our floral terms and, being a new one each year, the names of speakers were hopelessly confused. Therefore your secretary strongly recommends the appointment of a permanent stenographer on the same lines as the one employed by the S. A. F. The reports of our meetings are a permanent and valuable contribution to carnation literature and should not be made subsidiary to any other part of the work.

There were two meetings held by the board of directors, the first in Detroit, May 6, 1903, at which the preliminary premium list was adopted and afterwards printed and sent to all the members. A second meeting was held in Milwaukee, August 18, 1903, at which papers were selected, writers assigned for the same and some additions made to the premium list. The minutes of these meetings are here and can be read if desired; they will, of course, appear in full in our annual report. The regular premium list was mailed to all members early in February, purposely a bit late, so that the matter of entries, etc., would not be set aside and forgotten, and a final postal card reminder was sent February 22.

An attempt was made to get reports from the various shows giving the merits and defects of the carnations shown throughout the country, so that a summary could be made covering the whole season. Your secretary wrote to members of the society in various sections where such shows were being held, also to the different secretaries of the clubs holding such shows. Some fifty letters were written and the responses secured numbered three, one by your president, one by W. N. Rudd and one by your secretary, so that this seems to be a matter of "love's labor lost" and we are left to rely on the trade papers for our information.

The matter of advertising in the premium list, which is a very necessary source of income to the society, is not quite up to the mark this season, in spite of the fact that strenuous efforts were made to increase this feature. In addition to the regular notice to the members over 100 personal letters were written to advertisers of our and kindred products.

There should be some method adopted whereby the society would have a larger and more permanent income than that committee on McKinley memorial fund and the committee was continued.

W. N. Rudd was then introduced and read his paper on "Exhibition Management," which appears in full in this issue. It was very favorably received. J. F. Sullivan was called upon to open the discussion which followed. Still leg-weary and no doubt temper-ried by the labors of the day, he endorsed Mr. Rudd's remarks in full, adding a few words as to the trials of an exhibition manager. He called particular attention to the exhibitor who brings a great amount of stock and insufficient help to stage it properly in the time allowed. Other speakers were C. W. Ward, E. H. Cushman, Lewis Ulrich and William Scott.

The judges' report was then presented. The following awards were made:

Eclipse. Hill, Weber & Sons and Bassett & Washburn showed Lawson and Thompson showed Nelson Fisher.

Scott shade of pink, 100, C. W. Ward, first, with Ethel Ward; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, second, with No. 4. The Chicago Carnation Co., the Thompson Co. and Swan Peterson, of Gibson City, Ill., each showed Mrs. Nelson.

Scarlet, 100, R. Witterstaetter, first, with The Cardinal; Bassett & Washburn, second, with Adonis. Hill and Thompson showed Adonis and J. A. Suydam, Amaze.

Crimson, 100, C. W. Ward, first, on The President; Chicago Carnation Co., second, on Harlowarden.

Yellow variegated, 100, Chicago Carnation Co., first, with Dorothy Whitney; Bassett & Washburn, second, with Gold Nugget.

White variegated, 100, C. W. Ward, first, with Judge Hinsdale; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, second, on No. 8. The Thompson Co. showed Mrs. M. A. Patten and the Chicago Carnation Co., Marshall Field.

"Any other color," 100, Chicago Carnation Co., first, with Prosperity; Thompson Co., second, also with Prosperity.

White, 50 blooms, Breitmeyer's Sons, first, on Gov. Lowndes; E. G. Hill Co., second, on Gov. Wolcott. The Thompson Co. showed Wolcott, Vesey staged White Cloud and the Chicago Carnation Co., Gov. Lowndes.

Daybreak pink, 50 blooms, Chicago Carnation Co., first, with Enchantress; Breitmeyer's Sons, second, also with Enchantress. The Thompson Co. and W. K. Partridge also staged Enchantress.

Lawson shade of pink, 50, Vesey, first and Chicago Carnation Co., second, each on Mrs. Lawson. Breitmeyer's Sons also staged Lawson.

Scott shade of pink, 50, H. Weber & Sons, first, with Genevieve Lord; Breitmeyer's Sons, second, with Cressbrook. The Thompson Co. and E. G. Hill staged Mrs. Nelson.

Scarlet, 50, R. Witterstaetter, first, with Adonis; H. Weber & Sons, second, also with Adonis. The Chicago Carnation Co. staged Adonis. Dorner & Sons Co., Apollo, and Thompson Co., Estelle.

Crimson, 50, Breitmeyer's Sons, first, and Weber & Sons, second, each with Harlowarden. The Chicago Carnation Co. also staged Harlowarden.

Yellow variegated, 50, Dorner & Sons, first, on Dorothy Whitney.

White variegated, 50, Dorner & Sons, first, on Stella.

"Any other color," 50, Chicago Carnation Co., first, and C. H. Kunzmann, Louisville, second, each on Prosperity. Bassett & Washburn and E. G. Hill also staged Prosperity.

White, 25 blooms, H. Weber & Sons, first, on Norway; Thompson Co., second, on Wolcott.

Scarlet, 25, Weber & Sons, first, on Estelle; Thompson Co., also on Estelle.

"Any other color," 25, Chicago Carnation Co., first on Prosperity.

The judges on special classes were W. N. Rudd, E. H. Cushman and Lewis Ulrich.

Collection of not less than ten or more than fifteen varieties, 50 to 100 blooms each, Chicago Carnation Co., first; Thompson Co., second.

Silver cup for best 200 blooms, to E. G. Hill Co., won on Adonis. Other exhibits were Lawson, by Bassett & Washburn; Harlowarden, by the Chicago Car-derived from its limited membership and advertising. Our membership is constantly changing, and while we are adding a few each year over what we lose, we are hardly gaining enough to meet the increased demands upon our income.

The carnation is forging ahead very fast and we need to give work and serious thought to our society so that it keeps up the same rate of increase. Respectfully submitted.

ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

Fred Dorner, Jr., treasurer, reported receipts for the year as $955.41 and disbursements $766.26. The permanent fund now contains $1,910.21.

The Constitution.

The matter of the constitution adopted provisionally one year ago was brought up by President Rackham and after a brief discussion the document, as previously published, was adopted, on motion of E. G. Hill, seconded by William Scott.

The Judges' Report.

The judges in the regular classes A, B and C, were Frank Holznagle, of Detroit; George Bayer, of Toledo, and John Hartje, of Indianapolis. Their report was:

White, 100 blooms, Chicago Carnation Co., first, with Alba; F. Dorner & Sons Co., second, with Lady Bountiful. Other exhibits were Wolcott, by Thompson; Gov. Lowndes, by Hill; Alarm, by J. A. Suydam; Wolcott, by Bassett & Washburn; White Cloud, by W. J. & M. S. Vesey, and F. Burki by John Murchie.

Daybreak shade of pink, 100, W. K. Partridge, first, with Enchantress; C. W. Ward, second, also with Enchantress. The Thompson Co. also showed Enchantress and Bassett & Washburn, Morning Glory.

Lawson shade of pink, 100, Chicago Carnation Co., first, with Mrs. Lawson; F. Dorner & Sons Co., second, with nation Co.; Mrs. Patten, by the Thompson Co.

Collection single blooms, Dorner & Sons, first; Weber & Sons, second.

Best 100 Harlowarden, Weber & Sons.

Best 12 blooms of undisseminated seedling, premium divided between R. Witterstaetter on No. 1000 A, pink, and Dailledouze Bros., on No. 144, white.

Silver cup for best Michigan seedling, to J. A. Frueh for No. 115.

Lawson gold medal, to Chicago Carnation Co., on Fiancee.

Lawson silver medal, to H. Weber & Sons, on Gov. Lowndes.

Lawson bronze medal to E. G. Hill on Adonis.

S. A. F. silver medal to R. Witterstaetter on The Cardinal.

Sweepstakes for vases in the classes for 100 blooms, to Bassett & Washburn, on Mrs. Lawson.

Sweepstakes for vases in classes for 50 blooms to Breitmeyer's Sons on Gov. Lowndes.

The judges on seedlings for certificates were E. H. Beard, P. J. Hauswirth and Wm. Nicholson. The varieties scored were as follows:

For preliminary certificate C. W. Ward's No. 303 scored 92 points.

For certificates Richmond Gem, shown by the B. K. & B. Floral Co., scored 85; Alarm, by J. A. Suydam, 82; Fred Burki, by John Murchie, 88; Yorkston, by J. E. Krayner, 70; Lieut. Peary, by C. W. Ward, 85; J. E. Haines, by J. E. Haines, 87; No. 77, by Haines, 69; Cardinal, by R. Witterstaetter, 88; New Daybreak, by Weber & Sons, 80; No. 12, white, by Swan Peterson, 70; No. 9, by same exhibitor, 68; No. 8, variegated, by Vesey, 78; No. 4; pink, by same exhibitor, 82; Red Lawson, by W. J. Palmer, 87. The poor condition in which some of the varieties arrived is accountable for some of the low scores. Phyllis and others were not scored at all.

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

There were a number of meritorious exhibits outside those passed on by the judges.

Baur & Smith, of Indianapolis, staged 200 Indianapolis carnations which made a splendid vase. It should have been entered for the silver cup.

Peter Reinberg, Chicago, staged a fine vase of Uncle John rose, which made a very favorable impression, and a vase of Chatenay which was a revelation to the rose growers and retailers. It was arranged by P. J. Hauswirth.

Jas. Taylor, Mt. Clemens, staged a very good vase of Lawson; it should have been entered in the class for 100.

Frank Holznagle showed a vase of Brides and Maids of remarkable quality.

Breitmeyer's Sons showed La Detroit in such shape that it was constantly surrounded by admirers.

Geo. Hopp, of Grand Rapids, had violets, and his new seedling rose.

J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, showed Lorraine begonias, also a large-flowered sport, and a very good strain of Primula obconica.

The F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, had fine flowers of the White Lawson carnation.

Aug. Von Boeselager, Mt. Clemens, showed good Morning Glory and Lawson carnations, fine violets, and superb sweet peas.

Wm. Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., had fine Princess of Wales violets and superb Mont Blanc and Blanche Ferry sweet peas.

H. R. Carlton, Willoughby, O., showed Gov. Herrick, a new violet which looks good.

The MacArthur rose was shown as grown by Heller Bros., New Castle.

The Moorehead steam trap was shown in operation and was watched with much interest.

C. Lund, Wausau, Wis., had a section of bench showing a new wire support on which he has applied for a patent.

There was an exhibit of the To-Bak-Ine products by the Detroit Nicotine Co.

There were a large number of seedling carnations of which no record was obtainable, and there were two large exhibits of carnations arranged for effect in which class no premium was awarded as the judges did not like the effect.

Mackinac.—Ward.

Late arrivals were good blooms of Prosperity and Enchantress from the Park Floral Co., Denver; a nice collection of orchids from Lager & Hurrell and some sample begonias from Clucas & Boddington Co.

Meeting Place and Officers.

Secretary Herr read an invitation from the Massachusetts Horticultural Society to meet in Boston in 1905, also one from the Chicago Florists' Club on behalf of Chicago. Mr. Peirce, of Waltham, spoke enthusiastically for Boston, but it developed that the Boston growers prefer the meeting in 1906, and William Gammage said that Canada wants it that year also. On motion of E. G. Gillett, Chicago was chosen for 1905.

The City Hall is emblazoned with a great electric sign, "Welcome American Carnation Society."

Fred Dorner lost his overcoat, but the watches were safe.

C. W. Skinner was on hand to show the growers how to save the stock in the field.

Some people saw evidences that the high feeding policy is apt to give a fine crop of blasted hopes.

One man brought good stock in a trunk. Partridge had a double header in his vase of Enchantress. Who was it said Adonis wouldn't do?

Wm. Murphy and the Chicago Carnation Co. have secured joint control of Witterstaetter's good scarlet, the Cardinal.

Wednesday was an ideal spring day.

Carnation Daheim.—Pierson.

There was but one nomination for president, James Hartshorne, of Joliet, being named by E. G. Gillett, seconded by Eugene Dailedouze. For vice-president Peter Reinberg and William Gammage were named. Secretary Herr and Treasurer Dorner were, of course, named again. The following directors were placed in nomination: For one year, William Weber; for two years, Eugene Dailedouze; for three years, E. G. Gillett; for four years, J. S. Wilson; for five years, J. F. Wilcox and C. W. Ward.

Various Items.

In judging the vases of one hundred dark pink blooms Messrs. Holznagle, Bayer and Hartje thought Hartshorne's Lawsons the best of six exhibits, but when Messrs. Rudd, Ulrich and Cushman had narrowed the sweepstakes down to the Lawsons they gave the blue ribbon to a vase the other gentlemen had rejected, that of Bassett & Washburn.

C. W. Ward arrived with a broken little finger, the result of a fall on the ice.

Thursday the blizzard blew.

At no previous exhibition has there been so much sleepiness in the exhibits on the second day.

Thursday's Session.

Thursday's session the first business was the election of officers. For vice-president, Peter Reinberg received twenty-five votes and Mr. Gammage twenty-seven. Mr. Ward withdrew as candidate for director and all other officers nominated were elected unanimously.

William Scott was presented to read his paper on "Exhibiting Carnations," which appears in full in another column. H. M. Altick opened the discussion, supporting Mr. Scott's ideas. Mr. Rudd took issue with the recommendations on the basis that the society's test can never be wholly practical and successful. Mr. Ward agreed with Mr. Rudd and related some experiences of the seedling raiser. Mr. Valentine spoke for a test under average condition, but could see no hope of securing it. Mr.

Peirce proved to be the laugh-provoker of the society in his defense of the men whose flowers went to sleep. Mr. Baur and Mr. Hill spoke of the danger in, and impracticability of, the test recommended by Mr. Scott.

E. H. Cushman reported for the committee on the president's address; that part of the recommendations relating to a class for pot plants was adopted.

Mr. Ward introduced the subject of convention date. It developed that the late date tried this year was unpopular for many reasons. Discussion showed that the last Wednesday in January was favored. The matter was left in the hands of the directors.

Mr. Rudd brought up the matter of judges and recommended that three be elected, and one each year hereafter. A committee nominated nine candidates. The election resulted in the choice of W. N. Rudd for three years. Wm. Scott for two years, and Wm. Nicholson for one year. Of 53 votes cast Rudd had 40.

J. A. Valentine, Eugene Dailedouze and E. G. Hill were appointed a committee on affiliation with the Rose Society. Wm. Scott, Wm. Weber and A. F. J. Baur were appointed a committee on final resolutions and reported at the banquet. May 1 was adopted as the date upon which the newly elected officers assume their duties.

The society then adjourned.

The Banquet.

Thursday evening the Detroit Florists' Club banqueted the visitors at Harmonia Hall. Robt. Flowerday presided. Those who responded to toasts were E. G. Hill, Wm. Scott, H. M. Altick, Alex. Wallace, Lewis Ulrich, Wm. Gammage, W. J. Stewart, W. N. Rudd, G. A. Rackham, Philip Breitmeyer and others.

For Friday.

Breitmeyer's Sons have provided a special train to take the society to Mt. Clemens on Friday morning, where they will be entertained with the well-known hospitality of the firm. There will be a large party, as all wish to see La Detroit growing. It is stated that the bookings are large on stock to be sent out April 1.

EXHIBITING CARNATIONS

On Lines Similar to Those of the American Chrysanthemum Society.

BY WILLIAM SCOTT, OF BUFFALO.

Since the time that I was asked, or may be volunteered, to read a paper before this meeting, some change of the subject has been made and, as those changes were made without my consent, it gives me the privilege to wander a little from the text. If I can bring about by any thought or suggestion the increased usefulness of the American Carnation Society, the title of my remarks is of little consequence.

Our society was formed and exists not alone for the benefit of, or usefulness to, those who have new varieties to disseminate, but for every member who grows carnations. Whether large or small growers, they look to this society for its stamp of approval as a guide before investing in any new varieties. Don't think, you gentlemen who are so wonderfully improving every desirable attribute of the carnation, that the writer thinks for a moment that you are getting any more glory and profit out of the society than you deserve. You are most gladly welcome any intending buyers to visit and see for themselves these varieties growing. With large investors in a new variety this is often done, but with the great army of florists this is impossible and they wait for the report of the convention as to what rank a variety took as a prize winner and how many points it scored in the certificate class.

To repeat, with all the careful judgment that the committee brings to bear in scoring points, they having nothing but these few extra selected flowers to guide them, and although many a variety has been awarded a certificate that well deserved it, and its sterling good qualities have made it a bread winner in every section of the country, yet you all know that while this has been the case there have also been sent out with a certificate from this society a good many varieties that had but a short and ignoble career. Money gone into pockets that never deserved it. Still worse, a waste of bench room, time and labor. Granted that the raiser himself is often deceived. A variety may do well with him for three or four years and he honestly believes it is a splendid thing and he would not be patriotic to the trade if he did not let his brother florists participate in the benefits derived by growing his wonderful variety; then in almost every place except the soil and environments in which it was raised from a seedling and first showed its good qualities, it has turned out to be a miserable failure and a pecuniary loss to many a man who felt the loss.

We shall hear from Robert Craig as to his views on the early collapse of many most promising varieties; that is something entirely outside the province of my subject, but it has some bearing not. Without you our society could not exist and the annual exhibition of the new varieties is the grand feature and attraction that brings members from long distances to attend the meetings.

I have nothing to criticise of what our society has done, or its methods of accomplishment. The exhibition of and premiums given for standard varieties is a good feature, for it teaches growers that some one can do an old variety in fine shape, but it is to make acquaintance with new varieties that brings us together for these most enjoyable meetings, and that is by far the most important feature of our annual convention. The committee that is annually appointed to award certificates to these new varieties do their work, to my knowledge, most conscientiously and exercise all the care and caution that they can, but only in rare instances do they know anything of the new aspirants to fame, except by the few flowers that are on exhibition. They do not know how many poor flowers were left at home. It's none of their business to learn whether the plant produced only seven such blooms during the season, or if it produced twenty-five. They are not supposed to know what quality of soil this variety was grown in, unless they happen to be acquainted with the locality and establishment of the raiser. Neither are they acquainted with the temperature that best suits any certain variety.

I will admit that these important points are freely imparted by the raiser to any prospective purchaser, and without doubt any and all those firms sending out new varieties would, and do, in this way, that if a dozen growers in different sections of the country were testing the new varieties before their dissemination this collapse might be discovered before the raiser had a chance to send them out. We know, and so do you all, of instances where a variety, after giving every promise, being shown at our exhibitions until it would have been in large demand, has been withdrawn and not one sent out simply because the owner discovered faults and failings in the variety and believed it would be a disappointment to those who bought it. This is most honest and honorable conduct and cannot be too highly admired and commended. The opportunity to make a few thousand dollars was sacrificed, but the reputation and confidence in the firm was greatly enriched.

We all remember, some fifteen years

tain the best in every class. I am not insinuating for a moment that the disseminators of those chrysanthemums, or of the present-day carnations, are practicing anything but a legitimate and honorable business. As long as they can find customers and a profitable sale for their new varieties, they are justified in advertising and sending them out. It is simply business, and human nature, and will continue till the men who grow to produce cut flowers only realize that, great as the improvement of the carnation has been within the past fifteen years, we cannot expect that each succeeding year there are going to be a dozen varieties sent out that surpass all that have gone before.

To digress a moment. Heredity has as much to do with the improvement of flowers as it has in the improvement in partly true. There is nothing in the ancestry of a Shakespeare, a Burns, a Napoleon or a Lincoln to account for their inspiration and power of intellect. They towered over their ancestors as well as their descendants, as did that one little seed that produced that matchless flower, Mrs. Lawson. Why this is or what governs it we know nothing, but we know it seldom occurs.

Now I think I have said enough against the evil of too many new varieties being introduced that are not improvements over existing varieties, admitting at the same time that as long as purchasers can be found these raisers of new varieties are doing a legitimate business and they will continue to do so just as long as they find it profitable, and admitting also that under our necessary artificial culture of the carnation the best of varieties wear out, for propagation by cuttings is not raising a new individual, it is merely dividing and perpetuating the same old plant. The seedling is the birth of an individual and therefore we look to the man who is a specialist along these lines to give us new varieties that possess health and vigor, as well as the other attributes that make a desirable variety.

I am aware that several firms which had new varieties to send out have sent to a few growers in different parts of the country a dozen or twenty-five plants for them to test in their soil and climate, knowing that if the variety was a success with them that the word of these men as to the qualities of the variety, as well as the inspection by many growers who had an opportunity to see it growing, if favorable, would add largely to its sales. This plan is, in my opinion, just what should be done and practiced to a greater extent and with some recognized system.

To send a bunch of flowers to a meeting of some florists' club, as several firms so kindly sent beautiful flowers to our meeting in Buffalo two weeks ago, is a great treat and affords many men an opportunity to look upon these wonderful flowers who cannot possibly, from some cause or other, attend our national gathering. Don't think for a moment that because they have seen these flowers they will not want to attend these conventions; it will rather, I think, raise enthusiasm and make them anxious to look upon the wonderful display that we have before us today. Withal that is not enough and we learn nothing of the habit, productiveness, faults and failings of the variety that we cannot learn from the few beautiful, perfect flowers that are set before us.

I have often remarked to a brother florist who was dabbling in the seedling business (it is very fascinating), that if he had the good fortune to raise a seedling that proved, under his care, to possess size, color, stem, freedom and other good qualities and it sold well and was profitable, then he should keep on growing it and not trouble himself about sending it out. Keep it and make money from the flowers. The very fact that it did well from the original seedling plant to the time when you had a thousand plants is proof that this seedling of yours was suited with your soil and climate and care. Many florists have done this and I was strongly of the opinion a few years ago, when so many seedlings were offered, that the majority of florists would soon depend on their own seedlings. I think my memory is correct ago, that there were a half dozen or more firms in the country who thought it very necessary for the welfare of the chrysanthemum growers of the land that each should send out its set of new varieties. The set was twelve varieties. We also remember that if there was one real acquisition in each set, it was all we could hope for, and often more than we got. That prolific production died a natural death, not because the chrysanthemum became less popular, but the florists of the country got wiser and learned that no one firm can have the good fortune to raise twelve varieties of great merit in one year. If they had succeeded in producing one variety that surpassed in all desirable qualities any existing flower of its color, they had done well and it would have been more profitable to the average florist had he paid the specialist the price of the whole set for one plant of that real good variety and not have wasted money, time and space on the other, long forgotten and useless eleven.

Nothing as absurd has yet taken place with the carnation, yet if you look through the list of new varieties offered this year it is a pretty long one and the man who wants to grow the best is greatly puzzled to know what to buy, and I think it is the special duty of this society to guide him in his choice to obtain the best in every class. There is, there must be, in nature a constant tendency upward and onward toward improvement. Plants and animals on the earth without man's interference are here by natural selection. Plants and animals that man has influenced, our economic and garden plants and our domestic animals, are here by artificial selection. But this improvement does not occur with every individual and perhaps with the case of florists' flowers not one in 10,000. You carnation specialists know that you may raise 10,000 seedlings, all from parents of great excellence. Every seedling has an equal chance, yet many will revert away back to a remote progenitor, a single-petaled dianthus. Ten per cent may be equal in size and color to their immediate parent and perhaps one in 1,000 may be superior in some quality to either parent, and different in another, and if you get one in 10,000 that surpasses the parents in all good qualities, you are lucky. You have advanced the flower slowly and at a cost of time and money, yet slightly you have lifted the flower upwards.

The advent of a wonderful flower, let it be the Lawson carnation or Catherine Mermet rose, is like the sudden appearance of genius among men. "Like begets like" is a trite old saying, but only when I state that Daybreak, which marked an epoch in the history of carnation culture, quite as much as Lawson did, three or four years ago, was sold by the raisers for the enormous sum of $300. It seems to me that if the firm that raised it had kept it for three or four years and grown an acre of it, they would have realized 100 times as much from the blooms as they did by selling it.

Now let me propose that this society select or designate ten or twelve florists in different parts of the country; naturally they would be in the neighborhood of our large cities or in localities where carnations were extensively grown. They should be men who are widely known to be good, careful cultivators, having the facilities as well as the skill to thoroughly test and demonstrate the value and merits of any variety put under their care. They should not be men or firms that are interested in the distribution of their own seedlings. That is evident, for human nature is still human nature and a man who had a scarlet variety which he was putting on the market would hardly feel that it was his duty to grow and boost some other fellow's scarlet variety. If he did he would be more saintly and unselfish than anyone who has lived for nearly 2,000 years.

We cannot make this compulsory, either with those who are to give these new varieties a trial in their houses or on the man who intends sending out his new varieties, but I believe there would be no difficulty in finding a good, capable man in every neighborhood glad to grow twenty-five plants of any variety sent to him. There would not be so many. Even supposing there were twenty new varieties offered next year and twenty-five plants of each, it would be only 500 plants. A comparatively small space would be required and surely the flowers cut from these plants would well pay for the bench room. As I believe establishments can be found most willing to give these new varieties a trial, so do I believe that every man who has a seedling he honestly believes in and the large sales of which he is anxious for, will be heartily glad to have it tested in several different sections of this broad land.

With all sincerity, I say that I know no men or firms who intentionally send out a poor variety of carnation. They are in love with their own offspring and if their offspring fails when abroad in the cold world, they erred in their judgment, but meant well. Ten or twelve stations, or I may call them, trial grounds, distributed over the continent, including our neighbors and brethren of the Dominion, would give us many textures of soil as well as varied climatic conditions. I need not enter into that, for you all know in the wide expanse of latitude and longitude from the shores of the Gulf to the wheat fields of Manitoba and the rock ribbed coast of Maine to the mild and salubrious timber lands of Washington, there are lands of dark clouds for months, and others of almost continuous sun; states where the absence of rain makes irrigation necessary and localities where too much rain is feared.

I would have these men who are making these trials report to the secretary of the society by February 1 of each year. If a variety has not shown its good qualities by that time it has no place in the list of winter flowering carnations. On receipt of these reports the secretary of our society should publish them in the trade papers, or, if you think better, have them printed in circular form and mailed to every member of the A. C. S. in good standing and to non-members who applied for the report at $2 per copy. The report from the men giving these new varieties a trial would, of course, tell us the quality of soil, temperature, what style of bench, and other information that would guide us to learn whether our conditions would suit it. The nearest trial ground to our home would naturally be the one we should look to for our most valuable information. Failures would doubtless be reported from some quarters, but if the variety was really worth our buying, it would be sure to have enough favorable reports to ensure its wide distribution. In addition to the report of the grower, a local committee might visit the establishment in December and give a much more valuable report from seeing the plants growing and the flowers they were producing, than is the report of a committee which only sees some selected flowers sent to them. Perhaps this would be the most valuable estimate of the merits of the varieties.

In conclusion, gentlemen, I think the object of this society is to help and benefit every member and what I propose would, I think, go far towards that end. There is, of course, detail to be worked out in the plan, but something along the lines I have endeavored to explain would I think be a blessing to the thousands of men and women who are striving to make an honest penny in the virtuous and gentle art of raising blossoms of the divine flower.

MANAGEMENT OF EXHIBITIONS.

BY WILLIS N. RUDD, MT. GREENWOOD, ILL.

The manager of a horticultural exhibition, especially one intended for the general public, must be prepared to expend all his energies, both of brain and muscle; governed by the amount of money available. Local firms and individuals can generally be induced to subscribe liberally toward the premiums. In order to secure a well balanced exhibit it is advisable to block out the list first and then solicit the prospective donors to assume the payment of various premiums therein, rather than to offer special premiums. It should be borne in mind that the exhibition is held in order to interest the public and the list must be designed to secure a comprehensive and attractive exhibit. After this, and almost of equal importance, the list must be so arranged as to attract the exhibitor.

It is unfortunate, but true, that very few florists can be made to see what an

A final premium list containing rules, dates, location of exhibition, addresses, miscellaneous information and the revised and numbered premiums should be mailed at least two weeks before the exhibition. The premiums should be grouped under the day and date on which they are to be staged and should be numbered consecutively, as "class 1," "class 2," etc. Repeating the same numbers under different divisions or grand classes must be condemned, as it leads to confusion and error. The final list may be arranged to be used as a program for the public but a special program giving the musical numbers for each day, as well as the premiums, is better and can generally be paid for by the advertising privileges in it.

As soon as it is decided to hold an exhibition the press should be notified and short notes, more or less directly bearing on the show, should appear at intervals. About three weeks before the opening day the "strenuous" advertising work should be done. The press should be supplied with photographs and material for reading notices. This work should culminate upon the Sunday before the opening day. If the dates have been so arranged that the exhibition does not immediately precede some event of overshadowing importance, such as a political convention, or—sad to relate—the horse show, with tact and hustle on the part of the advertising committee, the newspapers can be induced to give liberal space. Banners across the street, street car ads, large billboard posters and small posters in shop windows, restaurants, hotels and public places are all good. On the evening before the opening day an effort should be made to induce the reporters and photographers for the morning papers to be present and prepare illustrated write-ups. The afternoon papers upon the opening day will follow with pictures and descriptions of the completed show and the exhibits and a part of the awards. An effort should be made each day to reserve part of the awards to be first published by the morning papers upon the following day.

A press committee should be appointed, some member of which should be present at all times, while the show is open, to talk with and explain the exhibits to the reporters. The best men available should be detailed for this purpose, as the amount of space given in the papers will largely depend on their work. Arrangements should be made for quickly copying and manifolding the awards, which should be sent direct to each paper by a trustworthy messenger.

A first-class press agent will be well worth his hire, but he must be kept in close touch with some one well posted on horticultural subjects, or the information given to the public will be weird and wonderful. The newspaperman or press agent simply cannot spell botanical names.

As soon as the premium list is out the manager should by personal visits and by personal letters begin drumming up exhibits and keep at it until the show opens.

If possible a treasurer should be appointed who will be responsible for the ticket taker and seller and the handling of all money. Small bills, after receiving the O. K. of the manager or proper committeeman, can be paid by the ticket seller, the receipted bill being retained and turned in at night as cash, larger items being, of course, paid by check in the usual way. The professional ticket he must be prepared to crowd two working days into every twenty-four hours; he must be firm and determined, yet good natured and diplomatic; and, above all, he must be able to think and act quickly under unforeseen difficulties, and perhaps amid a storm of abuse.

Given a man with the proper qualifications, there is still, generally, the lack of experience on his part, and inability to secure experienced assistants. It is customary to divide the work of exploiting and holding an exhibition among various committees, and this is an excellent method if the proper men can be placed on the committees, and the proper co-ordination can be secured and the proper amount of enthusiasm developed among them. The manager should, however, be in constant touch with all the committees and have an intimate acquaintance with the work they are doing.

After deciding to hold an exhibition, the first thing to be done is to issue a premium list. A preliminary premium list should be gotten out as early as possible; a year in advance will be none too early. Of course the extent of the list and the size of the premiums will be immense incentive an exhibition is to the buying public. Every exhibition makes new buyers and makes old buyers purchase more frequently and pay higher prices for better goods. Added to the general increase of sales and prices in the local market is the direct advertising value to the grower of a good plant or vase of flowers, or to the store man exhibiting an artistic arrangement. While something can be done in the way of missionary work, it must be admitted that the prizes must be made as large as possible in order to appeal to a large proportion of the growers, and—let me whisper it—a still larger proportion of the store men.

To secure quantity and variety a certain number of premiums for "collections" are necessary, but there are but few growers who can compete in such classes, and the bulk of the premium money should be offered for specific things. When the individual premiums are not so large as might be desired, sweepstakes, open to the winners in several other classes, are attractive. Provision should be made for gratuities to exhibits not coming within the classified list of premiums.

seller and ticket taker are to be shunned. While the writer does not intimate that all are dishonest, he has met among them some of the most finished rascals upon the face of the earth and the non-professional show man is a lamb in their hands.

A convenient form of ticket is that printed in a continuous strip and notched so as to be torn off readily. The tickets are numbered consecutively. Each strip, containing 1,000, is coiled and sealed. The tickets should be obtained from a firm making a specialty of such work and preferably located in another city to avoid leakage in the press-room. The ticket seller should receipt for tickets received in the morning and at night return all unsold tickets, with a written statement of sales and cash to balance. A locked box should be provided for the ticket taker in which to deposit tickets. In closing at night the treasurer should examine and count all tickets in the box and personally see that they are destroyed. Passes and free tickets should be issued by the treasurer, on the written order of the proper persons or committees. The press must be taken care of, members of the society are generally admitted free and exhibitors are entitled to free admission, but the issuance of free tickets should be hedged around with all possible difficulties, as the free list is often responsible for a large part of the almost universal deficits which result from horticultural exhibitions. When receiving cash at night at least two trustworthy persons should remain with the treasurer and accompany him until the funds are put in a safe place.

An incompetent secretary or a poor system can create a deal of trouble and arouse a deal of criticism. The writer prefers what may be called the De La Mare system of exhibition accounting as being simple, speedy and accurate. It consists of an exhibitor's book, a class book, a judge's book, entry cards and envelopes for them, and a set of gummed labels of different colors, "1st premium," "2nd premium," etc., to be attached to the entry cards by the judges as they complete each class.

The exhibitor's book has a large leaf, about cap size. At the top appears the name of one exhibitor and his entry number. In a column at the left appear the numbers of all the classes in which he is entered. This is copied from his entry blank. In the middle space is entered on the line with each class number, after the judges have passed on the class, the premium won; as, "first," "second," etc., and in the right-hand column, which is ruled for dollars and cents, is entered the amount of the prize, so that when all are entered a footing of that column will give the total amount of his winnings.

The class book is similar to the exhibitor's book, except that each page is devoted to one class, and in the left-hand column are written the entry numbers of all persons competing in the class. In the middle column is written the prize won and at the right the amount. The footing of each page will give the total awarded under the class in question, and it is evident that the total footings of the class book and the exhibitor's book must agree, thus making an excellent check. All entries in both books should be made from the exhibitor's entry blank and should be carefully checked over to insure absolute accuracy. It is well to enter the amounts of each premium offered at the head of the page of its class.

The judges' books are smaller and have perforated pages to be used in duplicate by carbon. At the top appears the class number and the total number of entries in the class, and below are written the awards as made, giving both entry number and exhibitor's name. In use, an assistant will remove the envelopes from the exhibition cards and affix the pasters as instructed by the judges. The secretary or a trustworthy assistant who should accompany the judges, having the carbon sheet in position, will write in the awards. Each judge will then in turn take the book, see that the class number is correct and that he has examined the total number of exhibits entered and see that the names and entry numbers of the prize winners are properly entered under the prize won, signing his initials. This method, if properly carried out, gives an almost absolute guarantee against errors and, as this is the most vital part of the bookkeeping, this method should never under any circumstances be varied from. As fast as a class is judged the duplicate sheet may be torn out and sent to the press committee, avoiding vexatious delay to the reporters and assuring them an accurate list, while a complete and certified list of awards remains in the book.

The exhibition cards will have the class number, the name of the class and the exhibitor's number and name. They should be enclosed in an unsealed envelope bearing on the outside nothing but the class number. It is a common mistake to place the entry on the envelope also. This is wrong, as after opening a few envelopes the judges will know the names, and while a knowledge of the exhibitors' names will rarely influence a judge, he much prefers not to know them until the decision is made. These cards will all be made ready in advance and tied in bundles, with each exhibitor's name attached to his bundle. They are delivered to the exhibitor and attached by him to his exhibit. Here, as everywhere, checking, preferably by a judge is much better. One man, realizing that the burden is on him alone, will be much more likely to exercise greater care than if he can shift two-thirds of the blame on his "wicked partners." If possible at least two of the judges should be residents of a distant locality. In close decisions the work of such judges is much better received by the exhibitors than that of local men and charges of favoritism are much less apt to be made.

In general a grower is a better judge of plants and flowers than a retail man, and the store man is a much better judge of artistic arrangements than the grower. It should be borne in mind, however, that, over and above all, the necessary quality in a judge is the judicial temperament. There are many first-class growers having wide knowledge of plants and flowers who are absolutely unfitted to act as judges. Men who have had experience as judges are always to be preferred. Of course a judge's absolute honesty must be beyond question. A committee of ladies selected to judge a limited number of exhibits will often add to the public interest.

All protests should be filed in writing over signature and should state in full the grounds for protest, and should be filed at once. The protest should at once be placed before the proper committee, who will first call in the judges and learn their grounds for making the award, after the grounds of the protest are made known to them. They should be given a chance to rejudge, if they desire, after which the committee may examine the exhibits and confirm or alter the awards as may seem best.

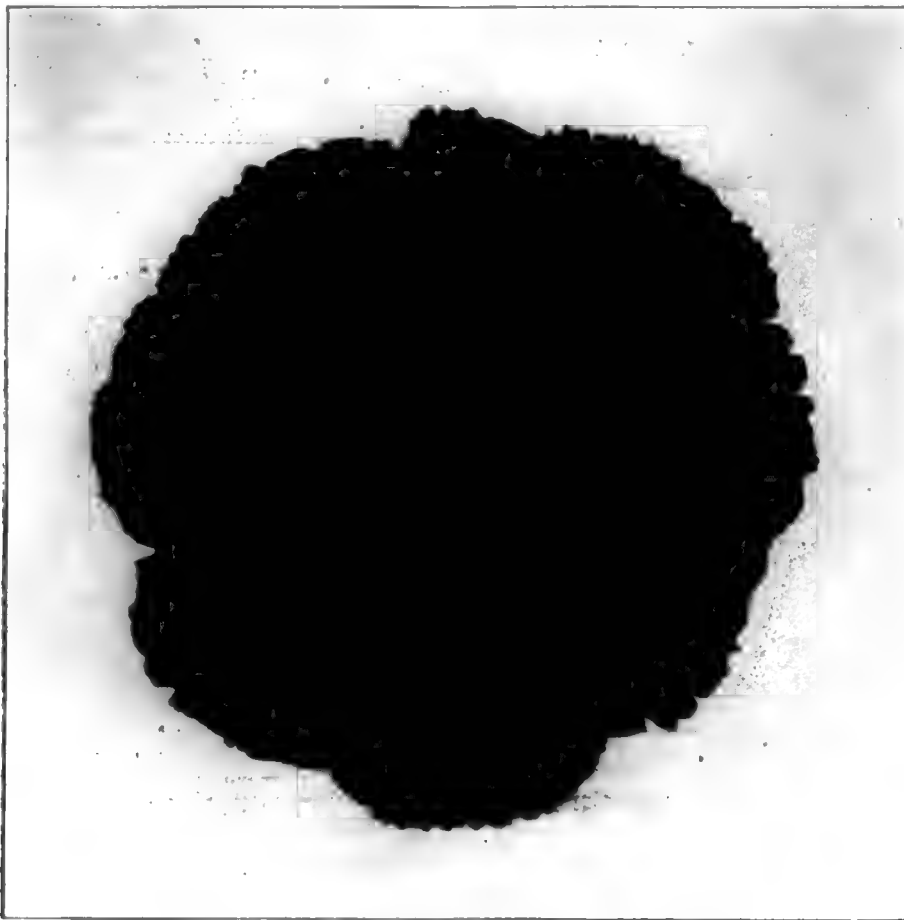

specified number and relentlessly reject any exhibit which, by overplus, or shortage, or in any other way, does not absolutely and literally comply with the rules. It is not fair to the man who faithfully lives up to the rules to allow another who, whether by accident or design, seeks to evade them, to compete with him. Any rule which cannot be enforced must be struck from the list, while those retained must be rigorously enforced. The examining committee will note grounds for rejection on the cards of all exhibits thrown out, and will O. K. the envelopes of all those accepted.

An entry blank should be enclosed with each final premium list, and entry should be made on this by number only. Entries should be closed at a certain time before the classes are to be staged, in order to allow the secretary to get his work in hand and to enable the manager to arrange proper space, tables and vases. A fine should be assessed against every exhibitor failing to stage an exhibit entered, unless it has been declared out, at least by noon the day before the class is to be staged.

Some decorating, more or less elaborate, will be needed in the hall. As there are many florists in nearly all cities who are experts at this work, the writer need not enter into minute details. It should be borne in mind, however, that the decorations are simply a background to set off the flowers and plants, and should be subordinated to that purpose. Flags, bunting, paper flowers, Japanese lanterns, and the like, are in most cases better excluded. Among greens, the wild smilax and evergreen boughs are pre-eminently the thing. Perhaps there is no more effective background for cut flowers, especially chrysanthemums, than the dull-colored autumn foliage of the white oak. The brilliant scarlet and yellow tints of maple foliage are not so good in large masses. Evergreen trees can be used where there is a scarcity of palm groups, and for screens. Spanish moss is effective, but expensive. Corn stalks may often be used to good advantage. Wild smilax may be used to drape tables and twine around cut flower vases, thus relieving what is frequently an ugly blotch in an otherwise beautiful picture. The decoration should be started as early as possible and finished, and debris removed before the exhibits begin to arrive.

The problem of installation is greatly simplified where space is sold, as the hall can be mapped and the exhibitor can be trusted to fill the space he has paid for. With such exhibitions, however, this article does not largely deal. In public exhibitions, where so much depends on the general appearance, this plan cannot be pursued. The writer has learned by dear experience that from the average exhibitor no adequate idea of the extent of his exhibit can be had. He has seen a promised carload of plants dwindle to a small express wagon load and a small group expanded to a moving van full, at the last moment.

The manager must see the plants in hand shortly before the show, by as many exhibitors as possible, and get as complete an idea as possible of the size, quantity and character of them; he must study his hall frequently and carefully in connection with the knowledge he has gained of the exhibits and sketch out a skeleton of the picture he wishes to create, locating his prominent groups. He will then endeavor to induce as many second person, is the order of the day. There must be no mistakes.

After the awards are all made a voucher is to be made for each winner, showing in detail and in total the amounts won, which voucher will go to the treasurer for payment.

Three judges are commonly invited to act, although the writer believes one

The judges, especially in a large exhibition, should not be required to examine exhibits, count blooms, or otherwise be responsible for compliance with the rules. It wastes their time and distracts their attention from their proper work. A properly selected examining committee should precede them. They should count all exhibits requiring a as possible of the dependable exhibitors who have the material and the skill in arranging to meet him at the hall one by one (never two at a time) and endeavor to induce each to accept and fill the space which he, the manager, wishes filled. This requires diplomacy, but can generally be done.

The cut flower tables must then be located, also the space for table decorations, or other large decorative work. These, especially the table decorations, are best located in a separate room, if possible, although there must be a goodly quantity of color in the main hall. The rest must be left until the exhibits arrive and the manager can size them up and place them where the best effect will be produced. In this process the manager must coax and wheedle, brow-beat and bully, perhaps "cuss" a little, and at last possibly demonstrate that he is the czar of all the Russias for this day and date. At this time there must be one "boss" and there must be no appeal from his decisions. He must demonstrate that he is fair but at the same time must make it emphatically known that the whim of no one exhibitor is to be allowed to injure the effect of the display as an artistic whole. Let him explain and argue, if there is time, but if not, let him command and see that his commands are obeyed.

Of course the arrangement of exhibits in classes for judging and their rearrangement before the public is admitted is desirable, but in large exhibitions where the hall rental amounts to many hundreds of dollars per day this cannot be done. Well in advance of the work the necessary men will have been engaged and instructed. Tables, stands, vases, paper, hammers, wire, ladders, water cans and all the other thousand and one requisites will have been provided, placed in convenient location and put in charge of a trustworthy man. From the time the exhibits begin to arrive until the doors are opened to the public the manager must be in the hall. He must be prepared for every conceivable accident, and many that are not conceivable.

A time should be set at which no more exhibits or material shall enter the hall, and he must have a man at the door who will be proof against entreaty, bulldozing or physical force. Another hour should be set at which all must be ready, and he should begin early and notify all at frequent intervals that the rule will be enforced. It is not fair to the public to admit them to a half-staged exhibition after they have paid to see a finished one, and it is not fair to the exhibitor who is on time to have his display stand and possibly suffer to help out the delinquents.

When the first day's exhibit has been installed half the battle is won, but untiring effort and unceasing watchfulness are necessary until the last plant is out of the hall after the show is over. Thefts must be guarded against. The public does not realize the value of the material shown and the stealing of flowers is considered no great crime by many—and, besides the public, there are often others. Each day the water in vases should be changed, withered flowers removed and stems shortened. At crowded times plants and flowers must be protected from injury. Faded or damaged material must be removed or placed in less prominent positions and places made for new, fresh and novel exhibits as they come in.

Sensation.—Ward.

Dismantling the show should never be done at night if it can possibly be avoided. The hall should be closed until the next day and the exhibits removed by daylight. Where necessary to dismantle at night, the public should be made to leave before the work is begun, as a general assault by the public and the wrecking of many exhibits, is apt to occur at this time. Each exhibitor should be required to identify his men, and each should be tagged by a piece of card pinned to his coat and bearing the plainly written name of his employer. A strong guard should be put at the door, no person not properly tagged be allowed to enter, and each employe compelled to keep away from all exhibits except that of his employer. These seem drastic regulations, but their observance will save many valuable plants and much mortification to the manager. In packing vases, tools, etc., it will be advisable to number each box plainly and keep a record of its contents in a book provided for the purpose.

In conclusion, let me say that I devoutly believe there is no town in this broad land where there is a grower of flowers, or a seller of flowers, in which there should not be some kind of a flower show, at least once a year, and I believe there is hardly a town in which one might not be easily held if the florists and growers would display a little, a very little, business horse sense.

BOSTON.

Flower Market Exhibition.

The ninth annual trade exhibition of novelties and standard varieties of older carnations, given under the auspices of the Boston Co-operative Flower Growers' Association, was held on Saturday, February 27, in the wholesale flower market, 163 Columbus avenue, Boston, and was well up to the average in number of exhibits and quality. The new market is a vast improvement over the old Park street one with its dingy, dark and cramped quarters. The light is good and floor space ample.

In the classes for standard varieties H. A. Stevens Co., won for fifty white with fine blooms of Governor Wolcott, Geo. M. Anderson being second with the same variety. In scarlet L. E. Small and D. J. Kerrigan won with J. H. Manley. Crane, Estelle and other scarlets were shown in this class. Enchantress was first for light pink and Fair Maid second; J. W. Foote showing both vases. The fact that Fair Maid beat several entries of Enchantress on this occasion, would show that it is a dangerous rival of that fine variety.

In dark pink all entries were of Lawson, Miss E. Philbrick and L. E. Small being the winners. Harry Fenn monopolized the crimson class. Excellent vases from M. A. Patten and S. J. Goddard were shown, securing first and second. For variegated D. J. Kerrigan took first and second with Prosperity and Bradt. The first named had fine flowers, but lacked strength of stem. Only one vase of yellow was shown, from Backer & Co., a good vase of Eldorado securing first place. For 100 mixed blooms W. Nicholson won with a fine vase. E. M. Wood & Co. had the best vase of twenty-five roses, showing superb American Beauties.

There was a strong entry of violets. Princess of Wales easily led in the single class, W. Sim and W. Spilsbury having the best. In doubles L. Smith and M. Orr won with Campbell. Certificates of merit were awarded to magnificent vases of Mont Blanc and Blanche Ferry sweet peas from Wm. Sim. These in our opinion were the most meritorious exhibits in the show; the strength of stem and size of flower being remarkable.

Seedlings were quite largely shown, a white from Louis Small, of Tewksbury, scored 90 points. This is a well-formed, full flower of a glistening white, stem and calyx A 1. If this is a free bloomer it should prove a winner. A. Roper showed quite a number of seedlings. A fine striped variety, Chester Roper, scored 85 points and will be heard from in the future. His No. 305 and No. 307 were also good. The Rockland Greenhouses showed a few blooms of their striped sport from Mrs. Lawson; had twenty-five blooms been shown, this would undoubtedly have scored high. John Barr had flowers of two whites of large size, his No. 1 being the largest white staged. H. A. Stevens Co. had half a dozen flowers (not staged) of a seedling white (Lawson X Wolcott), a large, full, well-built flower with an ideal stem. The same grower has a sport from Lawson of Enchantress color, which should be a winner. Geo. E. Buxton showed Marion Buxton and S. J. Goddard a fine vase of his new yellow, which showed up well, also a pure pink seedling of Joost color from same pod of seed. W. N. Rudd showed Phyllis, a seedling of color and form of Fair Maid. F. E. White showed a useful commercial white, L. Cousins a rosy pink variety and Geo. O. Beckham, Octavia, a striped variety. Peter Fisher's exhibits were missed on this occasion. It had been hoped he would stage Nelson Fisher and some of his newer seedlings.

The committee of arrangements for the exhibition were W. Nicholson, E. Sutermeister, I. W. Mann and Geo. Cartwright.

The Market.

Between February 8 and February 20 there was a decided improvement in market prices, but the past week has shown a decline all around, the Lenten dullness being now well established. Brides and Maids have brought from $4 to $10 per 100; a few extra fine netting $15. Beauties are becoming a little more plentiful, the best bringing $50 and from that down to $6 for culls. A few Jacqs, Brunners and other hybrids are now appearing and sell well.

In carnations Prosperity has brought as high as $10, but it is not considered a money-maker even at that price. Enchantress $4 to $6, Fair Maid $4, Lawson $3, ordinary grades $1.50 to $2.50.

Violets are abundant. Singles take the lead with prices from 25 cents to 50 cents. Princess of Wales in single and Campbell in double are the popular sorts.

Bulbous stock is decidedly druggy, there being a heavy oversupply of the Yellow Trumpet narcissus. The varieties seen are Von Sion, Princeps, Golden Spur, Horfieldi and Emperor; prices run from $1 to $3 per 100. Tulips are in good supply, but good freesia is getting scarce. Lilies sell at $6 to $8. Valley is in a druggy state, the price being as low as $10 for some, while little sells above $3 per 100. In the way of miscellaneous flowers, English primroses, nasturtiums, myosotis, ixias, wallflowers, pansies, sweet peas—the latter extra fine—and a few anemones are seen.

Orchid flowers are being more and more used by the leading florists. At present Cattleya trianae, Dendrobium Wardianum and nobile, Coelygne cristata and cypripediums are chiefly in evidence.

Various Notes.

The annual carnation show at the flower market brought out, as usual, a large number of growers, many private gardeners as well as florists attending. It is surprising that more novelties from a distance were not received, for Boston is an A 1 market and must have the very best varieties procurable.

Mac Mulkin, on Boylston street, continues to give the retail florists weekly object lessons in window arrangement. His windows are always arranged very tastefully, one color only being used. A few days ago he had a creation in yellow, which was very effective, genistas, tulips, narcissi, primroses, oncidiums, acacias, carnations and roses being chiefly used.

Newtonville Greenhouses are sending some remarkably fine Bride and Bridesmaid roses at present.

Carnation specialists are hoping that the 1905 carnation convention will come to Boston and are willing to subscribe liberally toward securing it. Both the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club have sent invitations and will offer special prizes if the convention comes to the Hub.

At Horticultural Hall on February 27 an illustrated lecture on "Parasitic Fungi," by Dr. G. P. Clinton, New Haven, Conn., attracted a good audience. A lively discussion followed the lecture.

The severe winter has caused an extra heavy consumption of fuel. Florists who bought what they considered a sufficient supply to last until warm weather have had to secure large additional supplies.

The Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club is now in a flourishing condition and adding new members at every meeting. The discussions are of a thoroughly practical and helpful nature. Meetings are now held on the third Tuesday in the month at Horticultural Hall.

W. N. CRAIG.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The pace has slackened perceptibly during the past week. Receipts of stock have increased largely under the influence of moderating temperature and demand has no more than held its own, if it has done so much, and the result has been an accumulation of stock in all departments which weakening prices have had little effect in moving. Good roses still command fair figures, but there are enough of them for all requirements, leaving a very poor market for short and small stock. Carnations are coming in heavily and at prices quoted the quality offers very good value for the money. All the painstaking growers are turning out first-class stock; unfortunately the adjective is still necessary. Everything in the bulbous line is plentiful and the man who will clean up a counter at a cheap price is a welcome buyer. Violets are again being received in enormous quantities, including Hudson river stock. Quality, while not up to the midwinter standard, is far from bad, but the market is very slow indeed. Prices have ranged from 75 cents per 100 down to $2 per 1,000, and one large handler states that it is his opinion that, counting what are not sold at all, the entire receipts of the market for the week will not average 25 cents per 100, but this looks like an extreme statement. Amling gets good Blanche Ferry sweet peas, but says they sell slowly.

Death of Walter Kreitling.

The trade was shocked and saddened on Tuesday to hear of the sudden death of Walter Kreitling, of peritonitis. He had been ill such a few days that few had heard of his absence from business. Mr. Kreitling was one of the most widely known retail florists in the United States. He conducted, with the aid of a sister, recently married, a thriving business at 10 East Van Buren street, and had the patronage of and from such institutions as the Chicago Club and Washington Park Club. But it was by his jovial disposition that he was best known. He was a regular attendant at conventions and club affairs and was always "hail fellow well met" in whatever company. His death takes away a willing hand and a cheerful friend. He was 41 years of age. The funeral will be held on Thursday, at 1 p. m., at the residence, 1517 West Van Buren street; interment at Forest Home.

Various Notes.

Following the Iroquois theater fire the underwriters and city building department have been very active and one of the edicts of the underwriters is that no more wild smilax shall be used in the department store decorations because of its alleged highly inflammable character after it has been up three or four days in a steam heated room.

W. A. Kennedy, of Milwaukee, was in town last week, returning from the east, where he was called by the death of his father. While east he took occasion to visit some of the trade points of interest and says that the thing which impressed him most was the wonderful quality of the Liberty rose as compared with what most western growers get.

The firm of Benthley & Co. was succeeded by the Benthley-Coatsworth Co., incorporated, on March 1. There is no change whatever, save in name.

Joseph Klimmer will try a number of the carnation novelties this season, including 500 lots of Crusader, Flamingo, Lady Bountiful and White Lawson.

Wm. Murphy and Thomas Windram, of Cincinnati, who were in town last week, visited many of the large growers and had nothing but praise for the way the places looked, particularly the carnation houses.

The Bellevue Place Co., at Batavia, is sending the A. L. Randall Co. some very fine stock, including Bride and Bridesmaid roses and Prosperity carnations.

There is considerable unrest among the retailers, particularly on the south side. It is reported that both Mendonza and Spencer, on Forty-third street would engage in other business if they could find customers for their places.

Philip Shoup, a son-in-law of J. A. Budlong, is now in that grower's wholesale store and taking hold like an old hand.

The park gardeners who have been denied an increase in wages have voted to lay their case before the governor of the state.

There are great quantities of Lawson carnations in the market, but it is the most salable variety on the list.

Kennicotts are getting large quantities of fine La Reine tulips from Klehm's.

Nic Kruchten has had very good success ever since he started in business, growing carnations. He has enlarged his place every year and contemplates extensive changes and improvements this spring.

Fred Struvy is planning a trip to San Jose, Cal., his old home, in the early spring.

John Lambros expects to take a trip to West Baden after Easter.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is handling some fine wild smilax from a new shipper in Alabama. They report a good demand.

J. A. Valentine, of Denver, was in town Monday, en route to the Detroit convention.

The strike of the Western Union boys has had little effect in delaying orders. Messages have been telephoned and then the original delivered by mail.

The Convention Party.

The party for the carnation meeting at Detroit left Tuesday afternoon via the Wabash. In the special car were W. J. Smyth, P. J. Hauswirth and wife, W. N. Rudd, N. J. Wietor, Jas. Hartshorne and wife, John Degnan, J. D. Thompson, W. L. Palinsky, Peter Reinberg, L. Coatsworth, Adam Zender, E. L. Kirowsky, P. J. Foley, Leonard Kill, Jas. Jensen, Frank Friedley, E. W. Hunt, H. B. Howard; Swan Peterson, Gibson City, Ill.; T. L. Metcalfe, Hopkinsville, Ky.; J. A. Valentine, Denver; N. Zweifel and wife, Milwaukee, and Christian Lund, Wausau, Wis. Thanks to the forethought of Mr. Hauswirth, who was master of ceremonies, there were plenty of comforts on the car and it was a pleasant trip, though the train was nearly two hours late in getting into Detroit, where James Wilson and George Asmus were found awaiting their townsmen. Coming on later trains were C. L. Washburn, A. Lange and wife, Andrew Benson, Chas. Samuelson, Alois P. Frey, Wm. Kroeschell, John Sinner and Jos. Singler. Mr. and Mrs. Hauswirth returned Wednesday evening to attend the funeral of Walter Kreitling.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business has kept up fairly well, although there is some accumulation at times. Indications are that there will not be too many fancy Beauties for some time to come. The rose market in general is in good shape. Carnations are hardly selling as well. Bulbous stock, reinforced by southern daffodils, are not lively sellers, although a good many bring fair prices. Valley is very fine and plentiful. W. P. Stokes is sending Edward Reid some superb stock. Violets continue of high quality. Orchids can be had with reasonable certainty, especially cattleyas. Gardenias are coming in steadily, with good prospects of their lasting till after Easter. Sweet peas are plentiful. A fair supply of both lilacs and Easter lilies are coming in daily.

Gardenias.

A visitor to Sharon Hill this week would be fully satisfied that Robert Scott & Son had solved the problem of flowering gardenias in midwinter. This firm has been sending Samuel S. Pennock a steady supply of these exquisitely scented white flowers for a number of weeks and there is every indication that they will continue to do so for some time to come. The plants are chiefly of the variety G. Florida, flowered in large pots. Nearly every shoot is surmounted by a bud, borne on a good stem. The contrast between the glossy green foliage and pure white flowers, resembling a camelia, is very effective. One large batch is being timed for Easter. Mr. Scott is to be congratulated on having solved this knotty problem, which so long puzzled many of our cleverest growers.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club meeting on Tuesday night brought out a good attendance to hear A. Farenwald's paper on how to produce Liberty roses. The paper was an extremely valuable one, giving the writer's cultural methods clearly and concisely, and the essayist received a hearty vote of thanks from the club. The membership is steadily growing. Alfred Burton and William Didden were elected at the February meeting and E. Weiss at this meeting.

Notes.

Robert Craig & Son made an assignment for the benefit of their creditors last Monday. John Burton has been appointed receiver.

Edwin Lonsdale's water tank fell last

The Late Walter Kreitling.

Tuesday morning, injuring a portion of one greenhouse and smashing some sash. The tank was a total wreck.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., was called home by the death of his sister.

Mrs. Edgar, of 2307 Ridge avenue, has the sympathy of her friends in the loss of her daughter last week.

Miss McKinley, of Randolph & McClements, Pittsburg, was a visitor in this city recently.

William J. Muth is now with C. A. Dunn & Co.

R. G. Palmer, of Doylestown, is now cutting many of his Maids and Brides. He is also very successful with that old time favorite Perle de Jardin.

Robert Scott & Son have a very fine house of Liberties. They were cut back after New Year's and give promise of a heavy crop before long.

John Holt, of North Wales, is sending some nice snap dragon to the Flower Market.

The J. Wolff-Moore Co., of 1407 Columbia avenue, has had an excellent season. They have earned an enviable reputation for their table decorations.

Berger Brothers are much pleased with their first month's experience in the commission business.

Robert Craig has been confined to the house by illness. His many friends hope for his speedy recovery. PHIL.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week opened with supplies enormous and the demand almost imperceptible. Contrary to general expectations Lent has again demonstrated its malign influence upon the cut flower market. The retailers are especially pessimistic and the wholesalers are lamenting the impossibility of closing out their surplus at any figure. Especially is this true of violets, thousands of them remaining unsold. The weather has been so unpropitious that even the street merchants, the great dumping vortex for over-supply, are unable to expose their purchases and even at the low rates at which they purchase they cannot dispose of them. Many thousands of violets have been sold at $10 a thousand and many a box remained under the benches unopened on Monday evening. A sleet storm added to the general gloom.

Even the top price for specials dropped to 40 cents per 100 and few commanded even this low figure. American Beauty specials were down to 30 cents on Monday and the finest Maids went at $10 a hundred. Carnations too have depreciated almost 50 per cent and the bulbous stock is simply a ponderous drug, with no stable value.

There seems little hope of a change for the better before the end of March. Easter is already in the air. Retail windows are a mass of color and buyers are already placing their orders with the plantmen, and a general expectation of fine weather and a good demand is expressed by all.

Notes.

The contemplated flower exhibition in Macy building is not likely to materialize. The growers in the immediate vicinity of New York decided they had no surplus for any extra display, while the demand for space from out-of-town growers did not manifest itself as was expected.

William P. Ford, of Ford Bros., West Thirtieth street, has been ill with the grippe during the past week and is not yet able to give his attention to business.

Robert, son of J. J. Perkins, is again very ill with pleura pneumonia and little hope is entertained for his recovery.

New York will be well represented at the Detroit convention. In addition to the company traveling together by the West Shore, President Traendly and J. J. Nugent left Tuesday at 4 o'clock, by the New York Central. Mr. Traendly will present the claims of the club's Rose night, March 14, while away, and announces that already many of the prominent rose growers of the country have announced their intention of exhibiting. Amongst them, Peter Reinberg of Chicago, M. Walsh, Mr. Farenwald, Ernst Asmus & Sons, John N. May, Robert Simpson, Henry Hentz, Jr., John H. Taylor and John Breitmeyer's Sons. This will not be ladies' night, but an attendance of over 200 will be anticipated and welcomed.

The outing committee met at the office of Traendly & Schenck and per-fectured arrangements for the annual festivity of the club in July. A handsome program will be issued and a splendid lot of prizes offered.

The sunny south seems the attractive mecca for those who desire pleasure or recuperation from illness. John N. May, Julius Roehrs and Fred Smythe are among the latest departures.

Amongst western visitors last week were; W. A. Kennedy, of Milwaukee, Wis., and J. S. Wilson of Western Springs, Ill.; while Robert Craig and John Burton were here from the city of rest and A. N. Pierson from Cromwell, Conn.

Among the sick are Henry Beaulieu of Woodhaven and Eugene Dailedouze of Flatbush. The unseasonable, changeable, severe weather is the cause of almost universal sickness in the trade; grippe claiming dozens of employers and employees of the wholesale cut flower section amongst its victims.

W. Elliott & Sons received last week eleven cases of conifers, rhododendrons, roses, clematis, etc., from Holland, which they will offer at auction. Sales this year begin next Tuesday, March 8, and will continue every Tuesday and Friday during the remainder of the season.

Bowling.

The Bowling club grows in members and enthusiasm. Many of the members are ill, but a fair attendance can now always be depended upon. Announcement of another prize night, to which special invitation will be given to all florists' clubs in or near the city, will soon be made. The scores made on Monday evening show encouraging improvements, as the appended list will show. A good team may be depended upon to represent New York at the great tournament in St. Louis.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

Young stock from now on should receive a deal of careful attention, as, if overlooked or neglected during the time the plants are in pots, the damage done can scarcely be repaired. To keep young stock in a growing condition they must never be neglected in regard to watering, especially during bright weather, as the tender roots are easily scorched and dried up. A good syringing twice a day serves the double purpose of refreshing the foliage and keeping them free from red spider, which, if they once get a foothold among young stock, are very hard to get rid of by reason of the leaves lying so close to the pot, where the spray cannot reach the spider. Care must be taken to have the syringing done early enough to give them ample time to dry before sundown.

Sprinkling the paths of the stock-house frequently helps to keep a sufficiency of moisture in the atmosphere during bright weather and keeps the foliage from suffering. During dull weather the young stock should be kept rather on the dry side in order to keep the foliage and young growths from becoming too soft and tender. Plenty of room on the bench, so that the air can circulate freely among the leaves, is absolutely necessary to secure health, and a frequent shifting around on the bench so that the plants may not always present the same side to the sun greatly helps in forming hardy, stocky and well-balanced plants.

This lifting and shifting around is also beneficial in preventing the formation of top roots, which, when left undisturbed, dig their way through the pots and frequently come in contact with very undesirable food. Neglected in this particular, they are greatly injured and receive a severe check when these roots are exposed or torn off, when they require repotting.

Ample ventilation, by keeping the leaves hardy and of a firm texture, is the best preventive of mildew, but as a safeguard a dusting of sulphur once a week should be applied, as during the next month we are liable to have sudden and extreme fluctuations of temperature, which even with the best of care will also disturb the inside conditions and seriously affect the tender foliage.

RIBES.

WHITE FLY AGAIN.

My Kaiserin rose leaves seem to shrivel, or rather, curl up. Is this the result of a disease or some insect? They were planted the first part of January in chrysanthemum soil and have been kept at 54 to 56 degrees nights. They are well budded and will be able to cut roses in about a week. W. A. S.

This is the work of the small white fly, a pest which has been giving a deal of trouble in some localities lately. Being especially fond of chrysanthemums, they had no doubt been in the last crop and when these were thrown out and roses planted in the same soil they turned their attention to these as being the most available food at hand, as they are in no wise particular about the kind of food plant they infest.

As yet there is no sure way of exterminating these pests, but I have used the following mixture with some success: Two pounds powdered lime, two ounces sulphate of copper, two ounces paris green and two ounces sulphur, well mixed and applied with the powder blower every second day.

J. Thorniley, in the REVIEW of February 18, recommends syringing with water at a temperature of 120 degrees, first reducing the temperature of the house below 50 degrees. He seems to have been successful by this method.

RIBES.

UNESTABLISHED ROSES.

I want someone to tell me through the REVIEW what is the matter with my roses. They are two-year-old plants, taken up and put in beds for cuttings. They start up, put out nice shoots and then begin to shrivel and die. Over half in one bench have done this way.

J. P. C.

These roses behave as if they were being subjected to a high temperature before root action has commenced. Stock from which propagating wood should be selected should be established and in full vigor, and it is rarely possible to secure such by replanting old stock, unless this has been affected during the proper planting season, July or August, when no artificial heat is required to start root action. I am afraid there is little hope of deriving any profit from such stock.

RIBES.

HEAT FOR ROSES.

Do you recommend hot pipes under the rose benches, with 4-inch tile and soil on top? Or would it be better to have the pipes on the side walls of the rose houses? I have some rose benches with board bottoms, with heat under them. The roses are not of the best. Could that be the cause? J. R. E.

There is no great objection to having the pipes under the benches, many growers producing good crops under such circumstances, provided the pipes are sufficiently removed from the bottom of the bench and the bench of such a form that there is no danger of the heat being conserved there, such as having the side boards dropping below the bottom, etc.

The main object to be attained is an even distribution of the heat through the whole house, so that the soil in the bench will be so heated and not by undue proximity to the piping. The old ideas of sub-irrigation and bottom heat for rose benches being subversive of natural laws, and not having had the desired effect, have been practically abandoned. The nearer we copy nature in her most favorable moods, so much better are our chances of success.

Roses under natural conditions receive their supply of water from above and dry out from the surface, and never begin to dry at the roots first, so that when we can we ought to keep the pipes from being so close to the roots that the heat will first take effect there. Most modern structures have the heat supply so arranged that the soil is simply warmed by the temperature of the house, and this is effected by running the supply pipes under the gutters, returning along the paths and walls, and seems to distribute the heat in a satisfactory manner.

RIBES.

CARNATIONS.

Carnations at Fifty Degrees.

What varieties of carnations can be grown to advantage in a house half of which is devoted to chrysanthemums and is run at 50 degrees night temperature? We have been growing Daybreak and White Cloud. Of the first we have a fine stock and cut a good flower, if not quite up to newer kinds in size. But we have never had the best of satisfaction from White Cloud, either this year or when we grew it warmer. How about Estelle, and what good commercial varieties can we try at that temperature? J. & C.

There are a good many varieties to choose from that will do fine in a temperature of 50 degrees, providing the rest of the culture is up to a fair standard. I will advise you to get some Enchantress to plant in place of Daybreak; it is four times as large and likes just about the same treatment. Estelle might be a good one for you, but I would advise you to try a limited quantity first. A few large growers claim that it is their best paying scarlet, but with the rank and file it has not been so successful as Crane. I would also advise you to try a few Adonis. If it succeeds with you you will want no Estelle, nor any other scarlet, I think. In white I would try Lorna, Her Majesty, Boston Market and Glacier. Any of these may be just what you want. In pink try Mrs. Nelson and Floriana. The Marquis likes about 50 degrees, and if it does not come in too late to suit you it may be a good one for you. By all means try a few of some of the new ones. There are great improvements in all the colors this year over the standard varieties, but you will have to find out for yourself which ones will do best for you.

A. F. J. BAUR.

PESTS ON PHOENIX.

Please tell me what the pest is on my phoenix? Will the fungus transfer itself to other plants of the same or other species? What will become of plants so infected? The remedy of Bordeaux mixture will not be applicable, as customers would not like a plant so dipped.

F. J.

Several sections of phoenix leaves accompanied this query, and gave very plain evidence of some of the troubles with which this grower has to contend. There are a number of colonies of the phoenix fungus (Peronospora) on some of the segments of leaf, a difficulty that prevails to a greater or less extent wherever these palms are grown and, as we have before remarked, is a trouble that is not easily removed, from the fact that the fungus does most of its work within the tissues of the leaf.

But the fungus is not the most serious trouble that appears on these specimens, there being a worse one in the form of a tremendous crop of small brown scale insects, this being a scale that multiplies very rapidly and soon works much injury to palms. If all of the plants are so badly affected as the specimen leaves at hand, it would seem the part of wisdom to destroy them, for it is no easy job to clean a phoenix that has so large a crop of insects.

But if this radical course seems to be inadvisable, several dippings at intervals of one week, in a solution of whale oil soap and tobacco extract will probably overcome the scale, but after dipping the plants always lay them on their sides to drain off, else the insecticide may settle in the crowns of the plants and do injury to the undeveloped leaves. Two ounces of whale oil soap and about one-eighth of a pint of Rose Leaf Extract to one gallon of water makes a strong enough solution for dipping palms safely.

TRADE DEALS.

The question of "trade deals" between publishers and advertisers might at first blush appear to be the business of no other than the two parties to the contract. If Publisher Jones wishes to swap Manufacturer Smith a page of space for a peck measure full of jack knives, and Mr. Smith agrees there would be no reason to object. But Mr. Jones claims to serve all comers alike. His is a strictly one-price institution, and when he takes jack knives or pumpkins or watered stock from Smith and demands cold, hard cash from Smith's competitor, the competitor naturally feels that he is not getting a fair deal.

And he's not.

There seems to us small room for discussion.—Agricultural Advertising.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade the past week was first-class, and from the reports of the different florists throughout the city Lent has hardly been felt. It is true that there are no large weddings or receptions, yet a few dinners and luncheons, with plenty of funeral work, kept most of us very busy last week, and everybody seems well pleased with the business during the first week in Lent. Wholesale men also report a good shipping trade, which helped to clean up some of the surplus stock.

The weather is most beautiful and the indications are that by the end of the present week there will be a big glut in carnations, violets and bulbous stock. Roses have not been any too plentiful, but of an improved quality. At this writing they are in heavier supply, especially Bride, Maid, Meteor and Perle. American Beauties are still scarce, with a brisk demand. Those that come in are off color and poor in quality and are shipped in from the outside. Meteor and Bridesmaid are of good color. Some good Liberty are also seen, but with short stems. Carnations are coming in heavily and of very fine color. Those from Henry Baer, of Peoria, Ill., and Mr. Doswell, of Fort Wayne, Ind., are very fine, with our Kirkwood and Clayton growers not far behind. Good blooms of Nelson, Lawson, Enchantress, Estelle and Wolcott are offered at $4 and $5 per 100 for fancy and others ran from $2 to $3.

Almost every variety of bulbous stock is slow, and especially so with valley and Romans. Dutch hyacinths of the lighter shades are in fair demand. Daffodils are not overplentiful, as they usually are at this time. Harrisii are also limited. Callas are more plentiful. Tulips sell very slowly, prices on this stock being somewhat cheaper than last reported. Violets are a glut, still a great many are sold in 5,000 lots very cheap; single 1,000 lots run $3.50, quality of the best. Smilax is somewhat scarce at 15 cents. Asparagus plumosus in fair demand. Adiantum is fine at $1.25.

Various Notes.

Easter lilies are reported by some of our growers as coming on in fine shape; they say there is less disease this year. Some of the smaller growers are a little behind, but a good bottom heat will bring them to the front in time.

From present prospects quite a few new greenhouses will be added this summer among our carnation growers around Kirkwood and Clayton. They all have had a good season, big crops and big prices.

James S. Wilson, of Western Springs, Ill., was with us from Saturday to Monday, leaving here for Detroit to attend the carnation meeting.

Dr. A. S. Halstedt, of Belleville, is at Detroit to attend the carnation meeting.

Prof. Wm. Trelease, of the Missouri Botanic Gardens, will leave this week on a business trip, accompanied by his son. They will be gone a month or six weeks.

Mr. Brown, the English gardener, has rented part of Alex Johnson's greenhouse at Wellston, where R. J. Mohr is in charge.

H. Riemann has left the employ of the Michel Plant and Bulb Co. He is now employed by Mr. Brown at the English building on the World's Fair grounds.

George M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, Mo., was a visitor last week. He will return the latter part of this week and attend the executive board meeting on Saturday.

John Connon, of Webster Groves, is confined to the house with a sprained knee cap, the result of an accident while coasting with a party of ladies near his home.

Will Smith has left the employ of F. M. Ellis and is now in the pottery supply business.

P. G. Gerhart, one of the first park commissioners in early St. Louis, died last week at the age of 75.

George Ostertag is now in the employ of the city, having been appointed park overseer. A better selection could not have been made and George will see that things are kept right. David Banzhof has left Forest Park.

Ed. Glenzing, of Kirkwood, lost all three of his houses by fire the past week. The loss of the plants was due to freezing and smoke.

F. Lautermilch, of Kirkwood, has a few fine seedlings in carnations. A particularly good one is a cross between Jubilee and Old McGowan, color a shade lighter than Lawson; it is also a great producer. He also has a fine white, both being good keepers.

Everything is in readiness to receive the executive board on Saturday morning, and from that time on we will make them feel at home. The banquet, which will be held on Saturday night at the Missouri Athletic Club, will be a hummer, and the trolley ride on Sunday a pleasant affair. All arrangements are complete, which will be explained to the club members at the meeting of the club this week Thursday.

Carew Sanders, who was operated on last week, is doing nicely, and, from reports, will soon be up and around again among his friends.

Team No. 2 won all four games Monday night from Team No. 1, by the following score:

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The tone of the market since my last notes has changed materially. The Lenten season is now being felt by everyone and the market in general is very irregular. Weather conditions also affected values. Prices have fallen considerably and one can buy roses and carnations in quantities at one's own figure. All bulbous stock is a drug. The carnation supply is very heavy and lots of 1,000 are offered as low as $15 for fancy stock. Roses are meeting with better success; while the supply is very large, prices remain firmer, fancy stock still selling at $10 per 100. Beauties are scarce, the best bringing $5 per dozen. In greens a slight shortage exists.

Various Notes.

The funeral of a very prominent clergyman demanded a quantity of flowers on Monday. One of the largest pieces, a chair, was made up by Mrs. E. A. Williams. A. W. Smith had an immense broken column and Wm. Loew two large panels of pink roses.

Ernest Fisher of Castle Shannon, is cutting some very fine carnations. He consigns his stock to G. & J. W. Ludwig.

From present indications the supply of lilies in this market will be sufficient to meet the Easter demand. The ones that are now being sent in are of very good quality.

John Foss, Etna, Pa., reports his Easter stock in fine condition. John knows how to force hyacinths to perfection.

I. S. Crall, B. L. Elliott, John L. Wyland, Fred Burki and Edward Blind left for Detroit to attend the carnation convention.

At the Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Co.'s plant, the new house of Kaisersins planted for summer blooming is doing fine and the cut is daily increasing.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. is shipping hardy cut ferns to Chicago and boxwood sprays to Canada.

Superintendent George W. Burke, of the bureau of parks, and Foreman John W. Jones, of the Phipps conservatories, are rushing the work of preparation for the annual Easter flower show at the conservatories. The bulbs are all being forced in good shape and the exhibition this year will be as fine as usual.

Visitors: J. W. Glen, Kittanning, Pa.; Arthur Langhans, Wheeling, W. Va.; G. L. Huseroft, Steubenville, Ohio.

NOTES ON VARIETIES.

The following notes on commercial varieties will be found of interest at this time, when planting plans are being prepared for next season.

Adam Laub & Son, Hughsonville, N. Y.

White Cloud is doing fine with us and always did. It must be that the soil has a great deal to do with it. Our soil is a sandy loam. Night temperature is from 50 to 53 degrees. G. H. Crane is a little slower than in former years, but shows up good this past seven weeks, with a temperature of 53 degrees. Lawson has been exceptionally fine all winter with a temperature of 55 degrees. Enchantress is all that was claimed for it. It is a good bloomer, has a fine stem and still better, a good commercial variety. Temperature 50 to 52 degrees. Queen Louise has done good according to the size of plants last fall. Temperature 53 degrees. Her Majesty has thrown some fine flowers, but wants to be grown cool to obtain best results. We grew this in a temperature of from 46 to 48 degrees. Next year we will try Flamingo, Mrs. W. A. Patten, Nelson Fisher, Gov. Wolcott and Louise Naumann.

TORONTO.

Trade during the last week was considerably better than the week previous and Saturday made a good finish, and a great quantity of cheap stock was cleaned up. Of course we note that the price was pretty low on some stock, especially bulb stock, tulips and daffodils retailing at 10 cents per dozen and carnations at 15 cents. Of course the best stock brought better prices but this oversupply of cheap stock helped to hold down the prices considerably.

At time of writing, the fiercest storm of the season is passing over Toronto and the general prospects are that it will demoralize the trade for a few days at least.

Mr. T. H. Milligan, who took over the greenhouses in connection with the Mimico Industrial School last fall, has opened up a store on Queen St., West, and reports business very satisfactory for a beginning.

We had a call during the week from Mr. R. H. Wright of Ottawa, who came through, doing a little pastoral visiting. He reports business very good during the winter, and as the opening of parliament takes place in a very short time, he expects that will boom the florists' trade in Ottawa and will put a "Garrison" finish on a good season's business. D. J.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

We are in need of sunshine, as we have scarcely been able to take a look at the sun this winter. It has made cut flowers of every description very scarce. The ruling price for carnations has stayed at $2.50 to $3 per 100 for common stock, some of the poorer grades bringing $2, with fancies from $4 to $6. Most of the carnation growers are getting excited over the stiff prices, as I scarcely know of one who does not intend to increase his glass this summer. Some of them will almost double their places and a good many of the market gardeners are going to plant carnations instead of lettuce next season. The scarcity has been felt most by the small retail men, as they had to refuse orders because they could not obtain flowers without buying them at the retail price. One of the retail men remarked to me the other day that if things did not change he would have to go out of business.

H. E. Wilson is doing a fine business, as it is on the increase every day. They have been working almost night and day at funeral work and are bringing up a nice lot of cut flowers from their greenhouses.

Miss Callaster has sold out her carnation plant to a man who expects to erect another house this coming season.

H. M.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held on February 23 and was very largely attended. The monthly prize, given this month by F. Gibson, was won by H. T. Kastberry, gardener to the Misses Masters, Dobbs Ferry, for the best bunch of fifty violets. Other competitors were President Ballantyne, Vice-President Jos. Bradley, I. Bryan and others. Mr. Bryan exhibited a very fine bunch of Princess of Wales, each flower measuring two inches in diameter. A splendid vase of the new Daheim carnation, shown by the F. R. Pierson Co., attracted a great deal of attention, with its massive and heavy flowers of the deepest and most beautiful shade of crimson scarlet, measuring over three inches across. Mr. Pierson tells us that one good feature about it is that it never bursts the calyx. A. Brown and Fred Koenig, of Tarrytown, were elected active members.

Francis Pammer, of Tarrytown, one of our most prominent landscape gardeners, gave a very instructive illustrated lecture on his travels through Europe last summer. Coffee and sandwiches were served and the entertainment of the evening commenced with songs and recitations by Messrs. Scott, Lee, McFarlane, Malony and others, accompanied on the piano by Mr. Walquist. This was the first entertainment given after the regular meeting and every member seemed to enjoy himself and everyone agreed that it will be a very good way to get a better attendance and bring the members closer together. Each will try to do his best at the next sociable evening, which is in May. T. A. L.

LONDON, ONT.

In the first week in January I took a trip to London, Ontario. It was three days after the very disastrous fire in which the chief of the London fire brigade lost his life. I called at the chief's house and found a large number of beautiful floral pieces made up by the London craft, also a number of fine tributes sent from Toronto, Berlin and other places.

The first greenhouse establishment visited was that of the old and well established firm of J. Gammage & Sons. As on many former occasions, I found the roses, carnations, palms, the large line of potted plants and bedding stock in fine condition. Owing to the big demand for Christmas and New Year's festivities, as also to the very dark weather in December, blooms in the rose houses were very scarce. The carnation houses made a very good showing of bloom, notwithstanding the very heavy cut. Two styles of houses, radically different in their construction, are used in growing carnations. One the old, wide style of houses, with elevated wooden benches, the others very narrow houses, not more than ten feet wide and not over three feet high at the gutter line. A path runs through the center of each house, and on either side of this is a solid bed. There are no tiles used in the bottom of these beds, the soil for growing the carnations resting on a natural cushion of sand. Here is an object lesson for those of us who are undecided as to whether carnations will thrive best in solid beds or on raised benches. From what I saw here, from what I have seen at other places and from the little experience gained at my own plant, I am convinced that solid beds are best for those houses and those plants that we desire to cut a heavy crop from in the spring and summer, and raised benches, including brick and tile benches, for plants and houses from which we desire to do our heavy cutting in the fall and winter. Lawson, Glacier, Hill, White Cloud, Crane, Roosevelt, Golden Beauty and many others were in fine condition, but in my opinion Enchantress is empress of them all. Why I entertain this high opinion of Enchantress, I will communicate at some future date.

The next place I visited was that of F. Dicks. This gentleman is a carnation specialist. The houses are not of the most modern construction, but they are well built, well kept and form a compact block of greenhouses and, like those on the Gammage place, are heated by steam. What was said about Lawson, Glacier, Roosevelt, etc., holds good here also. In addition to these a number of houses of Cerise Queen and Queen Louise and extra heavy crops of buds impressed me most favorably. Very little else in the plant line excepting carnations is to be seen on this place, but the neat and cleanly appearance of the houses, the healthy and thrifty condition of the plants testify to the fact that Mr. Dicks is a most expert grower. APHIDES ON LETTUCE.

Gardeners of the old school had a theory that insects would not attack a healthy plant; that it was only when a plant was in poor health that they made their appearance. This may be true with a plant grown under natural conditions, but grown under artificial conditions, as lettuce in a greenhouse, no matter how healthy a plant may be, it is not immune from attack, though a healthy plant is less liable to serious injury than one in a more or less sickly condition.

Aphides are most apt to put in their appearance when hard firing is necessary to keep up the heat during excessive cold spells, and it is well to be prepared with some preventive. We find that the smell of tobacco through the house will prevent the insects from getting a foothold about as well as anything we have tried. The cheapest and easiest means of using this is to have stems distributed through the house and have them renewed occasionally when the strength is exhausted. We have seen them spread on top of the hot water pipes, but this is rather an untidy way; besides they dry out so quickly that the strength is soon exhausted. It is better to tie them up in bundles, so that they will not get scattered around, and suspend the bundles under the benches, not too close to the hot water pipes, moistening them occasionally should they become dry, but the water that drains through the benches is usually sufficient to keep them moist enough. If kept too wet they will get musty and rot. This bundle system is much cleaner, as they can be easily changed without making any dust or dirt.

Green aphides is the commonest enemy of lettuce, though the black variety will sometimes attack it, and the latter is far the harder to kill. If either of them should get a foothold tobacco smoke is as safe a remedy as any, but it is better to smoke lightly two or three nights in succession rather than apply it too heavily at one time.

W. S. CROYDON.

THE FREEZE-OUT AT GEORGETOWN, ONT.

ED. REVIEW:—The writer notes an account in your February number, page 668, of a freeze-out at Georgetown, Ont. If your correspondent had obtained correct information he would have been able to report that the leak in the boilers referred to was caused by firing the boilers while substantially empty of water and that it applied to the whole battery. I am able to certify the correctness of the above, having personally inspected the boilers a few hours after the accident occurred.

The writer believes a true report of such occurrences are valuable as a means of warning others against the dangers and damages liable to result from bad management or negligence of the water line, and he has no sympathy with those desiring to shield any entitled to blame by attributing accident to causes of a mysterious or miraculous nature.

TO RUN REGULARLY.

There is pulling power in every clean paper. We emphatically do not believe in intermittent advertising, but keep hitting the nail everlastingly on the head. Our contracts are made for twelve months, to run regularly. Anything less than that we do not believe in.—Montgomery Ward & Co.

A PROTEST.

I see in the REVIEW another rap at the growers who pickle stock for the holidays. I wish you would let up on that. If all the growers knew how to market their stock what would happen to those who are already onto their job? Cut it out. How do you suppose we are to get holiday prices during the week before a holiday if the rest of them don't pickle and leave us a bare market to take our stuff? The pickler is all right. Let him alone. J. A. B.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Secretary of Agriculture wants an appropriation of $25,000 to remove and reconstruct the greenhouses now on the grounds to be occupied by the Department's new building.

Lilies for Easter

J. F. Ammann, a leading grower for the St. Louis Market, told his Florists' Club the other day, as reported in the Review, that

"On a visit to Weber Bros., Chicago, we saw the finest house of Lilium Longiflorum any of us had ever seen. These men certainly know their business."

We handle all the cut from these greenhouses and these are the lilies on which we are now booking orders for Easter.

$15 per 100; $125 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate.

Place your order now and make sure of a supply of the BEST LILIES to be found in this or any other market.

THE NEW ASTER

Grow 10,000 and every one will be as white as snow. It is my specialty. I have grown no other color for the last ten years. Send your address for prices and circular, and read what the bankers and merchants of this place, and commercial growers elsewhere, say. Notice the offer to return your money if not satisfied. It also shows the field from which seed was saved, and from which the blooms were cut that I sent to the Milwaukee Convention. See report Florists' Exchange August 22, 1903.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 22d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

J. J. BITZER has engaged in the seed business at Portland, Ore.

NEARLY 6,000 bags of clover seed were destroyed in the Baltimore fire.

FIELD corn that will grow is the next item that will be hard to secure.

VISITED Chicago: Chas. P. Braslan, of Braslan Seed Growers' Co., San Jose, Cal.

A SHARP advance in onion set prices at Louisville, Ky., is a development of the week.

THE properly grown Chicago onion set continues to bring the top figure in a rising market.

THE demand for bush beans of all varieties continues. There seems to be no surplus anywhere.

THE Baltimore seed houses which were burned out have all found adequate temporary locations, and are doing business again.

THE increase of orders as a result of the milder weather of the past few days shows what may be expected when spring opens up properly.

It is a long time since seed orders generally have been so hard to fill in full as this year. This applies to mail orders as well as to "fill in" orders from the trade.

THE scarcity of home-grown standards, and the most needed parts of foreign shipments in the hands of the appraiser, keeps the seedsman from worrying about other things at present.

THE new seed committee of the Philadelphia Commercial Exchange is composed of Chas. R. Koch, Chas. G. Alexander, Herbert W. Johnson, Geo. E. Taylor and Casper T. Sharpless.

As long as it is advertised that a dollar's worth of seeds may be had for twenty-five cents it will be hard to convince the consumer that a free distribution of the goods is very far wrong.

THE western and southwestern growers of onion sets, who have planted no considerable acreage in recent years, are reported to be satisfied to turn their contracts over to the Chicago district this season.

THE firm of W. Atlee Burpee & Co. has done very little magazine advertising in the past two or three years, but is making up for it in a measure this season, having full pages in most of the March issues.

"THE seeds you sent me were no good," wrote a constituent to Representative Lacey, of Iowa. "Nothing but weeds grew where I planted them." By the next mail Mr. Lacey sent a reply. "I take pleasure in forwarding you, under another cover," wrote the Iowan, "a copy of a bulletin from the Department of Agriculture. It is entitled 'Weeds and How to Kill Them.'"—Minneapolis Journal.

THE Buckbee Seed Co. loss at Rockford, which has attracted wide attention, has been settled by compromise. The fire occurred in June, 1903, and a contest was precipitated at once by the refusal of the companies to settle on the basis of seed values that day, they contending for cost value. The insured claimed a value of $121,875 in stock and fixtures, with insurance of $80,500. This would make the loss total to insurance. The claim was compromised February 25, the companies paying $72,450, a reduction of $49,425 from the original claim. This is on the basis of 90 per cent on the insurance.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

We are having some of the warmest weather since last fall, and it seems to be doing business a good turn, as there is more snap to the market than there has been for some time. All kinds of flowers are getting a chance at it, too. Roses are in larger supply and some first-class stock is seen. Red is still very scarce. Beauties are improving in quality and the supply is larger. Some extra fine Gates and Ivory are selling at good figures. Carnations are about equal to the demand, with the price a notch or two lower than last week, especially on the better grades. The quality in most cases is very good. Bulbous stock moves rather slow, callas doing better, perhaps, than anything else. Harisii go but poorly and valley is almost a drug. Thousands of jonquils are being shipped in from West Virginia and sell as low as $5 per 1,000. Some days violets are scarce and the price jumps up, but the next thousands of them are in sight, and many go to waste. Thus a grower's returns depend greatly on his luck.

Various Notes.

The annual carnation show of the Florists' Society will take place March 12. Everything points toward a first-class show. Out-of-town growers are invited to make exhibits and their stock will be carefully staged and cared for by the society. Growers and introducers of new things are especially requested to send us some sample blooms, so that the Cincinnati boys can see what they are like.

James Hartshorne, of the Chicago Carnation Co., was in the city last week, and it is no idle rumor that he took back with him the ownership of R. Witterstaetter's new carnation, 'The Cardinal'. It's a mighty good carnation and looks to have a future.

E. G. Gillett and J. A. Peterson spent the greater part of the past week in being initiated into the mysteries of the Scottish Rite and Shrine. Chas. Weltz, of Wilmington, O., joined them in crossing the burning sands.

Eight or ten left here Tuesday night for Detroit. They were the usual standbys, well known at the conventions.

L. Pfeiffer Sons are building a new house, 22x100, to be devoted to Brides and Maids.

H. H. Ritter, of Dayton, O., was in attendance at the Masonic meetings last week.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL

by
WILLIAM SCOTT

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid.

Florists' Publishing Co., CAXTON BUILDING, Chicago.

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

A Complete Reference Book for

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

PACIFIC COAST.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The Board of Public Works has granted the petition of the Retail Florists' Association and ordered the flower peddlers off the streets.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We have had an almost continuous downpour of rain for the past two weeks and the effect on business is very marked. Outside of funeral orders, which have been fairly steady, there is very little doing, and stocks of flowers have piled up at a tremendous rate in all the stores. Violets have become so plentiful that many of the growers have ceased to pick any, or only a small portion of the crop. The fact that the basket peddlers have been driven off the public streets adds to the quantity that is dumped daily in the stores. Bunches containing 200 fine blossoms are sold wholesale at 50 cents per dozen, and there is no prospect of the supply diminishing. All kinds of outdoor bulbous stock, and especially narcissi and daffodils, are a glut. The former sell at from 25 to 50 cents per hundred and the latter at about 50 cents per hundred for the best quality of flowers. Many of the dealers handle considerable fruit blossoms and almond, peach and cydonia are at their best at this time. Carnations remain stationary in price and, although not very plentiful, there are more than enough to fill requirements. Roses are about the same in price as they have been for the past three weeks and about enough to supply demands. Indoor freesias are coming in good lots and find a very ready sale. There has been a great improvement in the quality of this popular flower over those of the past few years. There is a freesia specialist in Oakland who grows his flowers on stems two feet long and over and stiff as carnations, and he has found a splendid sale for them at $3 per hundred spikes. Valley is very plentiful and Lilium Harrisii is becoming more plentiful. I think most of our growers will have a good supply for Easter, judging by the condition of the plants in some of the nurseries I have visited. Dutch hyacinths in 6-inch pots and tulips, especially Keizerskron and Yellow Prince, help to make windows especially attractive at this time. Some very fair samples of Crimson Rambler in 7 and 8-inch pots and in full bloom are beginning to come in and everything here is as merry as a marriage bell, except business, and this is, as I stated before, "on the bum."

Notes.

Apropos of the fact that the Italian flower venders have been ordered off the streets by the city authorities, the Merchants' Association of San Francisco has sent a lengthy communication to our Board of Supervisors, in which they state that as the flower peddlers were distinctively a feature of San Francisco life, and that they were not detrimental to the florists' trade in general, but that it cultivated a taste for flowers with many who do not ordinarily visit the stores, and that in the end trade at large was much benefited. This is exactly the opposite of what is contended by the Retail Florists' Association, which secured the abolition of the free flower mart. The florists all over the city claim that all the peddlers should be driven off the streets, as it is an unfair proposition to allow them to sell their goods in front of the stores and on the most popular thoroughfares without charging them a heavy license to even matters. The war goes merrily on and we will know in a week or two whether the venders will be permitted to resume their usual vocation or not.

THE MAKING OF LAWNS.

Although the making of lawns does not come strictly within the province of the florist or nurseryman, our advice is constantly sought regarding their planting, care and re-seeding. The practice in California is somewhat different from that of other places. To begin with, let me say a few words regarding the variety of grasses used. Kentucky blue grass makes the best sod unless it is planted either in the shade of trees or houses or on very sandy soil. It is used more than any other grass because it is easy to cut and makes a very velvety sward. Where there is much shade and a deficiency of water Australian rye grass is found to be much more serviceable than blue grass. It roots very deeply, grows luxuriantly display should be different; above the average. The RIGHT RIBBONS will help to make it so. You will be surprised at the elegance and distinction which these ribbons of quality give to your plants and flowers. Woven with especial reference to florists' use, the textures are firm and lustrous, and the colors are as near the shades of flowers and foliage as can be produced.

And yet—the Right Ribbons cost you less than the usual sort, for "you save all between profits" by buying direct from the mill.

both in shady places and in the open, and keeps a very fair color with a small amount of moisture, but it is hard to cut if allowed to grow for any length of time. These two grasses are practically all that are used here, although some people like a white clover lawn. But clover, unless carefully handled regarding watering, has a tendency to die out during our six months of summer drought and it has not become very popular on that account.

The time for making a lawn here is from the first of March until September. After that month, on account of cold nights, seed germinates very slowly, and when frosty weather comes it is almost impossible to get the grass up at all. This is especially true of the Kentucky blue. I have seen many lawns that were very carefully planted and after the seed had sprung up and grown an inch or so they were completely killed by the frost. This does not happen with Australian rye grass or clover, and consequently if a lawn must be planted between September and the following March do not plant Kentucky blue grass. During the spring and summer months blue and rye grass come up very quickly. From four to ten days is the average length of time for the young blades to show themselves.

To obtain a good, long-lived lawn the soil should be at least six inches in depth and should be weeded twice during the first two months and after that cut on the average of twice a month during the warm months and once in two months during cold weather. If the soil is poor it should be enriched with bone dust every spring, and if that is not available well rotted manure can be used to advantage. I find March the best month to apply fertilizer; that is, just before the grass begins to make a good growth. I prefer bone meal for all kinds of lawns, as its action, although it begins slower, lasts much longer than any other kind of fertilizer, and it has the advantage of not being full of the seeds of noxious weeds, as manure usually is. Dandelion and red sorrel are the great enemies of lawns in this country and the only way to eradicate them is to dig them out by hand, not a very pleasant but the only effectual way I know of. G.

DENVER, COLO.

With the mercury in the vicinity of 60 degrees in the shade for the month of February, it would be natural to expect big results in the production of flowers. The influence in this respect has been very satisfactory and especially so in the carnation line. Such carnations as are now on the market here lead one to believe that Uncle John's prophecy is near to realization. Forty years ago the Malmaison was considered the ideal of perfection in the carnation family, and even as late as ten years ago it was grown as the leading pot variety in the vicinity of London. But they lacked the finished form of Prosperity, Enchantress and Adonis. These three varieties have taken the lead, both in popularity and price, the past season, and have always found ready sale at good prices. Prosperity, while not the money maker that Enchantress is, is much sought after and the leading stores here think it indispensable, but Enchantress is considered by grower and dealer out here as the money maker of the day. One grower informed me quite recently that he picked from 500 plants of this variety last December just 4,000 blooms, and when seen the past week they looked to be running pretty close on that record. Of course our bright, warm sun, with plenty of genial air, is conducive to such results, which cannot possibly be attained anywhere east of this region at the time mentioned. Adonis has created a favorable impression here and will be grown for all it is worth the coming season. It is considered the leading scarlet out here, its only fault being its deficiency in wood for cuttings, as it produces a flower on almost every growth it makes. A prominent Chicago retailer, who has been on a visit here, was very favorably impressed with it as it is produced out here, and has changed his opinion of it, when compared with what he has seen elsewhere.

Bulbous stock is now coming into the stores in good quantity and quality. This is the first year in many that either grower or dealer has had any satisfactory results from handling it. This condition may be accounted for by one of our largest bulb growers not being successful in getting his order last fall. Those who are fortunate enough to have them on hand are making a profit on them, to their surprise. Lilies are not holding out in health as well as was expected a few months ago, and the prospect now is that about one-fourth the crop will be a failure. But Japan-grown longiflorums are looking well and those fortunate enough to have them in quantity will to some extent be reimbursed for their losses on Harrisii.

NEW ROSES!
CARDINAL and ENCHANTRESS

CARDINAL—A cross between Liberty and an unnamed carmine seedling. A strong, robust grower, with large, massive crimson flowers, deliciously fragrant. Never shows an open center; keeping qualities first-class.

PRICE—2½-inch pots, $30.00 per 100. Not less than 50 sold, for the present.

ENCHANTRESS—A cross between Testout and an unnamed seedling; the most prolific bloomer under glass; makes no blind wood and never stops growing. Every shoot produces a handsome, clear, pink flower which never fades out; a good keeper.

2½ and 3-inch pots, $30.00 per 100.

Beauties are keeping up their established reputation for producing non-productive wood, or no wood at all, at this time of the year. One of our leading growers is utilizing the blind wood for layers and in this manner propagates considerable of this stock for next summer's planting. The wood is bent over and brought to the ground and tongued and inserted in the soil at a point when the wood is most favorable for the operation. This stock has proven as satisfactory as that obtained by the usual method of propagation.

MORE HEAT NEEDED.
Please advise me what changes would be best in order to secure a little more heat in my greenhouses in severe weather. I have a return flue boiler of eleven sections, capacity about 2,200 feet of 4-inch pipe. This heats a rose house, 19x40, in which 56 degrees is required, two carnation houses, 16x40, requiring 52 degrees, and a house 16x40 for general stock, needing 45 to 50 degrees. I fall 5 or 6 degrees short of the required temperatures in the coldest weather. In the rose house there are two flows and six returns, all 4-inch, under the benches. In one carnation house there are two flows and six returns, all 3-inch, in the other two flows and four returns, all 4-inch. In the plant house there is a 4-inch flow feeding two 4-inch returns and one 2-inch flow feeding six 1-inch returns hanging on the wall. If I could afford to keep a night man I would be all right, but I have to leave the fire three or four hours at a time to get sleep. If I increased the number of flows would I get more rapid circulation?
W. P. R.

There is sufficient radiation in all your houses to maintain the temperatures desired, providing the water is maintained constantly at 180 degrees. If, as you say, it is necessary to leave the plant for three or four hours at a time it is likely that the water cools off considerably. With good anthracite coal, however, that should not be the case. No statement is made in regard to the fuel used, but I assume it is hard coal from the type of boiler described. If not, perhaps the use of hard coal during the coldest weather will be a remedy. You do not state whether the flow pipes are arranged on an up-hill or down-hill system. If the flow pipes rise from the boiler to the far end of the house the distribution of heat will be more satisfactory than if on a down-hill system.

PROPAGATING THE DAHLIA.

When we wish to secure a stock of a new variety in a short time, the only practical method is by cuttings, and we often have occasion, also, to multiply some old sort much faster than it can be done by divisions. Under ordinary treatment there are a few kinds that do not give as good results from cutting, but with most varieties we find no difference and a small application of hen manure, say a teaspoonful to a plant, or its equivalent in some quick acting fertilizer, will bring up any of them without waiting till the second year. When we take into consideration the fact that a dahlia seed planted June 1 can readily be brought into flower in July by good treatment it will not seem at all impracticable to bring up a good specimen from even a small cutting plant the first year.

WM. F. BASSETT.

Regarding the propagation of dahlias, my method is to place the tubers on a bench in heat of 60 degrees and cover very sparingly with light earth, or moss and earth mixed, so as to expose the crowns. They will sprout quickly, and as soon as the shoots are long enough to handle they are pulled off sideways, the break trimmed with a keen knife and inserted into the sand propagating bed.

This is much better than to cut the shoots at a joint after they have grown up to some length, this base being full of eyes naturally. There is no danger of exhausting the roots, as I have had tubers in heat for three months and pulled cuttings every three to six days without having gotten the last one when thrown out. In fact, I believe this method will produce more cuttings than the other. The young plants make nicer tubers in pots all summer than if planted out in the field, as the field plants grow too much to stalk.

HENRY A. DREER, 714 Chestnut Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Local reports and those by wireless telegraphy from Salem, Oregon City, Montavilla and Albina all indicate a brisk demand for cut flowers. There is nothing going begging now. Our chief anxiety in the past two weeks has been how to get enough stock to do justice to our patrons. Landslides on the Southern Pacific seriously affected traffic and for several days consignments from California were of no commercial value when received. Our growers have also had their troubles, for it has rained successively for forty days and forty nights. Only for a few minutes at a time and with long intermissions has the sun consented to smile on us. While the present atmospheric conditions are not conducive to producing roses and carnations, yet I venture to state that in no other part of the country can bulbous stock be grown to such perfection as here. There is a fine supply and all of the highest grade and some very pretty window decorative effects are seen.

St. Valentine's proved a red letter day to the florists. Experience has taught us that we can arouse public sentiment by introducing appropriate novelties, and sales were far in advance of those of a year ago. And then came the Chinese New Year, which is celebrated for a whole week by our 3,000 Mongolian inhabitants. The Jap may be the better fighter, but the Chinaman spends more liberally for flowers. The azalea is a favorite with them and we make it a point to be well supplied for that special occasion, as they willingly pay from $2 to $5 for a plant.

Since my last writing we have been favored with several distinguished visitors. W. G. Schucht, representing C. C. Pollworth Co., is making his first trip to the coast and is booking some fat orders for plants and wire goods. He was followed closely by Arnold Ringier, in the interests of Barnard & Co., who visits us regularly once a year. The genial Arnold, with his rare gift for story telling, is very popular on the coast.

We were also pleased to receive a call from Sam Murray, the well-known florist of Kansas City, Mo., who is touring the west. He leaves here for California, where we hope he will be more favorably impressed with the western climate.

HEATING CAPACITY.

Will you please publish a rule for estimating the horse-power of a tubular steam boiler and also a rule for estimating its capacity for greenhouse heating, both for steam and hot water?

S. B.

It is not an easy matter to estimate the horse-power of a boiler, as the number and size of the flues, the length of the shell and the number of pounds pressure maintained all go to determine this point. There are, however, simple rules governing the heating capacity of boilers. This is determined by the heating surface of the boiler, the grate surface and the kind of fuel used. The heating surface in a boiler is that portion of the boiler which is exposed to the direct action of the fire or the heated gases. In practice one square foot of grate surface is allowed for forty feet of heating surface in the boiler when hard coal is used, and one foot of grate surface to eighty feet of heating surface when soft coal is used. One foot of heating surface in a boiler will supply heat for about eight feet of radiation, and one foot of radiation will supply heat for three to nine square feet of glass, depending upon the conditions it is desired to maintain. If you have a specific problem send it in; we may be able to assist you in solving it.

L. C. C.

HOT WATER HEAT.

I have a house even span 30x200 feet, nine feet to ridge, three feet of glass on the sides. I wish to heat it with hot water to maintain 50 degrees when it is 20 below zero outside. With a 3-inch flow how many 2-inch returns will be required.

P. F.

The house under discussion, using hot water at 180 degrees, will require 1,700 square feet of radiating surface to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees during cold weather. That means 2,720 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe, or fourteen returns the length of the house. A 3-inch riser is not large enough to care for this amount of radiation. A 3-inch pipe is capable of supplying only about 900 square feet of radiation. A 4-inch riser will, therefore, be necessary to carry the fourteen runs of 2-inch pipe needed in this house. This presupposes that the boiler has sufficient heating surface to supply the house with water at 180 degrees.

Skinner's Patent System of IRRIGATION.

OF SPECIAL INTEREST TO CARNATION GROWERS WHO HAVE LARGE FIELDS OF PLANTS SUFFERING IN SUMMER DROUGHT.

Under this system we get results that cannot be had under any other method. In the first place we apply the water as uniformly as rain. Secondly, the water is applied so slowly there is no crusting or baking of the soil, and the soil is always loose and porous. This is the reason everything grows so much stronger when watered by our system. Third, we are able to water the whole length of the row at one operation, so that there is no hindrance to cultivation. Fourth, where city water or our gasoline pump is used, there is no time lost in watering; all you have to do is to open the valve and the water is put just where it is wanted. There are many other advantages which we cannot name here but will be glad to explain to anyone interested.

We shall be pleased to send our illustrated circular to all interested and will quote special prices to introduce. Address for further information.....

COST OF HAIL INSURANCE.

Because some of the largest greenhouse establishments north of Chicago are not insured in the Florists' Hail Association it has been argued that the protection is too expensive, but such is not the case. Particularly to the man with a moderate-sized place, possibly representing all his resources, insurance is cheap. For example, a man who has 10,000 feet of glass would pay a membership fee of $6 on joining the association. If his glass is single thick he will pay $8 a year for assessments, if double thick only $6. If he suffers a loss by hail, he gets 5 cents per square foot of single thick glass broken, or 7 cents per square foot for double thick. The association is purely for mutual benefit, so that the expenses are light, the sixteen years' experience showing that insurance has cost the association 64 cents per 1,000 feet of double and 48 cents per 1,000 feet of single thick glass. The result is a very comfortable reserve fund.

Great Fuel Saver

GALENA, ILL., Jan. 28, 1902.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.:—The boiler I bought of you is giving perfect satisfaction. When the thermometer stood at 30 below zero this morning I could hold the temperature at 60 very easily with a saving of at least 25 per cent of coal. It is without a doubt the finest hot water boiler in the land, as it will heat about double the amount of glass that other boilers do with the same amount of coal. It has proved so satisfactory that I must express my feelings.

B. F. VANDERVATE.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1, 1903.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.:—The two No. 4 boilers you installed in my greenhouses at Hartland, Wis., did very satisfactory work last winter. I had been using cast iron boilers previously, but threw them out to put in your steel boilers. Your boilers have done better than I had expected; they require less coal, and much less attention than did the cast iron boilers. I estimate the saving in coal with your boilers was about 15 per cent. To anyone desiring a perfect greenhouse boiler, I would certainly recommend yours.

JAMES A. KIRK.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 27, 1903.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.:—We wish to tell you how much we are pleased with your boiler we put in last fall. It replaced two cast iron boilers, has done the work very much better, requires much less attention, and besides as near as we can judge, will use about 20 per cent less coal than we have been using. This coal item is not compared with only one season, but with at least 20 years' experience with several different kinds of cast iron boilers. We are more than satisfied and have taken pleasure in showing and recommending your boiler to a number of growers.

Novelties In Carnations.

We desire to call particular attention to the following novelties, each of which the most critical growers agree is a great advance over older varieties of the same color:

FLAMINGO. Finest brilliant scarlet yet introduced. Large flower, grand stem, early and continuous bloomer.

MRS. M. A. PATTEN. Finest variegated, will supersede Bradt, which it will out-bloom two to one. Better in stem and more pleasing variegation.

WHITE LAWSON. True sport of Lawson and like it in every respect except that it is pure white.

DAHEIM. Extra fine crimson variety, fully as large as Lawson. Grand stem, brilliant color, ideal habit, early bloomer. Will supersede other crimsons.

Price of above Big Four, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. There is sure to be a large demand; orders filled in rotation; it will pay you to book orders without delay.

CONVENTION ECHOES.

THE DETROIT CONVENTION.

Your issue of last week so fully covers every feature of the late convention, Mr. Editor, that perhaps little of importance can be added. Yet the writer was so pleased with every phase of it that he would like to comment on a few impressions.

President Rackham told the writer that he (W. S.) always saw that the last exhibition far surpassed all previous ones. Perhaps I have had good reasons to say this on previous occasions, but never with more sincerity than at Detroit. Think of the evolution, both in quantity and quality of the blooms displayed, since the first exhibition held in Buffalo some fourteen years ago! This marvelous progress has not been made in one or two leaps; it has been steady progress and if you will compare the display at Detroit with the first held by the society, you must admit that there has been ample room for each succeeding display to have eclipsed its immediate and all other preceding exhibitions.

But it was not alone of the beautiful display of carnations that we shall all have the most pleasant recollections of the Detroit convention, or yet of the right good fellowship and splendid hospitality shown us; it was of the business proceedings as well; of the executive port of the judges. This is a new record and is to be attributed to a greatly improved method of judging as well as a great reform in entering and ticketing exhibits.

Where so many grand varieties are shown, it is indeed difficult to say what we shall grow. Fortunate is the man who can try many of them. One thing is sure, if you cannot give the very newest a trial you can strive to grow your very best, varieties that were sent out last year and two and three years ago, for there were magnificent samples of some that are beginning to be called old varieties. I will not pretend to mention all, or half, the varieties staged, but only those that mostly impressed me, and in doing that many beautiful varieties are missed.

Fiancee deservedly took the Lawson gold medal. If I were inclined to slang, I should say "She's a bute." Indianapolis is a grand bright pink and showed up well, with a splendid stem. Judge Hinsdale is a splendid white variegated, great form and stem. Lady Bountiful is a beautiful white and so Alba proves itself to be when rightly grown. Ethel Ward is a most beautiful shade of pink and bound to be a favorite. The Cardinal took the first prize for 100 scarlet; it's a wonder. The President we think far surpasses all previous efforts of Mr.

Fred Burki, shown by John Murchie, is a most beautiful white. The red sport of Lawson, shown by W. J. Palmer, was much thought of and demonstrated its fine keeping qualities. W. J. & M. S. Vesey staged a fine pink. There were others.

Now, if you will look at the premium winners, you will notice some comparatively old as well as newer varieties carrying off the honors. Enchantress is alone in its class. Adonis when well grown is yet the grandest scarlet. Lawson, Estelle, Wolcott, old White Cloud, Morning Glory, Cressbrook, Mrs. Nelson, Marshall Field, Gov. Lowndes, Stella and, of course, Prosperity, all showed up in fine style, which only goes to show that if a variety does well with you it is foolish to discard it. What some may fail with others can do finely.

That vase of Chatenay roses was a beauty and if we can grow it as Peter Reinberg does it's a great acquisition. La Detroit had the place of honor, and fine as this rose looked the first day it was far more beautiful the second and when that armful almost smothered Mrs. Vesey at the banquet, the rose had a beautiful setting and there was a mutual enhancement of charms. Frank Holznagle's vase of Bride and Bridesmaid roses were of the very highest quality.

J. A. Peterson's large-flowered type of Gloire de Lorraine is certainly a fine thing and his Primula obconica were splendid plants. The sweet peas shown by William Sim, all the way from Massachusetts, were phenomenal, and the new single violet raised and shown by H. R. Carlton is a beautiful deep blue. And now I must close on exhibits, or ability shown by the president of the society, as well as the manager of the exhibition and all members of the Detroit Club who had duties to perform. We knew well it would be so.

In spite of delayed trains from several directions, all exhibits were ready at the appointed hour and the judges could go to work, and they did, and the same evening the secretary was able to give the convention a complete re-

Ward in the line of crimsons. It is a perfect flower. That grand crimson, Harlowarden, we have seen in better form. We know from experience that it's a splendid crimson and easy to grow.

The only preliminary certificate was given C. W. Ward's scarlet, No. 303. We are bound to hear much of this wonderful flower. Watch it. In the certificate class the display was strong.

you will close me out, and jot down things that made this convention memorable.

That address of welcome by Mayor Maybury was truly a peach of the large, juicy Crawford variety and every sentence of it should have been published. There were allusions to the influence of flowers and our association with them in our calling that were touching and beautiful and should make us all proud to be horticulturists. That eloquence was not easy to respond to and the one chosen to respond suffered sadly in comparison.

Brother Rudd's essay on "The Management of Flower Shows" covered the whole ground from A to Z and as he is a past master as a manager, it was greatly enjoyed and will be many times referred to for assistance by men undertaking such duties. We never knew this classical gentleman from Chicago in better voice or more graceful in his delivery. Little discussion ensued because it could not be criticised, except by John F. Sullivan, who in commending Mr. Rudd's paper very smartly gave a jar to some exhibitors who had every chance to stage their flowers on time, but through indolence and carelessness did not, and caused needless anxiety and hard work to the manager.

The essay by William Scott was rather radical and socialistic in its propositions and brought down on his bald head a good deal of abuse from the leading lights of the society. It gave rise to lots of debate and the criticisms and ridicule that were heaped on him were greatly enjoyed by himself and his fearless champion, Mr. Altick. I would rather be right than be Carrie Nation.

The meetings were well attended. They were snappy, lively and interesting and George A. Rackham has not only been an ideal president from the day he was elected, but he is a clean-cut, decisive chairman.

Of course you all realize that in electing James Hartshorne as president you did exactly the right thing. His election was a foregone conclusion, because he deserved the honor. He has been a loyal supporter of the society, always a large exhibitor and I am glad to say at Detroit a very large prize winner.

The banquet on Thursday evening was enjoyed immensely by everyone who had the good fortune to be present and I am truly sorry for the few who thought they must leave for home, or somewhere else, before the hour for the delightful function. Like my notes on the carnations, I don't assume to speak of all who added to the pleasure of the evening, for they were many. Who cares much for the menu? If they do, the most delicious viands were there. But pork and beans is a banquet if you are hungry. It was "the feast of reason and flow of soul" that we were hungry for, and a feast we got in both these attributes of man and woman that distinguish us chiefly from the lower animals.

The instrumental music was delightful and the high-toned vaudeville that was sandwiched in between speakers was greatly enjoyed. That wonderful baritone that stood right behind the writer when singing, actually made the few gray hairs left stand up straight. The musical events that were the surprise and pleasure to me of the whole evening, were the two selections from the "Bohemian Girl" by Walter Mott, of Jamestown, N. Y. We can remember when Walter's performance was good enough for an English "free and easy." Now he will do for grand opera, such will study and practice do. The only number I did not enjoy was the robust blonde in the coon songs. Let's have sweet woman as feminine as possible, or what she should be, and let the coarser sex portray the lower civilization.

I can single out none of the speakers above another, for they were all good. E. G. Hill never was in better form and is more and more becoming a humorist. The word picture of the spotted cow sitting on the thistle bush and singing like a bird and talking like E. G. H. was very realistic. W. S. told about oily rubber trees and other things. Mr. Altick gave us an earnest talk on the McKinley league. He deserves the greatest credit for the hard work he is shouldering in this patriotic cause.

Mr. Ulrich, of Tiffin, Ohio, who is blessed with a splendid voice, talked on the benefits of our society and its meetings under the head of "Did It Ever Occur to You," and it was very evident that many fine thoughts had occurred to him. A most beautiful address was that by Dr. Smith, an honorary member of the Detroit Florists' Club. He began with the scientific and chemical and physical benefits of plant culture and finished with the spiritual and moral blessing of flowers as he had seen their effects on the bereaved, the sick and even on the convict. His talk was indeed a treat.

Then there came sturdy John F. Sullivan, who loudly and ably proclaimed the blessings of florists' clubs and what they had done for Detroit. Very gracefully did the president of the S. A. F., Phil. Breitmeyer, thank all of us for being present and asked for a good attendance and support at St. Louis. Then Alex. Wallace sang one of his good Scotch songs. Then to the delight and surprise of many, we listened to a witty, clever, modest talk by Mrs. Judge Vessey, of Fort Wayne. No wonder the judge—well, he is a lucky man. Then Mr. Thompson presented a beautiful cup to Mr. Partridge, who feelingly thanked him and the society. The chairman then presented the president-elect, Harts-horne, the magnificent Lawson Gold Medal and after some remarks, which surely came from his heart, he most graciously handed the beautiful medal to Fred Dorner, Jr., for it was that gentlemen's firm which raised the lovely Fiancee. Mr. Rackham made a fine address on the carnations of the past, and the last, but not least by a jugful, we were kept in roars of laughter by a ten-minute yarn from the wit of the society, Mr. Peirce, of Waltham, Mass. More of this great old man hereafter.

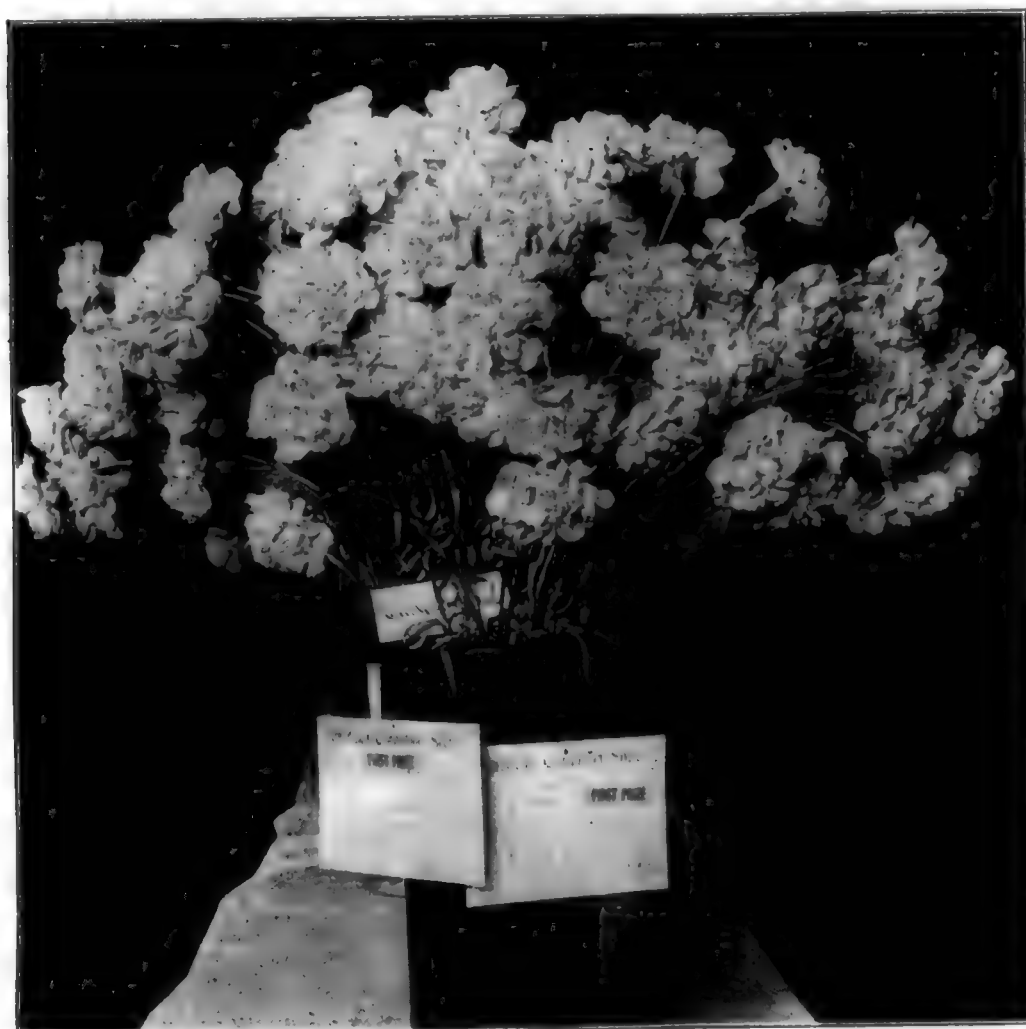

Mr. Flowerday, as toastmaster of the evening, was ideal in his position, and here endeth my notes of a convention that has never been surpassed in exhibition, in business and in pleasure in the history of our good society.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

NOTES ON VARIETIES.

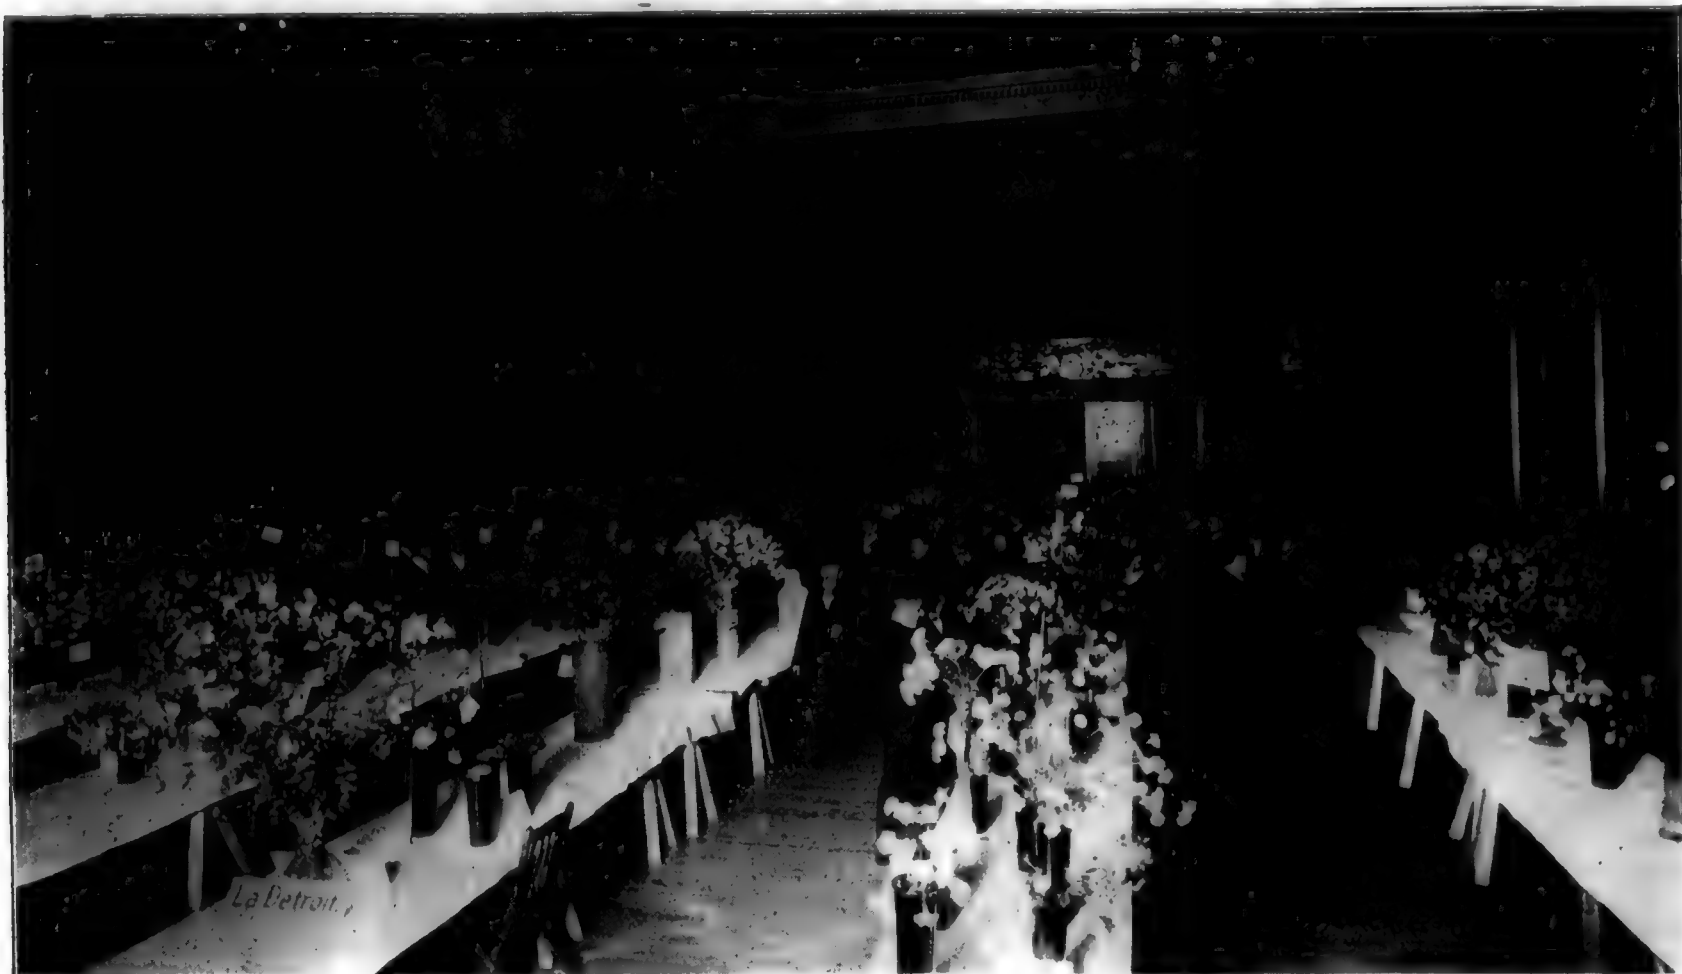

You have had in last week's issue a complete report of the awards at the Detroit convention, and so I will merely give you a few notes on the impressions gained while looking over the exhibition during the two days. In the first place I want to say that Mr. Sullivan made a good exhibition manager, as good as we have ever had and better than most. The arrangement was good and everything was so well planned that no confusion was possible. All the vases competing in the same class were set together and the judges had no trouble in finding all the entries in each class. This idea should be adopted at all the exhibitions in the future. So well was everything planned that by the time specified in the premium list every exhibit was in place, something very unusual.

The average quality of the blooms was very high indeed. There were very few that would not have stood a good show for first money at most exhibitions and many a vase that was almost good enough for a first premium had to drop back into the "also ran" class. Competition was very keen and in many classes the judges had a hard job to decide. I was told by one of the judges that it took them fully fifteen minutes to decide between two vases of fifty blooms and even then there was room for doubt. There never was more universal satisfaction with the judges' report than this year, which speaks well for their ability.

W. K. Partridge's Vase of Carnation Enchantress.

(The only vase in the show which took two first premiums.)

Most of the blooms came through in good shape and were in good condition when staged, due to the moderate weather and arrival on schedule time. Overfeeding was very apparent in the exhibits of several firms and several learned a lesson at a high cost. One firm had several thousand blooms, most of which were asleep within three hours after unpacking. No other reason than overfeeding could be given, as blooms which came from the same locality and others shipped much farther held up until the very last. This has suggested to my mind that there ought to be some arrangement whereby the vases that show up best by noon of the second day should receive some kind of premium. The keeping quality of the carnation is one of its good points and a little more attention should be paid to it.

One of the surprises was the fine showing made by Adonis. Judging by the reports of its behavior the past winter no one expected it to make more than just an average showing, but it was almost the only variety shown in the scarlet classes and it carried away nearly all the premiums. The vase of 200 shown by the E. G. Hill Co. easily carried away that premium, although those blooms were the ones left after the flowers for the fifty and 100 classes had been selected.

Mrs. Lawson showed that it is still to be reckoned with when a deep pink is wanted and it is grown properly. It was the only variety shown in that class except Dorner's Eclipse, which took the second premium, and Thompson's Nelson Fisher.

Enchantress was shown in all stages, good, bad and indifferent. This variety showed more than any other the effects of overfeeding. One firm had hundreds of blooms and all went to sleep within a few hours, while on the other hand the 100 blooms staged by W. K. Partridge held up fine to the close of the show. Harlowarden was it in the crimson classes, while Dorothy Whitney had her own way in the yellow classes. These facts certainly prove one thing and that is that the carnation is being greatly improved. Almost without exception the premiums were captured by varieties of very recent introduction and many of them are not on the market yet.

Most of the varieties being disseminated this year were shown in fine shape and if any of them failed to win in their class it was not because the blooms were not fine, but simply because another lot of blooms was still finer. In white Lady Bountiful and The Belle from Dorner's were grand. F. Burki, from J. Murchie, looks like a good thing. Mr. May's exhibit would have been helped by another day on the plants. All these were way ahead of the other whites, except Alba, from the C. C. Co., which took first prize.

In pink Ethel Ward looked well and captured first in its class. Our own Indianapolis was not entered for competition, but it won many friends by its fine color and keeping qualities. Nelson Fisher was too soft and went to sleep. In red we expected to see Flamingo sweep the boards, but not a bloom was seen at the show. Crusader was fine. In variegated Mrs. Patten was very fine and so was Judge Hinsdale. Ward's crimson, The President, has the best color and form of all the crimsons up to date. F. R. Pierson's Daheim was asleep when it arrived. H. Weber & Sons' New Daybreak showed up very fine and should make a good variety.

There were a good many seedlings shown and among them were some grand things. Some competed for premiums and won out over the standard varieties. Fiancee easily distanced all others. Cardinal was shown in fine shape and took first in 100 scarlet. We would like to have seen this and Flamingo side by side. Richmond Gem won a certificate with its fine color. This should prove a good bread-winner. J. E. Haines is a fine large scarlet, which I want to see more of. Dailedouze Bros.' No. 144 is certainly a grand thing. They were the largest blooms in the hall and attracted a great deal of attention. No. 1000A, by Witterstaetter, is also a fine thing, so fine that the judges could not decide which was the better, this or Dailedouze's white. Mrs. Vesey brought a variegated seedling that was grand, except that it lacked a little in the stem. Red Lawson was shown by Palmer & Son and it looked nice by night, a trifle dull by daylight. Eclipse, a pink shown by Dorner, is a very fine thing; it took second in the 100 Lawson shade. Phyllis came in poor shape and was not scored. After seeing it in fine shape last fall, I did not recognize it at all. There were many others of more or less promise, but the above looked the best to me.

On Friday a number of us went to F. Holznagle's, one of the neatest places I have ever seen. The stock is all in fine shape, as is proven by the fine vase of roses he brought to the show. There is a house of Lawson that is fine and another house of mixed varieties, all fine.

On the way home Mrs. B. and myself stopped off at Lafayette, where Lady Bountiful and The Belle reside. Both are enjoying the best of health and prosperity, and it was a delight to look over several benches of each. The set of novelties they are sending out is certainly very attractive and just the thing for the retailer. Of seedlings there are thousands and of course some very fine ones. Of Eclipse there is a whole bench and if it keeps up it is to go out next year, I understand. A. F. J. BAUR.

CONVENTION JOTTINGS.

The trip to Mt. Clemens was one of the pleasantest features of the convention. The Breitmeyer's Sons provided a special train for the party, which numbered about 200. Carriages were at the station to take the ladies to the greenhouses, and it was only a pleasant walk for the men, sharpening appetites for the buffet lunch which was ready, including the famous Breitmeyer home-made wine. After the refreshments had been partaken of the party broke up into squads for a tour of the greenhouses. Everything was in fine shape but of course the principal interest was in the new rose, La Detroit. The condition of the stock plants and of the young stock shortly to be distributed was favorably commented on. Practically every grower who visited Detroit will try the rose next year. On the end greenhouse was a line of C. W. Skinner's pipe for field irrigation. Mr. Skinner was on hand to show it working and all the growers were much interested. Returning to the city, the party was in season for the afternoon trains, President Breitmeyer and the S. A. F. executive committee going to St. Louis and most of the others to their homes.

Among the seedlings of more or less distinctiveness and merit staged at Detroit of which there was no mention in the judge's report, were the following:

A good yellow, No. 14, from H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md.; No. 12, a good white from Frank Holznagle, Detroit; J. E. Smith, a red, from Baur & Smith, Indianapolis; a fine white in which was a card of F. B. Stroup, New Philadelphia, Pa.; four varieties from John Hartje, Indianapolis; the good yellow, Star of Bethlehem and others by J. E. Haines, which had a rough journey; Helen Bosler, a promising yellow variegated from Geo. Guignet, Carlisle, Pa.; Glendale and Gen. Wayne, from W. J. & M. S. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind.

As once was said, "fools rush in where angels fear to tread." Certainly there was some surprise at the way the sparks flew when one or two venturesome or, more likely, thoughtless ones crossed swords with E. N. Peirce, of Waltham. "Farmer" Peirce (pronounced Purse), they call him down Waltham way. In many respects he is the typical Yankee, and a keener wit has not enlivened a convention in many a day. "I am not a speech-maker," was his usual way of concluding his remarks. "I know what I wanted to say; I don't know whether I've said it or not." Opinion was usually unanimous that he had.

On the train from Detroit to Mt. Clemens last Friday morning C. W. Ward announced that he had sold a half interest in his unnamed brilliant vermilion scarlet, No. 303, to the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. for $10,000. It will be distributed jointly in 1906 and it is stated that in the meantime no plants will be sent out for trial. It is from Lawson crossed with a pedigreed scarlet from a line of Maceo seedlings. It has the Lawson habit, the flower a little larger than that variety. It scored 92 points for a preliminary certificate at Detroit.

The Thompson Carnation Co. brought about 4,000 blooms to the exhibition. They were in fine shape when unpacked but many varieties went to sleep before they could be staged and others before judging. Mr. Thompson asks that attention be called to the hard luck which overtook his stock in explanation of his failing to take any first premiums. Rudd's Phyllis also went to sleep, and it has a reputation as a keeper. The grower says it was because it recently got too heavy a dose of wood ashes.

C. W. Ward is much interested in Carnation Glacier. It originated on his place but did not do well and was only sent out because Arthur Herrington urged it, after trying it at Florham Farms. It has done finely in Canada and in several other sections and is now working its way back into the neighborhood from which it was disseminated. There was a fine bench of it at Breitmeyer's and several growers decided on the spot to drop a bench of Flora Hill and put in Glacier for another trial.

The Detroit Florists' Club did itself proud at the banquet Thursday evening. It was a fitting finale for a most efficiently managed convention. Messrs. Rackham, Flowerday and Sullivan, as leaders in the work, have every reason to feel satisfied with success which crowned their efforts, and they were well backed up by their club members, every one of whom put a shoulder to the wheel.

Many comments were made on the sleepiness of the stock, some contending that there was something wrong with the atmosphere in the hall. Fred Dorner said he laid the sleepiness to the long continued cold weather which has made ventilation both difficult and expensive all winter. Others pointed out that it was the flowers of those notorious for high feeding which were sleepest.

E. G. Hill prefaced his toast at the banquet with the statement that it is not on record that a gardener ever made a speech. Twenty minutes later it was the unanimous opinion that now, at least, a gardener had made a speech of which any orator might be proud. It was the gem of the evening.

The statement that J. A. Valentine, E. G. Hill and Eugene Dailedouze were appointed a committee on "affiliation" with the Rose Society hardly covers the ground. The idea is to get the Rose Society to hold its meeting and exhibition at Chicago on the same dates as the carnation meeting.

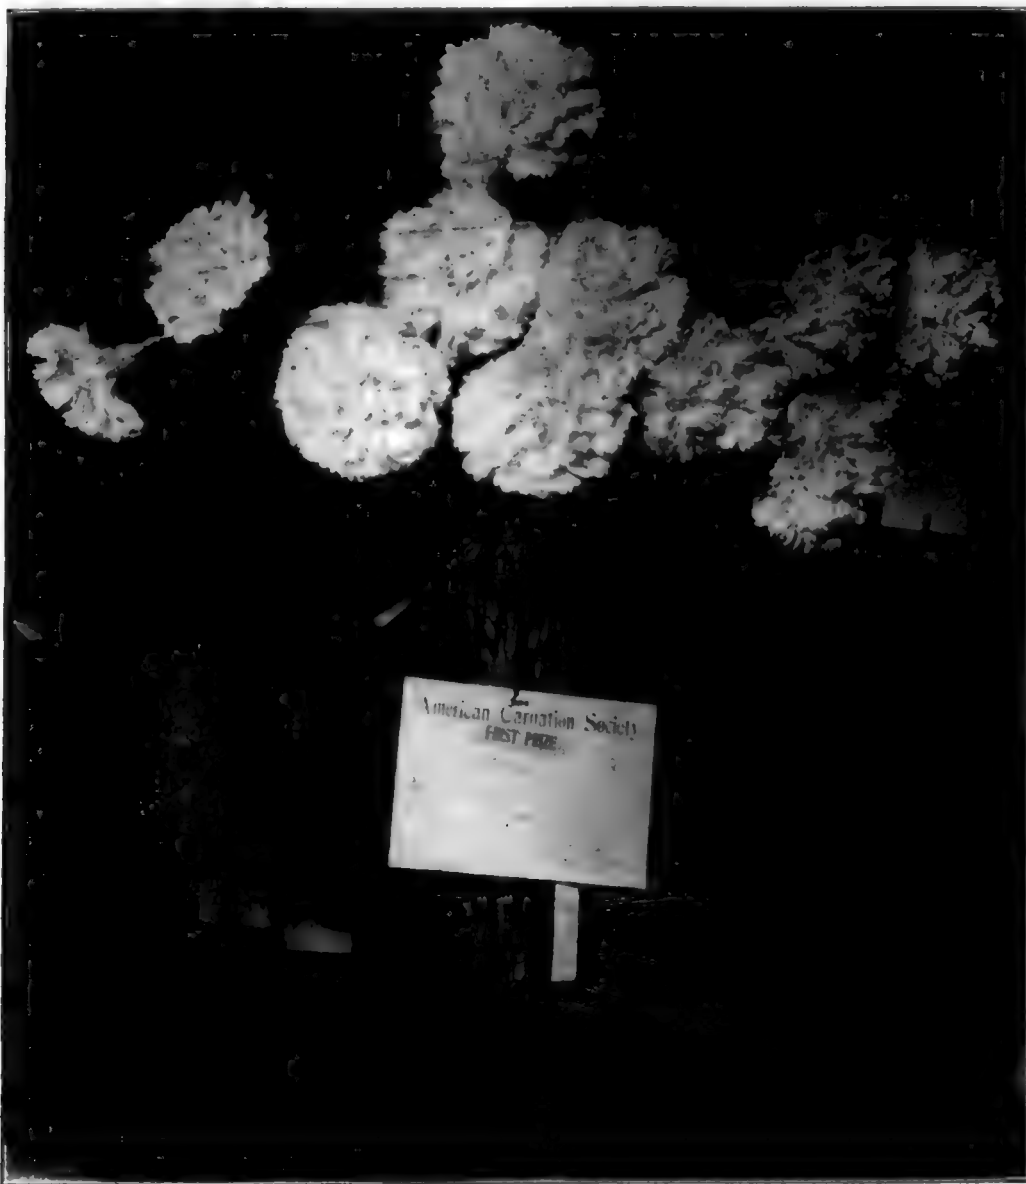

Wm. Swayne, of Kennett Square, says that as soon as he began to use young, soft cuttings he had no trouble rooting Adonis. C. W. Ward and E. G. Hill both agreed with this and said they had not lost one per cent of their Adonis cuttings this year.

W. J. Smyth, the well known Chicago retailer, put up the prize winning vase of 200 Adonis for E. G. Hill. It was a credit to his skill and there are those who said it simplified the work of the judges.

Fiancee is a great keeper. Mr. Hartshorne says that he began picking blooms February 15 to 20 for his exhibit that won the gold medal March 2. Fiancee has no pollen.

Many were the admirers of a bench of the old rose, Mme. Hoste, found at Breitmeyer's. Phil Breitmeyer says that it has been about the most profitable bench on the place this season.

The show was proof of a general improvement in cultural methods. Every section now has its grower who has adopted the most enlightened methods and others are following his leadership.

Lady Bountiful was pretty close to the best vase in the class for 100 white and it is noteworthy that the Dorners were the raisers of Alba, the winning variety.

It is stated that F. Dorner & Sons Co. had sold to February 1 more cuttings of Lady Bountiful than the total sales of any other carnation the firm ever sent out.

Grandpa Hill is proud of the way Adonis is vindicating his judgment, but he talks more about that nine-months-old son of Flora Hill Lemon.

It was a graceful act of James Harts-horne to present the Lawson gold medal to Fred Dorner as the raiser of Fiancee.

C. L. Washburn liked the looks of John Murchie's new white, named for Fred Burki.

MRS. LAWSON.

It is nearly time for planting outdoors. Please answer through your columns a few things about carnations. Do you think it advisable to grow Lawson entirely in the house or would it be better to let it go to the field for four months? In transplanting, which is best, to take the pot dirt from the roots or leave the ball on them? Last year our soils all got very hard. It was all we could do to keep them from baking. However, it was an unusually bad spring.

T. N. C.

Most of the successful growers of Lawson grow their plants of this variety indoors through the summer, and I think I can safely say that none of them leave it in the field as long as four months. If grown in the field during the summer it must be housed extra early if you expect to get a decent stem by Christmas, and even with early housing the stem will be shorter than when grown inside. Lawson is one of the varieties that does not like a check of any kind, and especially when the weather is hot. That is what causes the stems to come so short if the growth is checked after the plant has gotten into a vigorous growth and the later in the growing season that this check occurs the less chance the plant has to regain its former vigor. When housed very early the plants become established and started into a vigorous growth before winter, and the crop from a vigorous growing plant surely must be better than the crop from a plant that is just trying to get established.

When lifting plants from the field we nearly always try to hold a ball of soil on the roots as large as your fist, and we do not care whether all or only one-third of this ball was brought out of the greenhouse. That soil is not so much for the plants to feed on as it is to save the roots from being broken and to supply them with moisture while they are being transferred to their new quarters. In short, it is supposed to prevent a complete cessation in the growth of the plant while it is being planted into its new quarters. As soon as the roots take hold of the new soil they spread out in every direction, and come up to the surface or wherever they can find food, and it will make very little difference to the plants whether the soil right at the base of the plant is new soil or old, as the real feeding roots are those farthest away from the plant. Those that will be in the soil you brought in are the anchors that hold the plant in its upright position.

ROSES.

The Easter Crop.

As Easter draws near we will be getting anxious as to whether our crops of Beauties and other roses will be on time, as a few days too late with this harvest means a good deal financially to the grower.

Many are the schemes adopted to hasten crops which at this season show a tardiness in forming buds. Beauties particularly require a great deal of thoughtfulness and care to prepare them to come to time. Where these are showing a tendency to run to wood rather than to form buds it may be well to run them rather on the dry side for a week, but never so dry that the soft tips show signs of wilting. If this is allowed to take place the buds will come deformed and many of them little more than singles.

Plenty of ventilation during sunny weather and judicious feeding with liquid manure has a tendency to hasten the formation of buds and to perfect their development. To the ordinary liquid food an addition of liquor of ammonia can be made at this season with advantage, but this must be used with caution, as it is very strong and frequently varies considerably in strength. One ounce to four gallons of water is a safe proportion. Nitrate of soda has also a very beneficial effect and is very rapid in its action. Bride, Bridesmaid and Ivory, not being such gross feeders as Beauties, should have these stimulants slightly reduced in strength.

As the days are lengthening, with a longer duration of sunshine, an increase in temperature of 5 or 6 degrees during the night, when deemed necessary to push them along, will do considerably less damage than would be accompanied by a rise of 2 degrees before the Christmas holidays, as the possible admission of plenty of air will keep the foliage in tone.

By allowing the temperature during bright weather to rise a few degrees above the normal for such days the buds will develop more rapidly without the slightest danger of injury to either foliage or buds, provided there is plenty of ventilation and a sufficiency of moisture in the atmosphere. A careful inspection daily will determine the amount of heat necessary to bring them to perfection in time for the Easter market.

If the crops show signs of developing too rapidly and require retarding, a gradual lowering of the temperature accompanied by free ventilation will have the desired effect. This drop in temperature, if not carefully administered and well regulated, may be the means of introducing a dose of mildew which from now on, owing to less heat being used, will be the more difficult to get rid of and should therefore be carefully guarded against.

By careful study and calculation, these crops can be brought closely up to time and shipped to our customers just in the right condition, which is more satisfactory than to have to ship soft, poorly developed blooms, or to have to resort to the pickling process. RIBES.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Cannas.

It will soon be time to start the cannas. There is nothing like having good, strong plants. They need take up but little room on your benches until after Easter, when you will have plenty of room to pot them. Years ago we used to put the dormant roots of these and caladiums at once into 4 or 5-inch pots, occupying much space, and they did not start as quickly or surely as they do by a more modern and better plan. Trusting that the clump of roots dug in the fall and stored beneath a bench have kept sound, divide them now. A piece of root with one good eye or bud is enough to make a fine plant, but sometimes two eyes can be left to advantage. If the root is found, in cutting it up, to be the least unsound, don't save it; its only waste of labor.

In a light house where the temperature is 55 to 60 degrees at night and on a bench preferably with heating pipes beneath it, spread an inch of sphagnum moss, or cocoanut fiber will do just as well. Then place your canna roots. They can be set quite closely together, for they are only to remain there three or four weeks, or until they make a start to grow and a few roots. Shake over them a little sphagnum or the fiber, just about enough to hide the roots. Keep the moss just moist only, and in two or three weeks all the sound pieces will have sent out roots, a growth will have started and then they will need potting in a 4 or 5-inch pot, or whatever size you want to sell them from. We try to grow them all in 4-inch pots, but some of the coarser growing varieties may be better if given a 5-inch. With this start of root growth they have made in the moss, they will continue to grow without a halt when potted, and any that do not start in the moss you have wasted little labor or space over.

Too often we see cannas grown in the month of May in a shaded house. They never should have shade at any time. A bright, warm, sunny house is the place for them, and, even tropical plant as they are, I would rather have them without fire heat in the month of May, than have them under a heavy shade.

Caladiums.

The Caladium esculentum is another of our sub-tropical garden plants that can soon be started. Don't buy large bulbs. One from two to three inches in diameter is large enough to make the finest growth and leaves. Put an inch of rotted manure in the bottom of a bulb flat and place the caladiums on it, about two inches apart, and then fill in between bulbs with sand. If you can place the flats over some bottom heat, so much the better. You can always find a place a foot or so above a coil of steam or hot water pipes. Light is not wanted when starting them, but heat and moisture are, and almost at once will an abundance of roots be made. Two weeks of this treatment will put the caladiums farther ahead than six weeks in a 5-inch pot on a cool bench, and you have saved a lot of bench room. They will, of course, need potting in three or four weeks.

I don't think there is any fear of these sub-tropical plants, particularly the canna, losing any of their popularity. Ever since the advent of the beautiful Orozy varieties, known as the flowering cannas, to distinguish them from the old varieties, which were grown entirely for the beauty of the foliage, their flowers being unattractive, there have yearly been given to us some beautiful varieties. Yet as in all our florists' flowers, a few old varieties are still favorites. We now have almost all shades of color except blue, and some that do not exceed two feet in height, like that brilliant scarlet, The Express, to Kate Gray towering eight feet high.

Tuberose.

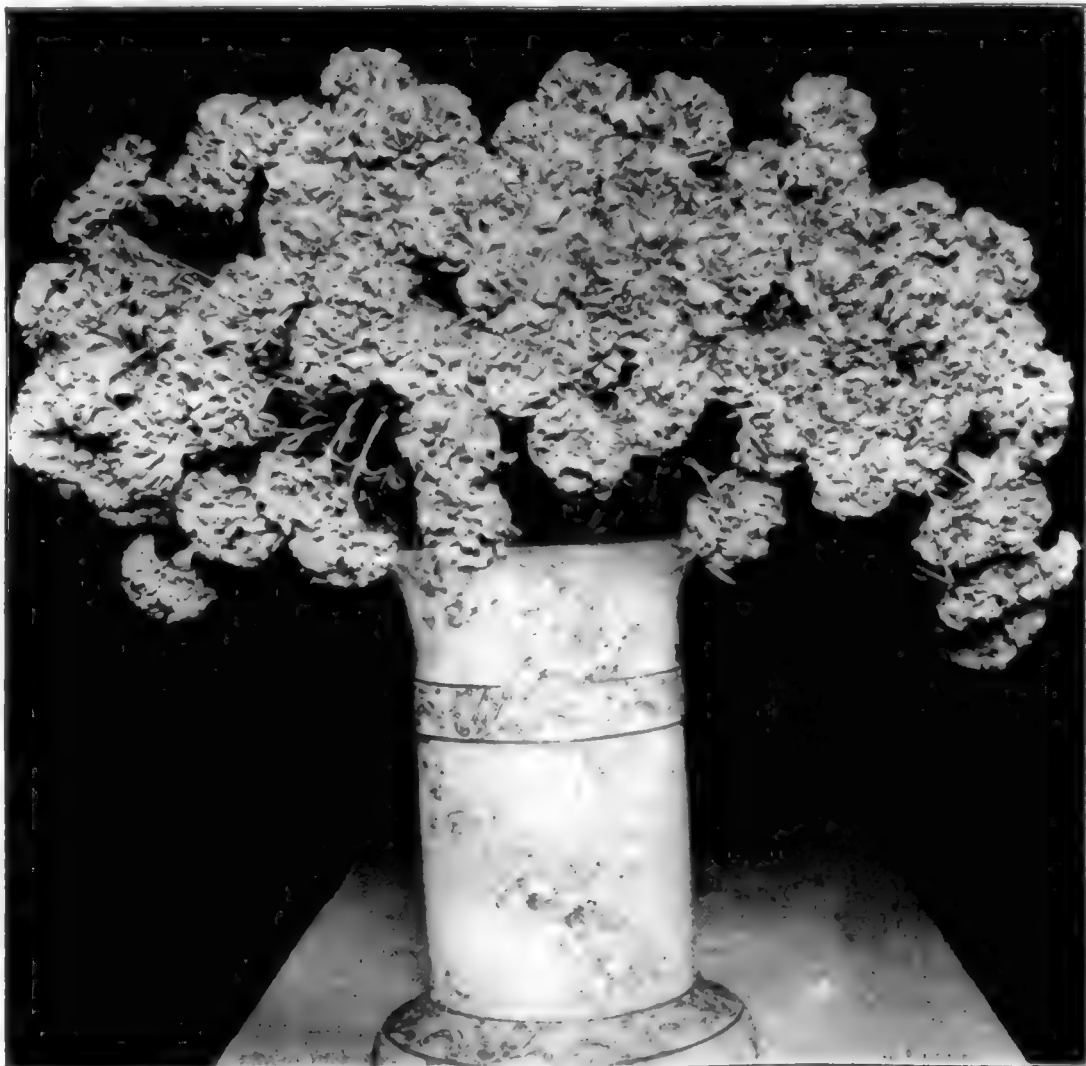

We do not have much use for tuberose nowadays, although the prejudice against them, which has existed for some years, is slowly wearing away. We are always wanting them to sell for our customers' gardens. They, also, can be started in the same way as described for caladiums, in flats of two or three inches of sand or sand and leaf mold, only don't put the bulb more than half its depth in the compost. Place them deeper in the soil when you put them in the 4-inch pots.

They will quickly start to make roots in the flats if given a little bottom heat, and once more you will save bench room. If for flowering in the greenhouse you can start some at once. If you only want them as a flower garden plant, April 1 is soon enough, because after removing from the flats and potting them, there is no place that suits them better or produces more sturdy plants than a mild hotbed.

Asters.

The middle of this month will be time for a large sowing of asters, which of late years have taken rank among the leading summer and fall florists' flowers. I am not going to say which variety or type to grow. If your business warrants it, you need to grow the early Queen of the Market, to be followed by the Comet and Truffaut's Paeony Flowered, and later still come the large-flowered, branching varieties that have been so greatly developed the past ten years. Don't think I mean that these varieties should be sown at different times. You may want a successional crop of any of them, but remember that if Boston or Queen of the Market and Semple's Branching were sown the same day the Queen of the Market would be cut and gone six weeks before Semple's showed the color of its petals.

Time was within the memory of many of us when it was thought impossible to get a good strain of aster seed unless it was imported in sealed packets from continental Europe at a most tony price. That time is past and our climate and our aster specialists provide us with the best of seed. For that matter, we have in this neighborhood a young man who has the right land, and right industry, and who brings into the town the finest asters the writer ever saw in any land, and for ten years he has saved his own seed. We can all do it. It's merely a matter of selection. Yet I believe in division of labor, let the specialist supply you with seed.

Seed Sowing.

It is a long time since I have given my little talk on sowing seeds, and I hesitate to do so now, for it is like repeating an old story to the same old audience. But a few strangers have joined the audience, and so the old heads can look the other way.

I always did and always will consider that raising plants from seed (I allude particularly to our florists' flowers and plants) calls for the greatest skill, the greatest care and watchfulness of any of our florists' operations. We have any amount of young and old men calling themselves gardeners, who can stand up at the bench and pot or shift plants very proficiently, but few can be trusted to sow and care for the seeds of cineraria or begonia, or even asters and coarser seeds. Whatever soil may suit a plant in its future or maturer state, it is sure that a light or friable soil is what it needs to germinate in, for in nature a seed dropping from the parent plant or carried by the winds to a resting place, would not bury itself in the soil, but would merely be covered, if covered at all, by the decayed leaves of the year before. So make the compost for your seed flats light, either with the addition of sifted rotten manure or leaf mold or, what is excellent, well decayed refuse hops.

For asters and that kind of plants I prefer flats two inches in depth, putting one inch of coarse soil or manure in the bottom and filling up with an inch of the prepared, sifted compost. Make the surface as level as you can and press down with a smooth board, slightly, firmly and evenly. Then place your flats or seed pans on the floor and with a fine sprinkling rose water these flats till you think all the soil is moist. In ten minutes or so this watering will have soaked away and you can begin to sow. After the seed is sown another gentle pressure of the board imbeds the seed and you are ready for the covering of finely sifted soil. This last covering needs but the slightest wetting, which will not wash the seeds, as it would if you had to water sufficient to wet to a depth of two inches.

Somebody once said that a good rule was to cover seed the depth of its own thickness. This would mean that begonia or calceolaria should not be covered at all, which is about true. And the aster, phlox or seeds of that size should be just covered enough to hide them. Although we know there are many exceptions to this, a grain of wheat will force itself through soil forty times its thickness and an acorn will germinate in the forest with no covering. Just covered out of sight will do very well for nearly all our annuals except those minute seeds that you dare not attempt to cover at all.

A uniform moisture of the soil is the great essential until the seeds are well up through the soil, and after that full light, so that the little seedlings do not draw up spindling, is another. I meant to add earlier that we are all inclined to sow almost everything too thickly. Sow thinly. My chapter is now so long that I will ask permission to say something about the care of seedlings and their transplanting in our next.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

GREENFLY OR APHIS.

I have noticed several complaints in your paper concerning the aphis or greenfly, which seems to give so much trouble to many florists and gardeners. We used to have great trouble with them, especially on roses and sweet pea vines planted outside. The plants being in the open air, we could not use tobacco smoke to advantage. We tried kerosene emulsion, but found that if we used it strong enough to kill the aphides the plants were burned by the solution.

As some of our roses were rather small, we began feeding them nitrate of soda, and in so doing discovered a sure remedy against greenfly or aphis. A few days after the first application of nitrate we noticed that the aphides had disappeared. On looking over the plants we found the bodies of a few of them. They were of a light brown color and were all dead.

We next tried the nitrate on the pea vines, and drove the pest from them also. The past year we had a bed of Helen Gould roses which became infested with greenfly; we applied nitrate and in two weeks they had all disappeared. The remedy is much easier applied in greenhouses than tobacco smoke. It does not discolor the flowers and is cheap.

In explanation, the aphides seem to go only to those plants which are not growing well or, in the case of roses, to those which have been attacked by black spot or mildew. The aphis will not suck the sap of a healthy plant. Nitrate of soda furnishes nitrogen in a quickly available form, the results from its use being seen in twenty-four hours. It purifies the sap of the plant and starts it into vigorous growth. Its presence in the sap seems to be poison to the aphides.

We use one tablespoonful to a twelve quart pail of water, giving the plants a thorough watering. A second application should be given in about two weeks if necessary. Rose growers especially should try this remedy and see for themselves.

RAY H. PALMER.

MOSS EVERYWHERE.

Would you please let me know through your valuable paper the reason why all the pots and the soil in them in my greenhouses are covered with a thick layer of moss.

W. G.

It is almost impossible in a few months for a thick layer of moss to grow on either soil or pots, and a few months is as long as the majority of our greenhouse plants occupy the same pot. We have seen azaleas and camellias and other so-called hard-wooded plants occupying the same pot for years become moss grown on the surface of the soil, and the pots green with another species of "moss." The word moss covers a multitude of humble plants, perhaps thousands of species.

The old oaken bucket that hangs in the well, the poet tells us, was covered with moss but there is no authentic information as to whether that dear old vessel that elevated this temperance drink was enshrouded with sphagnum, Iceland moss or Selaginella denticulata.

Want of drainage is one of the principal causes of moss growing either on the soil of greenhouse plants or in pastures outside. If sod taken from a low, undrained piece of ground is used for any of our indoor crops, moss will be sure to appear. The damp exterior surface of our common flower pots is an excellent medium for the ever present spores of these low plant organisms to vegetate and the surface of the soil in a poorly drained plant constantly moist is another. Briefly, I would say want of proper ventilation and an unhealthy dampness is the main cause of moss on soil and pots and free circulation with a healthy atmosphere the best preventive. W. S.

ROSE STOCKS.

Can roses for greenhouse culture be grafted on hardy northern-grown wild roses and give the same result as grafted on Manetti stock? We have unlimited quantities of the former here and can use first-class stock. A. N.

This is a question that could be answered by simply saying to A. N., try some stock of your native roses and you will soon find out whether it is practical and would pay. In western New York our wild roses are not found in such quantities that it would begin to pay. There is no doubt that if you had stocks of your native rose in the right size and condition that a successful graft could be made. But could you make cuttings and get them to the right size and condition or dig up small plants of your rose at anything like the price at which you can buy the Manetti stocks? I don't believe you could.

In Europe there used to be a method and perhaps is still, of grafting the hybrid perpetual roses on pieces of root of the wild briar. It was done in mid-winter. When the graft was made they were stored away in some cool place, such as a cold frame or cool house, and planted in the open ground in April. This,

CANNAS.

As we grow more cannas for general bedding than any other plant, we have made several experiments, especially with the Tarrytown canna, which is the finest canna for color, amount of bloom and dwarf habit we have ever tried. This canna should be started at least two weeks before other varieties. Now is a good time to start them, as it takes longer to root this variety than any canna we have had in the bench with it. Also a little longer to recuperate after being potted.

We find the sand or propagating bench a better place to root these tubers than in flats under the bench. They can be given better attention in less time and make stronger plants and give better results than those long-drawn, often forgotten cannas you frequently see under the bench. As it does not take a great amount of room in the sand they can be closely packed together, leaving a space of one to two inches between rows, with the eyes just above the surface of the sand.

One-eyed tubers are the best, with not too large or small amount of tuber; two inches long is about right. Of course this sometimes depends a great deal on the size of tubers and variety. Some cannas produce very large tubers, with eyes far apart, while others are small and the eyes close together, and of course would have to be cut smaller anyway, so they can be nicely potted in 4-inch pots. That size pot is plenty large enough.

great amount of water, but the soil must not become sour or soggy; therefore they require plenty of drainage. We fill the pot a quarter full of this and by the time you are ready to set out your plants you will find the roots perfectly matted around the drainage material. The best time to water cannas is late in the afternoon; give them a good watering and they will get more benefit than if watered in the morning.

The tubers should be potted as soon as the roots are about one inch long and will do better than if allowed to run in the sand until it takes, perhaps, a 6-inch pot to hold them. Cannas should be pot-bound at least two weeks before setting out in the beds, so as to start new shoots. About that time we give them a good watering with liquid cow manure. All our common varieties of cannas can be started about March 15. Plants treated in this manner will make nice, thrifty plants by the middle of May, with from one to four nice shoots that will be nicely in bloom in June.

Sixty degrees is about right for cannas. They like plenty of light if they can get it, but will do well with less. We grow our cannas in a north lean-to, running east and west, with only the sun on the east end in the morning and west end in the afternoon. We are not canna experts, or am I writing this for old canna growers, but for those just beginning. If there are florists who have a better way to handle the plants we would be pleased to hear from them.

BOSTON DISCUSSIONS.

The following are among the topics announced for discussion before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society at approaching meetings.

March 12, "The Gladiolus," by Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y.

March 19, "A Talk on Orchid Culture," by W. N. Craig, North Easton, Mass.

March 26, "Peonies," by George C. Watson, Philadelphia.

CAMBRIDGE CITY, IND.—Milton Gaas has purchased the Hartje greenhouse and will move it to Capitol hill.

however, is foreign to the subject. If A. N. is familiar with the operation of grafting our greenhouse roses on the Manetti stock, as is now so largely practiced by all the leading growers, I would say by all means give the native rose a trial for this purpose. W. S.

TYRELL, TEX.—E. H. R. Green has built a range of greenhouses 100x150 on the very fine place he is equipping here.

We used for potting last year's rose soil with about one-fifth well-rotted cow manure with a little sprinkling of lime. We ran this through a half-inch mesh sieve, then through a quarter-inch mesh. The coarse soil that remains in the last mesh we used for drainage, which generally contains little lumps of manure, soil, etc., which will give better drainage than pieces of broken pots, also it helps to stimulate the roots. DISPOSING OF OLD PLANTS.

Not so very many years ago it was the practice to consign to the rubbish heap all the old plants thrown out when preparations were begun for replanting the rose houses. But lately it has been found that there is a profitable market for the Beauty plants and very many thousands are sold each spring for planting in the garden. At first the sale was through the houses which have big mail trade, but soon the florists through the country were each buying a few hundred plants from some big grower and retailing them to their home trade. But it remained for that enterprising firm, the Heller Bros., of New Castle, to demonstrate the feasibility of going direct to the public with their offer of plants. This they did last year for the first time, expending several hundreds of dollars in advertising in magazines of large circulation. They asked what looked to the trade like a big price for the plants, but offered to prepay all stock to destination. A good price was necessary to cover cost of advertising when, as in the Ladies' Home Journal, space cost $84 an inch for one insertion; but that the results were satisfactory is shown by the fact that they are at it again this spring with some very attractive advertisements.

CUTTING BENCH FUNGUS.

Kindly give me some remedy for fungus in the cutting bed. It is almost impossible for us to get new sand during the winter and we have had a great deal of trouble with fungus lately. Would sterilizing the sand answer the purpose, and how would you go about it, or what else would you recommend? L. G.

If fresh, clean sand cannot be had the next best move would be to get coke screenings from the nearest gas house. I have never known bench fungus to affect cuttings where this material was used as the propagating medium, but as a precaution it would be well to thoroughly wash the bench and give it a coat of hot lime wash before filling. When the sand is so badly infected as this appears to be, it is taking too much of a risk to use it again, even after being sterilized, the latent spores of such low forms of vegetable life being very difficult to destroy. Firing and Other Notes.

ED. REVIEW:—I am glad to see that you give night firemen space in your paper to express their views, as it gives the novice a chance to learn and ask questions. I quite agree with the fireman who has nineteen houses and two boilers; he does not need any odd jobs to keep him awake. I at present have two houses, one 20x50 feet, the other 20x30 feet, standing end to end. The partition has been taken out and they are operated as one house. There is another house 20x100, which we are not running yet. These houses stand east and west, contrary to local greenhouse etiquette. I suppose the builder, like the tailor, cut his garment according to his cloth. I have a small boiler, with fifty 2-inch flues, and a high brick smoke-stack. Firing is comparatively easy and I am glad of small jobs to pass away the time.

Mme. Chatenay as Exhibited at Detroit by Peter Reinberg.

One question I would like to have explained by some of the craft is why a fire consumes more coal the first half of the night than the second half. Whether the temperature be cold or moderate outside, I burn a third more coal from 7 p. m. to midnight than I do from midnight to 7 a. m. I hold the temperature inside steadily at from 60 to 65 degrees. I would like to know what slack coal is costing in the States. Here in Ontario, at present prices, a good sized coal pile is better than a small bank account.

George Lloyd, who up to three years ago ran a general florist and nursery business in Napanee, has had some experience in starting up plants in mid-winter. Two years ago last December he thawed out two houses for Miss L. O'Sullivan, of West Superior, Wis., and brought them out successfully. On January 2d he took charge of where I now fire. It was in a very dilapidated condition, everything frozen up, over 200 panes of glass out and snow two feet deep in some parts of the houses. He patched the glass, started the fires and proceeded to build benches and fill them. He has radishes, cucumbers and lettuce up and a stock of florist's plants under way for spring. Sunshine is a very scarce article here; too much zero weather. R. E. NORVELL.

Tuberous Begonias.

ED. REVIEW:—I notice that G. F. H., in your issue of February 18, asks for suggestions regarding suitable plants to grow in beds on the east side of a residence shaded on the south by tall trees, but getting the morning sun. The gorgeous tuberous begonia will distance all competition in such a situation, or on the north side of a house. It is a magnificent flower and when once tried in such a location, where it will not get the hot sun between 11 a. m. and 4 p. m., will never be abandoned. The singles are the best bedders. I have grown them for the past seven summers on the Michigan Reformatory grounds, with prison labor without the aid of a florist, so I assume they are not difficult to handle. For early flowering I start them under glass about April 1, or they may be planted in the open ground the first week in May and will flower the middle of July.

OTIS FULLER.

Twinned Boilers.

ED. REVIEW:—In answer to F. W. in REVIEW of January 14, I would say avoid check valves; they are a delusion and a snare. I would suggest that you have the returns enter the boiler No. 1 only. Have it come in half way up the diameter of the boiler; do not enter at bottom. Place a good, tested valve in the return close to the boiler. Next run a pipe from No. 1 to No. 2, placing a valve in it facing No. 2, tapping into each boiler half way up the side. Connect both boilers to the flow at the top, placing a valve on each boiler. To operate we fire No. 2 the hardest. When the water gets low in the gauge of No. 2 we go to No. 1 and close the valve on the return to prevent the water from backing out into the mains. Close the valve on the top of No. 1 to raise the steam pressure, open the valve connecting

No. 1 to No. 2 to allow the water to flow from No. 1 into No. 2. In about one minute you have the surplus water from No. 1 in No. 2. Close the valve and open the flow and return valves on No. 1 it will immediately fill up from the return. It requires no more attention than a steam trap does. J. J. L.

A CASE FOR THE COURTS.

ED. REVIEW:—I herewith send you several pieces of glass, also some branches of roses. The glass is of a house 22x100 feet. The center bed is ten feet wide and there are two side benches, three feet each. The house runs east and west and has the sun from morning till night. The south bench does not shade the bed of Brides and Bridesmaids, as the bed is eighteen inches high. It contains 350 roses two years old next June, and 160 one year old in June. Last fall we were getting a good cut of roses daily. In the house described I have Brides and Bridesmaids for four years, the same plants in solid beds and they always did fine. I remember one winter the plants, three years old then, made a wonderful growth of three and four shoots to the plant from the roots, some as thick as my thumb. They had a night temperature of 56 to 60 degrees and 65 to 70 degrees in the daytime if cloudy, with sunshine 70 to 75 degrees. With such treatment I had always success until this winter.

There is a power house of an electric street railway about 500 feet east of my place, which was put up two years ago. I have been in this place since 1903. The plant has a steam exhaust that carries with the steam an oily substance. Quite frequently, if we have an east wind, it comes over the greenhouses and settles on the glass. One can usually feel it in the face and on the bare hands as it comes down. In the last three months it has covered the glass of my greenhouses with a black substance of an oily nature that water does not touch. I find it necessary to get on the roof with a rag and rub hard to clean the glass. I cleaned six rows of glass, then I placed a thermometer under the cleaned glass in the sun and it indicated 80 degrees. I placed it under the dirty glass the same distance from the ground as before and it showed only 74 degrees. The glass being covered, shaded the roses to such an extent that they are worthless. The growth is yellow and small. I will have to plant the house with young roses this spring.

In the other house, 30x100 feet, I have callas that do not come out white; the flowers stay green. The Harrisii are also affected. The stock plants of chrysanthemums make long, weak, spindly growths, no good to use as cuttings. The geraniums and other bedding plants are also growing spindly and soft. The temperature at night runs from 54 to 58 degrees, in the daytime 60 to 70 degrees if cloudy and 70 to 75 degrees with sunshine.

I would like to have the opinion of some of the leading growers, telling me what I am entitled to from the street railway company for damages, not having cut more than one dozen roses daily and these of no value, for the last three months, finding it necessary to replant the house with young roses this spring, consequently not having any roses to cut before September also the buying of 3,000 chrysanthemums, 2-inch, the lilies not blooming and all the 10,000 4-inch pot plants being affected by the coating on the roof.

Besides the exhaust, they have a pile of hot ashes outside smoking continually and throwing off sulphurous fumes, which affect a person's throat 500 feet away. The fumes certainly have a bad effect on the soft growth. The pile of ashes is at least 40x40 feet square and six feet deep. The main part of it is continually burning and smoking.

I invited several florists to see the roofs and they all say they never saw anything like it before. Different parties tell me that the street railway company is putting a certain oil in the steam cylinders, which is carried off with the exhaust. Fresh fallen snow around their building turns yellow in a few hours and their own slate roof is full of the same substance.

I would like to hear from florists who have had damage suits similar to my case.
CHAS. LINDACHER.

TROUBLE WITH BULBS.

My hyacinths and bulbs are affected by mealy bugs and some other kind of bugs that look like the woodtick. It is the size of a radish seed, color pinkish. The flower pot is also full of thin, white worms. What is the cause of them; also what can I do to get rid of them?

G. W. K.

I cannot account for the presence of mealy bugs on your hyacinths and other bulbs, unless you have other plants in the same house infested with this dirty insect, and then it would be strange that the bugs would travel to the hyacinths in the few weeks they have been in the greenhouse. From the description of the other creature, "the size of a radish seed," I can't determine what it is. The "thin, white worms" also add to these distressing circumstances.

As soon as spring trade is over and your houses can be temporarily emptied, burn sulphur in the house, paint the interior, remove every particle of soil and begin with a fresh supply and you must get rid of these pests. For immediate help syringe the hyacinths hard and that will remove the mealy bug. For the worms in the soil put a piece of quick lime the size of your fist in twenty gallons of water and when dissolved and the water is clear, give the plants one watering with this lime water. This will bring angle worms to the surface to perish and it will most likely kill your white worms.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

March was ushered in like a little lamb. The florists finished up their orders for a few late social gatherings and the effect of Lent is felt somewhat at present, though orders for funerals have kept up. This is about all the work that is going on at the present time. Prices on all kinds of stock are on the downward grade, this being particularly so with carnations and violets. Stock of all kinds is very plentiful, also of extra good quality. Roses are more abundant of late and the demand not as active as for other stock. American Beauties are of better color and long-stemmed stock is more plentiful, with prices ranging from $3 to $6 per dozen for the best. Brides and Maids run 6 to 8 cents, seconds 3 to 5 cents. Meteors are very plentiful, with a slow demand.

Carnations are of fine quality and more are in the market than the demand calls for. The price on fancy stock is down to 4 cents; 2 and 3 cents for the other grades. In 1,000 lots the price is $15. A few more bright days will no doubt bring on a big glut. Violets are badly overstocked and the wholesalers have great difficulty in moving them; 30 cents per 100 and $2.50 in 1,000 lots is the price just now.

In bulbous stock the market has plenty of everything to offer at greatly reduced prices. Lily of the valley is a drug and can't be moved at any price. Romans, Paper Whites and tulips sell slowly. Harrisii is coming in fine at $2 per dozen for the long-stemmed and $1.50 for the shorter ones. Pink and white sweet peas are fine, but with rather short stems. These sell well at 50 cents per 100. Smilax is very scarce in this market at 20 cents per string. Common ferns are up to $3 per 1,000. Some fine adiantum brings $1 per 100.

Executive Committee Meeting.

The executive committee of the S. A. F. met in St. Louis Saturday and Monday. Those who attended the meeting were President Breitmeyer, of Detroit; Vice President Beneke, St. Louis; Secretary Stewart, of Boston; Treasurer Beatty, of Oil City, Pa.; H. M. Altick, of Dayton, O.; Theodore Wirth, of Hartford, Conn.; Philip J. Hauswirth, of Chicago; G. M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, Mo.; J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill.; R. F. Tesson and Otto Koenig, of St. Louis. The delegates were met at the depot by Messrs. Beneke and Koenig and were escorted in an automobile to the Southern hotel, where they at once went into session. In the evening they were the guests of the St. Louis Florists' Club at a banquet, held at the Missouri Athletic Club. This was a very fine affair. The tables were decorated with La Detroit roses, for which we have to thank J. F. Sullivan, of Detroit, which was a great surprise to our president. Other decorations consisted of carnations and violets. Mr. Beneke acted as toastmaster. All the delegates responded to a call with remarks for the good of the S. A. F. and the next convention. Sunday was taken up with a trolley ride to the World's Fair grounds, which was a great treat to the delegates and the members of the local club as well. At the grounds we were the guests of F. W. Taylor and J.

C. A. Kuehn.

(Superintendent Trade Exhibition, S. A. F., St. Louis, 1904.)

H. Hadkinson. We were taken in wagonettes and shown over the grounds. After seeing all the sights (which were such as to surprise our Chicago friend, Philip Hauswirth) we were taken to the English building as the guests of Mr. Brown, the English landscape gardener in charge, who served refreshments, which were very much relished. The evening was spent at the theater. Monday the executive session was resumed and at 11 a. m. all the work was finished for the next convention. The afternoon was taken up sightseeing about the city. The evening was spent at the bowling alleys, after which the delegates departed for home, satisfied that the next convention of the S. A. F. will be the greatest in its history.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting March 3. The meeting was attended by thirty members, who took great interest in the proceedings. The entertainment committee reported that the entertainment and hop given by the club last month was a financial success, and was discharged with thanks. The blue book committee reported through its chairman, F. C. Weber, that they had completed their work and the book is in the hands of the secretary, at the disposal of members only. F. W. Maas was elected a member. Frank H. Weber, who is vice president of the American Association of Nurserymen, made a proposition for membership. F. Lauder-milch, of Kirkwood, Mo., exhibited his new white seedling carnation, which was fairly well thought of by the committee. J. H. Hadkinson, superintendent of floriculture at the World's Fair, read an interesting paper on "Landscape Gardening at the World's Fair," to which the members listened attentively. It brought out a big discussion. After this Henry Emmons of Belleville, lead a discussion on "Propagating Germaniums." Both gentlemen received a hearty vote of thanks for their efforts. Messrs. Miller, Sanders and Herzog, our sick members, were reported as doing nicely and out of danger. All three expect to be present at the next meeting.

April 14 will be rose meeting, with prizes of $5, $3 and $2 for the best vases of twenty-five roses, American Beauties excepted, open to local growers only. Any new roses from the outside for exhibition will be appreciated by the members. It was decided that after this all exhibits will be judged by points, which will be more satisfactory to the exhibitors. At this meeting George Windler will read an essay on "Pot Grown Chrysanthemums," and John Steidle, of Clayton, will lead a discussion on "Field Planting and Growing Carnations."

Among the out-of-town members who attended the last meeting were J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville; Adolph Fehr and Henry Emmons, of Belleville; Henry Johann, of Collinsville; F. W. Ude, Jr., W. J. Pilcher and Hugo Gross, of Kirkwood; John Steinecke, of Old Orchard; Joseph Furber, of Webster Groves; John Steidle, J. W. Dunford and Robert F. Tesson, of Clayton.

Next week a meeting will be called of all the chairmen of the different committees who have charge of the affairs of the S. A. F. convention, in order to review the work done by the executive board and from that time on the committees will start work perfecting their plans for the coming convention. The meeting will be presided over by the vice-president of the society. All chairmen will receive notice when and where to meet.

Notes.

H. G. Ude has left Kirkwood and is now located at Richmond, Ind., but not in the flower business. H. Hartman, who was formerly employed by Mr. Ude, is now in charge of the place.

The father of Wm. Adels died on March 4, after an illness of three weeks. Mr. Adels has the sympathy of the trade.

Bowling.

The Florists' Bowling Club entertained the executive board of the S. A. F. and other visitors on Monday night. Our visitors were Theo. Wirth, H. M. Altick, Phil Hauswirth, L. B. Craw, H. B. Beatty and Paul Berkowitz. The following scores were made during the evening:

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Monday was one of the most disagreeable days of the year. A cold, drizzling rain from early morning until long after midnight added to the stagnation in the wholesale market. There was literally nothing doing in the florist business and conditions give little evidence of improvement during the continuance of Lent. There is an abundance of everything, prices have sagged steadily and the weather has retired the street vendors, so that even at unprecedented low prices these gentry hold aloof and so destroy this last hope of clearing the ice boxes and giving a semblance of demand to meet the enormous supply.

Bulbous stock is in evidence everywhere. Fine narcissi are offered at $1 a dozen bunches. Tulips are unsalable at any price and as to violets, the very best do not go above 35 cents and hundreds of thousands have cleaned up at $1 a 1,000. On Monday I saw a box of 5,500 splendid single violets, thrown into the barrel utterly unsalable. But the bottom has certainly been reached and the improvement will soon begin. Easter is so near that a general feeling of hope and expectation prevails.

Various Notes.

The first auction of the season took place at Elliott's on Tuesday. A fair attendance and good prices encouraged the veteran autocrat of the gavel and from now on, every Friday and Tuesday, the voice of the spring harbinger will be heard until further notice. Next week there will be offerings of Easter goods and the amount of importations of hardy stock for this purpose this season is exceptionally large.

All arrangements for rose night at the New York Florists' Club, Eighth avenue and Twenty-third street, are now completed. A splendid exhibit by many of the leading rose growers of the country is assured and a very large attendance is anticipated. All florists, whether members of the club or not, are cordially invited to attend. The bowling club will meet at its alleys at 3 p. m. on Monday. The membership of the club is growing steadily and the attendance constantly increasing.

Dr. F. M. Hexamer, the veteran of the American Institute, is very ill with rheumatism at his home in Stamford, Conn.

Ralph Perkins is not expected to recover from a second attack of pneumonia and pleurisy.

On Saturday the father of E. B. Dunne, of West Thirtieth street, died of pneumonia, after a six weeks' illness, at the age of 78.

The mother of Chas. Habermann, the retail florist of One Hundred and First street and Broadway, died last week of asthma.

R. W. Young, of Avondale, N. J., is sending some splendid shipments of sweet peas to John Young of West Twenty-eighth street.

Jas. McManus says the demand for orchids continues brisk from out-of-town buyers and shipments to other cities are made by him daily.

The amount of violets left over last Sunday was enormous. One wholesaler on Twenty-ninth street had over 100,000 to dispose of Monday. It was a slaughter.

The New York visitors to the Detroit convention have a very happy experience to remember, judging by their enthusiastic references to the trip. Mrs. Guttman, the only lady visitor from the east, was especially delighted with the courtesy manifested and the delightful time afforded at the theater and banquet by the Detroit ladies. Mr. Guttman says the craft misses an invaluable opportunity for benefit by failing to attend the conventions and that every man who takes a practical interest in his business cannot afford to miss them. He considered the banquet and entertainment provided the most elaborate and enjoyable in his experience. Everything was most creditable to the Detroit Club. Mr. and Mrs. Guttman visited Buffalo and the Falls on their return. Adam A. Treppel, of Brooklyn, has been added to Mr. Guttman's force of salesmen.

President Traendly and Jno. B. Nugent, who traveled together to Detroit, arrived home on Saturday in good condition and full of enthusiasm, and gave a glowing account of the exhibition and the generous reception accorded them by the Detroit brethren. They were particularly reminiscent as to the banquet and vaudeville entertainment, the visit to the baths at Mt. Clemens and the glories of the new rose at President Breitmeyer's, which they say is sure to become very popular and to meet with universal demand.

Geo. Bradshaw has added fern balls and lilies in pots to his supply department and is handling large quantities of fine smilax and Sprengeri daily.

Fred Zahn, who has been very ill for three months, has entirely recovered his health and his many friends in the trade will be glad to know he expects to open his new store on One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, in time for the Easter trade. His present address is 137 West One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street. His experience in floral decorating covers a period of over twenty years in New York City.

Johann C. O. Schulze, of West Nyack, disappeared December 21, from G. E. Bradshaw's wholesale store, 53 West Twenty-eighth street, and has not been seen nor heard from since that time. Any information as to his whereabouts would be gratefully received, either by Mr. Bradshaw or by the wife, Mrs. Schulze, at West Nyack, N. Y. His age is 41, height five feet two inches, round face, sandy mustache, gray hair, light blue eyes, the right lid partially closed, weight 160 pounds. It is thought that he is in the west. He had considerable money with him the day he disappeared.

The bowlers are doing finely. The attendance increases each week and the scores show that there will be close rivalry for positions on the strong team which will represent New York at the St. Louis convention. Following are four games of Monday night's scores:

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The volume of business continues to exceed expectations. Lent is proving better than the rather quiet winter led one to expect. Roses are not very plentiful, though Liberties are coming in more freely. Beauties are still scarce, with no immediate prospects of a heavy increase. The changes in the market from last week's report are the increased quantity of Easter lilies, all the commission houses and the Flower Market being well supplied; the demand for gardenias, which are taking well at reduced rates, and the falling off in demand for sweet peas, which will probably come to the front again immediately after Easter. There are some good varieties of fancy tulips to be had in limited quantities and thousands of daffodils.

Commission House Change.

The firm of C. F. Edgar & Co. has succeeded C. A. Dunn & Co., at 1516 and 1518 Sansom street. Mr. Edgar, who has been with the old firm since it started last fall, has just returned from a flying trip through the center of the state, where he received many assurances of support from both growers and buyers. The firm's growers have shown their confidence to a man by continuing regular shipments while several new consignors have been added to the list. Mr. Edgar and his able assistant, Mr. Muth, have the best wishes of their many friends for the success of their enterprise.

Propagating Dahlias.

We are indebted to W. P. Peacock, of Atco, N. J., for some valuable ideas on this subject, as follows: "We have just had a photograph taken of three roots of the new dahlia, Kriemhilde, raised from cuttings described by some as 'a weak thing.' Two of these, which were about the average size, or a little over the average, weight one and one-half pounds, while the largest one weighed three and one-quarter pounds. In order to show the comparative sizes we had a foot rule photographed right with the roots. We used the rule so as to show the comparative size of the roots and that it actually weighed what the number called for. We used the variety Kriemhilde because it is the bang-up variety just introduced from the other side, and of which there were no roots in this country raised from divided roots. Many other varieties grow much larger, and of course others grow much smaller, but we took roots of this variety for the above stated reasons. In addition we do not think it is right to show a dahlia root on the basis that a root is a root, as no two varieties are exactly alike, or grow exactly the same size, and it is best, therefore, to come right down to a given variety and there is, of course, then a basis for estimating in other varieties."

Notes.

Leo Niessen has been receiving gardenias ever since New Years from John Wilde, of Swarthmore, Pa.

The Flower Market is receiving some splendid Mrs. Lawson and other choice carnations from Charles A. Schaefer, of York, Pa.

Henry A. Dreer Co., report an excellent demand for small palms and ferns throughout February. They have already accepted orders for azaleas in large numbers for Easter delivery.

William Munro, of Lansdowne, Pa., is sending fine Bridesmaids to Edward Reid.

Eugene Bernheimer is pleased with the season's business so far. The quantity of stock marketed exceeds that of last season. While prices have not, of course, been so good the returns have averaged well. He believes that carnation growers with a limited amount of glass should confine themselves to three or four varieties that do best with them, paying special attention to a good white. Mr. Bernheimer has just returned from a flying trip among the growers.

Mrs. Smith, of the firm of Smith & Feters, Cleveland, Ohio, was a visitor in this city recently.

The Henry F. Michell Co. has about completed the improvements, which make the store one of the finest in the city. The show windows are very attractive.

Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, Pa., have a fine lot of Crimson Ramblers in large pots, carefully trained into the round shapes so desirable.

Leo Niessen was able to furnish the Wm. Graham Co. with $100 worth of Acacia pubescens for a decoration. This would have been an impossibility a few years ago.

The Florists' Club will tender a complimentary banquet to the American Rose Society, when it meets in this city week after next.

Wm. J. Baker continues to handle a fine lot of fancy and standard carnations.

D. T. Conner, representing the Lord & Burnham Co., has contracted with George

H. Burk, Atlantic City, N. J., for one new greenhouse, and also with John Burton, Wyndmoor, Pa., for one large house to replace a house to be torn down shortly. Mr. Conner has a number of inquiries for new houses and expects a busy season.

Answers to Correspondents.

REVIEW readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia to Phil, in care of any of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

Question No. 7.—Will Prosperity bloom earlier if propagated in December and housed in August? Probably it will. A better plan for securing early bloom is to grow it indoors all summer.

Question No. 8.—Will Estelle give good results when propagated from plump tops? Yes, and you can get more cuttings that way.

Question No. 9.—Is Governor Roosevelt superior to General Gomez as a commercial variety? Governor Roosevelt has not proven entirely satisfactory throughout this country. It appears to be very subject to rust. Harlowarden is today considered better than either. PHIL.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The market has shown little change during the past week, mid-Lenten conditions prevailing. There are ample supplies of stock in all lines and quality is good in almost all items. Good Beauties are the one thing which are not seen in large numbers. Of Brides, Maids and other roses there are enough for all requirements and nearly all the growers are cutting first-class stock. Liberty is in the lightest supply of any of the smaller roses.

Carnations are of fancy grade with most of the growers and the supplies are large. In fact, during the week prices have been below the dollar mark for a very fair grade of goods. White is holding a little firmer than the colors because the principal demand is for funeral flowers. Local trade is very quiet indeed, but shipping business is fairly active, although most of the orders are small. Now and then a department store special sale cleans up the market on carnations.

Easter lilies and callas are very abundant and making slow sales. Prices have taken a drop in this department. The receipts of tulips and other bulbous stock are hardly as heavy as a week ago, but no better values are being obtained. Violets are still coming in heavily from the east and it looks as though they would not find much improvement in sale before the Easter business. Green goods are in demand, the use of asparagus having become general with the retailers. There are ample supplies in all lines.

Various Notes.

Those who have canvassed the Easter lily situation report that there will be plenty of lilies, although not so many as a year ago. Of quality not much can be said. Good lilies will be good property before the Easter business is over.

Poehlmann Bros. Company has concluded to add another 100,000 feet of glass to their range this season. They will also rebuild several of their old houses, and have placed an order for 5,000 feet of Garland's iron gutter and the necessary iron posts.

It is stated that J. D. Thompson is now the owner of all the stock in the Thompson Carnation Co., of which he is now the president.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting at Handel Hall last evening. There was a good attendance and considerable business of importance.

William Kroeschell was a day late in getting to the Detroit convention, because of a trip to St. Louis to secure an order amounting to $35,000, which he landed last week Tuesday.

Bentley & Co. have their plant nearly all in three-year-old roses and are cutting very fine stock. Most of the establishment will be planted with young stock this season.

W. J. Palmer, of Buffalo, was one of the week's visitors. James McHutchison, of New York, was in town on business and J. A. Valentine stopped a few days enroute home from the convention.

P. J. Hauswirth attended the meeting of the S. A. F. executive committee at St. Louis from Saturday to Monday.

In a shipment of eastern violets Kenicott Bros. Co. found the phenomenal bloom of the season. It was as big as, and had as many petals as are found in many a bunch of Lady Campbell.

George Reinberg reports the rooted cutting trade booming at present.

L. Coatsworth went over to Canada after the convention for a visit to his old home.

Peter Reinberg showed a fine vase of Chatenay rose at the Louisville club meeting Tuesday.

John P. Risch is doing jury duty this week.

James Curran, formerly with Oscar Friedman, is now with Johnson & Swan and Johnson & Swan's man has taken Mr. Curran's place with Friedman.

C. W. McKellar is again getting cat-tleyas.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The supply of all kinds of flowers is quite heavy and fine stock is offered at exceptionally low prices. The only noticeable shortage is first-class American Beauties; these are very scarce. The few days of warm sunshine produced a heavy crop of Maids and Brides, and prices have dropped to $10 per 100 for fancy stock; medium and smaller grades are offered as low as $3 per 100. Brides are moving out while Maids accumulate. The supply of carnations is increasing; they sell at $1 to $3 per 100, and in 1,000 lots the finest stock can be bought at $20. Good lilies are plentiful enough and meet with fair demand; inferior flowers one can buy at $4 to $6 per 100. In tulips, narcissi, daffodils, sweet peas, valley and violets large accumulations exist and are offered in quantities at extremely low figures.

Various Notes.

Our delegates who attended the Carnation Society's meeting in Detroit returned last Saturday. At the Florists' Club meeting next Tuesday, March 15, we will hear the report. By good authority I am informed that John Murchie's new white carnation, which he has named Fred Burki, was one of the best white carnations at the convention; its size, stem and lasting qualities all surely demonstrated this fact.

The recent floods destroyed many of the railroad and county bridges between Bakerstown and this city, which impedes all traffic for the growers from that section. It was necessary for the Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co., J. L. Wyland, W. F. Westhoff, A. Lorch & Co. and Wm. Hoffman to haul their flowers across the country last week.

M. C. Dunlevy & Sons, of Carnegie, are shipping the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. quantities of very fine bulbous stock, among which is a trumpet narcissus worthy of mention, named Sir Watkins. It has light yellow petals with dark trumpet.

Uncle John Wyland well foretold this cold winter last fall. He guessed it from the goosebone. He said the goosebone had a thick covering of fur and reminded him of a thin girl in a rabbit-skin ulster. Something unusual for the goosebone. Uncle John further quotes:

This winter was confounded long,
And more than that, darned tough;
It came upon us greenhouse folk.

A proposition rough.
While Old Jack Frost hugged the hot steam-pipe.

We at night hugged the fire,
And all the time the coal bills climbed Higher, higher, higher.

Our visitors last week were Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa., on their way home from the convention; Miss A. L. Wells, Steubenville, O.; C. W. Ward, New York; B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia; C. S. Ford, representing A. Herrmann, New York.
Hoo-Hoo.

FAIRHAVEN, MASS.

The greenhouses of Walter P. Winsor, of Fairhaven, are annually thrown open to the public for a few days in February and large numbers of visitors avail themselves of the opportunity to inspect an exceedingly well kept private establishment. The opening day this year was February 25, and once more Peter Murray, the able gardener in charge, had his houses beautifully arranged and a blaze of bloom. Orchids are particular favorites with Mr. Murray and his employer. His show of dendrobiums and odontoglossums was superb. Celogynes, cypripediums, cattleyas, phalenopsis, *cymbidium*s and other sorts were also in fine condition. In carnations, Lawson was very fine. A new seedling, named Winsor, similar to Lawson in habit but intermediate in color between that variety and Enchantress, was in fine condition. All kinds of bulbous stock, lily of the valley, primulas, cyclamens, genistas, azaleas, Lilium Harrisii and other seasonable flowers were effectively arranged and the whole devolved great credit on Mr. Murray, who is one of Massachusetts' most up-to-date private gardeners.

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting and show of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held March 4. Orchids, carnations, plants in pots and greenhouse ornamental plants filled the tables and nearly all the strong growers of this section were represented. The exhibit of William Barr, of Llewellyn Park, Arthur Bodwell, gardener, received 95 points. A vase of mixed car-

FLORISTS SHOULD ADVERTISE.

Do florists who sell at retail advertise sufficiently in this age of advertising?

Does not the selling of flowers follow the same laws of supply and demand as any other business? Would not any florist make earnest efforts to increase his supply if he found an increasing demand? Of course he would; he has reached the profit stage, and every additional demand now means an increase, not only of business, but also of profits.

The shrewdest, most far-seeing business men in the country realize that there is a way to create an additional demand for what they have to sell. That way is by advertising.

Why, then, should not retail florists, who surely realize the advantages of an additional demand, follow the methods that have proved so advantageous in other lines of trade?

Florists are engaged in one of the most beautiful businesses in the world. Esthetic advertising has proved to be a most effective bringer of business. It is much easier to advertise flowers esthetically than it is patent medicine, or even soap. What will benefit one business is likely to benefit another. Business is business, wherever we find it.—Retailer and Advertiser.

BEATRICE, NEB.—Articles of incorporation of the Dole Floral Co. have been filed in the office of the county clerk. The company is capitalized for $25,000. The incorporators are S. H., E. W. and W. A. Dole, of this city.

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y.

Death of C. J. Pepper.

Charles J. Pepper, the well known gardener and florist, died suddenly March 3, due to heart disease. About 7 o'clock he was attending to the furnace at his home, corner of Gansevoort and Prospect streets, and not returning as expected, a member of the family went below to learn the cause. Mr. Pepper was found lying beside the furnace in an unconscious condition. Medical aid was summoned, but he died before the arrival of a physician. Deceased came to this country from England seventy-two years ago, being then a child of two years. He settled in Little Falls in 1861, and in time acquired considerable property. He was a florist and conducted a greenhouse for a number of years. He was a man of strong convictions and of an uncompromising character. He was a pronounced prohibitionist who was never cast down so long as he had strength to rally in support of the cause. An able speaker, he had conspicuous part in conducting the affairs of the party, whose nominee he was at different times for offices, including assemblyman. He is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Maria Partridge, of Utica, and by two adopted sons.

IMPERISHABLE CYPRESS.

The following paragraph was written and published in 1894; of course it was then, is now and forever will be, true: "The phenomenal durability of cypress is believed to proceed from the presence in its natural chemical composition of an acid having the active qualities of creosote. There is, of course, some natural cause for its demonstrated proof against the ravages of water, air and time, and that cause is equally of course of a chemical character. In other words, nature seems to have treated cypress in a manner somewhat corresponding, in its results, at least, to that of the artificial use of creosote as a preservative."—Lumber Trade Journal.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—A. Washburn & Sons are preparing to put up a fine three-story business block of pressed brick, the lower floor to be occupied by their store.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

We are having warmer weather and it is quite agreeable. It is to be hoped that we have seen the last of cold weather for this season, as we surely have had our share. Trade is quiet and though the sum total of business done is quite equal to last year, if not better, still things seem to drag and there is no life in the demand. There is no oversupply in either carnations or roses, but the prices obtained have dropped. Bulbous stock is being hit the hardest, especially callas and Harrisii. At times it is next to impossible to even give them away. Tulips, daffodils, hyacinths and valley go somewhat better, but they are selling very slow and at very low figures. Violets are doing better, but very few bring above 50 cents per 100. Smilax is very scarce. Other greens also are in heavy demand. Ferns are getting to be a precious article and are snapped up by the stores whenever they see them.

Notes

Saturday will see the regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Society and also the annual carnation show. There will be some fine carnations staged and a number of out of town florists will be on hand. All growers who have something new or of special merit will confer a favor upon the society by sending blooms.

The Cincinnati boys who went to the convention are all home again and all express themselves as well pleased at the treatment they received in Detroit. They are very enthusiastic over the show and all in all pronounce it the banner convention.

Dick Witterstaetter and W. K. Partridge are busy receiving congratulations for their well-earned victories. It is a pleasure to note that though we do not raise such vast quantities of carnations, still what we do grow cannot be beaten. Adonis and The Cardinal, Enchantress that does not go to sleep, are Cincinnati products.

Norton Bros., florists, 61 Massachusetts avenue, with greenhouses at Dorchester, have filed a petition in bankruptcy. Liabilities are scheduled to the amount of $19,913.63, with assets of $3,230. It is hoped that arrangements can be made which will permit the business to be continued.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Stock is still scarce and there is plenty of work for everybody in the flower business. White roses and carnations are not to be had for funeral work. Lilies and Golden Gate roses have to be used by everyone. Floral wreaths and casket covers are being made by every florist in town. The last ten days were the busiest for funeral work ever known in Kansas City. Green stock for background work is as scarce as flowers. Every grower around the city seems to be having a good crop of sweet peas and violets on now, and they have been a big help to all of us.

Notes.

Three of us journeyed out to the Rock-Heite greenhouses on South Troost avenue last Friday and saw carnations grown as only Charley Heite can grow them, and he has had great success with roses in the one house that he has tried to grow them in, 28x200. Their Easter plants are all looking as if they would make it in good time and a fine lot they will have in azaleas, lilies, spiraeas, hydrangeas and Ramblers. They also have a good looking lot of palms and ferns, in fact everything and everybody about the place seemed to be doing well.

TIFFIN, O.—As a result of the paper read some time ago before the local horticultural society and shortly after published in the REVIEW, Lewis Ulrich is each season selling about 3,000 rose plants taken from the benches at 15 cents each. A COIL HEATER.

We expect to install a new boiler in the spring, one we made ourselves, on the same principle as one that we are using, only about six times as large. The one I am using at present is made of inch piping and I can heat 4,000 square feet of glass when it is 20 degrees below zero outside. This winter we maintained 50 degrees in a carnation house of 2,000 square feet of glass and 40 degrees in a lettuce house of 2,000 square feet. The back is a cast hollow core with a pocket cast on it, where two 3-inch returns enter the boiler, one on each side, and out of it flow the pipes that run forward and back, forming a coil which, all told, equals about 325 feet of 1½-inch pipe, the flows going out at the top. Now, what I want to know is how many feet of 2-inch pipe should it heat? I am putting up a new house for roses, but it is small. I am going to use it for show and salesroom in a few years. It is about 15x35, ten feet to ridge, four feet sides, glass ends and sides to one foot of the ground. Will one 3-inch flow feed six 2-inch returns and heat it and maintain a temperature of 56 degrees at 10 degrees below zero? I intend putting the boiler in a pit two feet deep. I would put it lower, but cannot on account of drainage. I will run an overhead feed of 3-inch pipe and return with six 2-inch pipes. I burn natural gas to heat my boiler, in fact have never used anything else. About how does it compare with coal, gas 20 cents per 1,000 feet, coal $6 per ton?

should prove very efficient and economical. A water tube boiler is always more efficient than a fire tube boiler. The arrangement described, if it is equivalent to 325 feet of 1½-inch pipe, should have capacity to carry 1,300 feet of radiation or about 2,100 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe.

The 35-foot house to be maintained at 56 degrees in cold weather will require at least 202 feet of radiation, which will require an equivalent of 325 feet of 2-inch pipe in the house. With a 3-inch riser eight 2-inch returns will be sufficient.

With natural gas at 20 cents per 1,000 cubic feet it would be about equal in value to the best coal at $6. The usual basis for estimating these fuels is to consider 30,000 feet of gas equal to one ton of the best coal. The poorer grades of coal at $6 per ton would be more expensive for a given number of heat units than the gas at 20 cents per 1,000 feet. Then, too, there is a great saving in labor with the gas. No firing is necessary and there are no ashes to remove, which is a big item with a large plant.

WHITE FLY AND WINTER BLIGHT.

I read with a great deal of interest the opinions and instructions of your expert writers. Considerable has been said of late about the little white fly, which apparently succumbs to nothing but hydrocyanic acid gas. I have experimented somewhat with the gas, but find it so irregular in its action that I don't feel that I have gained much real knowledge about its use. I never used one-half as much as I see recommended in your valuable paper and yet I have had every leaf killed on tomato plants six feet high by a quantity which on previous occasions had killed the flies without apparent injury to the vines. I think the tightness of the house and the moisture conditions indoors and out have much influence in determining its efficiency and destructiveness.

I have a trouble in my tomato house, which I am at a loss to fight. Years ago I read in Prof. Bailey's book on Greenhouse Management, of what he called "winter blight." As near as I can judge by his description and picture it is what troubles me, and I have it bad. He did not pretend to give a remedy, preventive or curative, but in a few years it left him. In my case it grows worse. I have tried the most highly recommended fungicides and have practiced for years pulling out every affected plant. I grow them on the ground and therefore can't well change the soil completely, but I change to other houses and it follows me. Has anyone ever been able to get rid of it after it has once appeared? Doesn't someone know more of its nature and management than the professor seemed to at that time?

G. H. A.

TOMATOES.

We are just about to make our last indoor planting for the season. The house has just been cleared of a former crop and will receive a thorough cleaning and a fumigating with sulphur to kill any insects and germs of fungous diseases that may be hanging around, before the young plants are set.

The growing of this crop will be much easier than the one just cleared out, but we can't expect to realize as good prices, which, by the way, have kept up fairly well all through the winter. By the time they come into bearing they will come into competition with the southern article. Still, as less firing will be needed to maintain a night temperature of about 60 degrees and, unless during dull, damp spells, no firing at all will be necessary during the day, it will cost less to mature the crop. If fair prices can be procured they ought to pay. Markets are always more or less uncertain, but we find tomatoes are a product that there is always a demand for, and are never a drug on the market until the outdoor article begins to be plentiful. Customers will always pay considerable more for a nice fresh home-grown article than for an article that has been shipped from a distance and has lost more or less both in appearance and quality in transit.

It will hardly be necessary to renew all the soil in the benches for this crop, but the old soil should be removed just where the plants are to be set and enough new soil supplied to give the plants something fresh to work on until they have a good hold. The remaining old soil should be loosened up and some bone meal or other similar fertilizer worked well in through it. But it won't be necessary to use a large quantity of this, as it might induce rank growth at the expense of fruit. Nourishment can be supplied later, if necessary, in the form of liquid manure, just when it is going to be most beneficial to the advancement of the fruit.

If the leaf growth is over-abundant it can be regulated by cutting off the half of the leaf, but it is better to have the growth balanced so that this won't be necessary. If the plants are any way drawn or leggy don't be afraid in planting to set them well down, as roots will be emitted all along the part of the stem covered. Getting them down well at first, with the proper amount of light and air to promote stocky growth, the first flowers should show and the first fruits set not more than nine or ten inches above the soil.

MAIL orders are coming in with a rush.

THE high price of potatoes in the provision markets is having its effect on seed potato prices.

ONION sets have not been in such brisk demand at good prices since the year of the Chicago World's Fair.

ONE of the largest dealers says he has to date sold twice as many canna roots as in all of any previous season.

FIELD corn is hard to buy and seed potatoes are getting beyond the reach of those who are accepting orders at retail catalogue rates.

It is found that retail catalogue prices are much too low on many of the varieties that were thought to be plentiful a month or two ago.

ONION seed is bound to be in better demand than anticipated and the supply may not be so much in excess of the demand as has been supposed.

TESTS show a great variation in the germination of alfalfa seed. At the seed laboratory at Ottawa, Canada, samples have germinated from five to eighty-five per cent. The greatest vitality was in samples of a bright greenish yellow color. But if seed is of known low vitality it can be sown more heavily.

A NEW departure in the seed line is a price list offering trash at low figures. Its redeeming feature is its apparent honesty. It assumes that the consumer, for the sake of low prices, will buy an article that properly belongs in the dump heap.

ON February 25 the Joe L. Ullathorne Seed Co., of Memphis, was issued a charter authorizing a capitalization of $100,000. The incorporators are Joe L. Ullathorne, O. C. Armstrong, A. S. Ullathorne, Geo. S. Hooper, W. A. Bickford, A. Walsh and Henry Craft.

SEED WARRANTY.

On the question of warranty of seed, the recent suit of Gardner vs. Winter was decided in favor of the dealer by the Supreme Court of Kentucky, which affirmed the judgment of a jury in the Circuit Court of Mason County. Gardner asked for and was shown western German millet; and Winter & Co., not having enough of this seed on hand, ordered from a wholesale seed house in Cincinnati, and had delivered to him eighteen bushels in the original packages. Winter & Co. testified that there were two qualities of western German millet seed—one grown in the south, which was raised almost entirely for seed purposes; that this seed was cultivated in hills, like corn; and that the seed was sent west and resown, and produced what was known to the trade as western German millet seed to distinguish it from the genuine southern seed; that after the western German millet seed had been resown for several years, it had a tendency to run out and deteriorate, so that it did not produce so luxuriantly as the southern seed. They also introduced testimony to the effect that the seed had germinated all right but that early in June a severe drought set in, which lasted until November, and that this prevented the millet, a hard crop on land, from growing on thin land like the plaintiff's. The ruling is: Where plaintiff, relying on his own judgment and past experience, bought of defendants, who were dealers in seeds, a specific article, known as western German millet seed, there was no implied warranty that the seeds would germinate and produce good crops, nor that they were reasonably fit for the purpose to which they were to be applied. Whether the seed sold to him actually belonged to that variety, is for the jury.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Trade during the last week has been, to use a slang term, "nothing to write home about." The storm the fore part of last week blocked traffic so that the shipping trade was completely demoralized and many of the branch lines are not yet open. We have been treated to all kinds of weather and we have noted that these sudden changes do not tend to stimulate business very materially. A birch bark canoe now makes a very appropriate window decoration.

All lines of cut flowers are plentiful at present and, though it is hard to forecast what may happen between now and Easter, from the way many of the growers are chasing Easter orders it would look as though they were afraid stock was going to be left on their hands.

Various Notes.

The Toronto Horticultural Association and the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association hold their annual carnation exhibition in St. George's Hall on Friday, March 11. We don't really expect this will eclipse the Carnation Show we are at present reading about, just held in Detroit, but the prospects are that it will be a good show, of a very entertaining kind. This will give the carnation growers a chance to see all the new varieties, as well as many of the staple varieties grown as they should be.

Some time ago considerable was written from this district about crepe-chasing and we are glad to note that the practice has been stopped. But our attention is now called to a new scheme, which can only be checkmated by concerted action. Being well connected socially a party is able to scent receptions, teas and other social functions considerably in advance of the date they are to be held. She then proceeds to solicit the order for floral decorations. She finds out the florist from whom they have been usually getting their supply, takes

PACIFIC COAST GREENS FOR EASTER

Huckleberry Branches, the most beautiful of all the wild greens for filling in with cut flowers and decorations. PACIFIC COAST FERNS, with their fine fronds from 2 to 3 feet in length, stand rough usage better than all others. Just the thing for large bunches and decorations. Can be used in place of Cycas. Extra large Ivy Leaves and Sprays from 2 to 4 feet; Mahonia Leaves and Stalks, bronze and green; Pacific Coast Leucothoe, etc. Send for prices.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL

by
WILLIAM SCOTT

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid.

Florists' Publishing Co.,

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

The Market.

We are having bright weather again, after an almost unprecedented siege of rain, and we are all glad of the change. Business, outside of the usual work for funerals, is nothing to brag of, but the funeral design portion of it has been good for the past two weeks. Flowers in general seem to be a bit more plentiful, except roses. American Beauties are selling wholesale at from $1.50 to $3 per dozen and very few good blooms offered. Brides and Maids bring 50 cents to $1 for fancy stock, which is a good price. Liberty are 50 to 75 cents per dozen and a few Testouts fetch 75 cents, which completes our supply of roses. Carnations are held at the same figure as they have been for the past six weeks, although I expect prices will fall somewhat in the next few days. Violets are hardly worth picking—they are so cheap and since they are not being handled by the hucksters on the street corners they are a perfect glut. Great bunches containing 200 blooms are sold wholesale at 50 cents per dozen.

A few mums are holding on remarkably well but the stems are almost devoid of foliage and the flowers are used principally in designs. The early daffodils are beginning to disappear and some of the later varieties are coming in to take their place. They sell at from 50 cents to $1 per hundred. Valley is plentiful and a few growers are bringing in fair Harrisii. Freesias are getting scarce but tulips are still holding their own. The last few days of sunshine have brought out a wealth of narcissi and they can be had at any price, but their season is almost over.

Notes.

A. Ringier, of W. W. Barnard & Co., Chicago, has arrived in town. He reports everything along the road in good shape and business ahead of last year.

The agitation regarding the right of street vendors to sell on the public sidewalks has been the topic among the San Francisco florists for the past week. The Retail Florists' Association is to appear before the supervisors on Thursday night of this week and renew the fight to have the ordinance recently adopted made permanent. For some unaccountable reason one of our largest daily newspapers has championed the cause of the basket men and devotes several columns each day to records of interviews it has with our prominent merchants who pretend to say the town will go to the dogs if the street peddlers are not allowed to resume business. Such rubbish is very disgusting to our city florists and to the trade in general, and it is to be hoped that the supervisors will make the license high enough so that the hucksters will be compelled to charge a fair price for their stock. G.

WAYSIDE JOTTINGS.

At Golden Gate park, Peter Rock is a very busy man just now. He has a crew of men lifting trees, etc., to beautify the small parks of San Francisco, especially those located south of Market street, where there is an element that not only gets away with the shrubbery, but occasionally some of the statuary and portions of the fountains disappear. This is a growing locality. The stock in the nursery rows look fine after the rain we have had and does credit to Mr. Rock, the painstaking superintendent. He has a block of Erica persoluta alba that is particularly noticeable.

H. Rodfish, of Dwightway, Berkeley, has a grand display of Enchantress. His Lawson and Queen Louise are well grown, "assuming the God-like attitude of freedom" from carnation diseases. His roses, on Baltimore Belle stock, are vigorous and clean.

A. Massey, of Elmhurst, is busy getting his carnation cuttings into the sand. He propagates from selected stock. The houses are neatness itself. A new range has been installed and there seems to be but one thing lacking about this place, viz., "Highland Mary."

At Ocean View the hillsides are beautiful with thousands of violets, and the pansies from this locality are perfectly grand.

In San Francisco violets are being retailed in large bunches at 10 cents per bunch "all over town." The camellias are a sight. We measured some five inches across the back of the flower. Bride and Maid roses are unusually large and perfect. Smilax is very cheap, except on special occasions. One fine lot sold (in bloom) at 5 cents per string, strings five and six feet long. Other green goods are getting more plentiful, but good quality is still in demand.

Frank & Parodi, of 33 Geary street, have leased another building a little farther up the street. Rents are advancing in the vicinity of the old stand.

A "war of roses" exists around Lot-ta's fountain, the stores acting on the defensive and the basket men driven to the streets.

In Alameda county the horticultural bug hunter would be rewarded by visiting some of the Asiatic establishments. This county is doing some good work in street tree planting. In the coast counties of this state shade trees are not so desirable as ornamental trees, palms, etc.

In the southern part of California, the weather has been so favorable to outside carnations this winter that they are not using near as much bulbous stock as they did last season.

The Cox Seed Company reports a good demand for nursery stock. Mr. Cox thinks this will be their heaviest shipping season, but complains of the freaks of the trade on this coast in having to stock up one month with things that are not in demand a few months later. This, however, has always been characteristic of the Pacific coast. People seem to go to extremes in everything.

W. E. King, of Santa Cruz, has been making a trip around the nurseries and reports business generally good, but delayed by the late rains.

Can anyone tell why so many camelias have dropped their flower buds this year?

A GOVERNMENT STATION.

The horticultural authorities at Washington have been contemplating for some time the establishment of a great outdoor nursery in California. This is quite a distinction in favor of our glorious climate, as it has been demonstrated in several of the agricultural sub-stations already started that we are able to grow and ripen in perfection many of the tropical fruits that are of great commercial value and for which the country pays many hundreds of thousands of dollars yearly for its imports. The great trouble has been that such portions of the Pacific coast as are adapted to the growth of tropical fruits are not blessed with the copious rainfall that makes such vegetation of natural growth. But by the systems of irrigation that have recently been introduced many thousands of acres can and will be brought under cultivation.

G.

No. TONAWANDA, N. Y.—The King Construction Co. recently shipped the material for two greenhouses to a point in California to which the freight rate was $1.67. It looks as though someone thinks a good thing worth going a long way to get.

WE cannot afford to do without the REVIEW.—G. M. THOST, De Soto, Mo.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

A. C. Brown is preparing to remove his range of glass to a better location farther out from the center of the city. He will rebuild the old houses and add to them, making in all about 40,000 to 45,000 square feet of glass.

A. C. Canfield, who was formerly in partnership with Mr. Brown, but who embarked in business independently a couple of years ago, has ordered material for an addition of about 10,000 feet of glass.

Both these orders went to the Moninger Co., Chicago.

OCEANIC, N. J.

The meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held March 4. The ball committee reported all bills paid and a balance of $40 on hand. A fine lot of flowers were exhibited. Geo. H. Hale had a nice bunch of violets, Princess of Wales, for which he received 95 points. He had also a dish of fine strawberries, Nick Ohmer, scoring 100 points. H. A. Kettel had some fine tulips, Proserpine, Canary Bird, White Hawk and Due Van Thol, which scored 300 points in all; also some narcissi, for which he received 240 points, and for roses 80 points. N. Butterbach had some sweet peas, Christmas, which scored 90 points. Wm. Turner had some narcissi and hyacinths which scored 140 points. Geo. Kuhn had some celery, very fine for this time of the year, scoring 80 points. N. Butterbach told the boys in poetry about a dream he had, which created a great deal of merriment.

BREITMEYERS' NEW ROSE

TO BE DISSEMINATED APRIL 1, 1904

COLOR—Prevailing color a beautiful shell pink, shading in the center to a soft rose pink. The reverse of the outer petals is of a creamy, flesh tint, shading to silvery toward the base, which may best be described as opalescent. The full open flower discloses a vivid richness of coloring, rare and fascinating. FRAGRANCE—Subtle, strongly tea-scented; reminds one of old Bon Silene. FORM—Large cup-shaped, heavy petal, shell-like in formation. GROWTH—Strong and healthy, with a rich, glossy foliage, rampant and vigorous, with a strong tendency to long shoots; very prolific. ALL ORDERS BOOKED FILLED IN ROTATION, BEGINNING APRIL 1.

HEATING LONG SASH HOUSE.

Can a sash house, running east and west, 12x200, built on a side hill, east end four feet higher than the west end, be successfully heated by placing the boiler at the lower or west end, the piping to be one 2-inch flow and two 2-inch returns on each side, hung upon the side posts to house, one above the other, with the same grade as the house, i. e., four feet rise to flow from boiler to farther end of house, and four feet fall on return to boiler, or in other words, the flow and returns to be parallel to each other, and run at the same grade as the ground? Can 1,200 feet of 2-inch pipe be heated as economically in the above house as it could be in two houses of half the length each?

S. S. P.

The sash house can be heated with the pipes arranged as described. With water at 180 degrees the six pipes should be sufficient to maintain the house at 40 to 45 degrees in severe weather. The system will be more economical and more efficient if the runs are kept at 100 feet or less. Hot water moves slowly and decreases rapidly in efficiency in systems with runs over 100 feet in length. If it is practicable to build two 100-foot houses instead of one 200-foot house hot water pipes arranged as above described will prove more efficient than in the longer house.

CLEVELAND.

James Eadie has made all preparations to remove and rebuild his establishment at a more favorable location as soon as the building season opens. He will have a range of 20,000 feet of glass in fine shape when the work is completed.

Adam Graham, than whom there are few better known or more popular men in the trade, has been in Florida for six weeks. His friends will be glad to learn that his health is improving.

MARION, IND.—Elijah Burrows and John Smithaker were seriously burned about the face and hands in the Burrows greenhouse east of Marion February 24. A gas pipe burst and an explosion followed which destroyed the building, entailing a loss of $2,000.

HEADQUARTERS FOR EASTER PLANTS

Blooming Easter week and from now on if desired. I am noted for the past years and have a reputation and the trade all over the land to grow a large assortment and plenty of choice blooming plants of every description. I have an immense stock—seven large houses and five hotbeds are crammed to their full extent, and are in better shape and condition than before.

Azalea Indica—Three houses filled with this only choice American variety. I know exactly what my customers and the public in general want. I and my son Howard went to Europe last summer on account of the scarcity of Mme. Van der Cruyssen, and must say with great pleasure that we were successful in obtaining 2,000 of this beautiful variety. I offer you them now as the gem of my stock, only none of it has been picked out by fall sales (and have the residue left). I make it as a rule not to offer any in the fall outside of Xmas. Please note my prices of the 2,000 Mme. Van der Cruyssen: 6, 7 and 8 in. pots, all sizes, as round as an apple, covered with buds, 60c, 75c, $1.00; specimens $1.25 to $1.50 each. Other varieties of plants. We also have a large stock of Bernard Andre Alba, Niobe (double white), Empress of India, Prof. Wolters, Veraneana, Dr. Moore, Soode Manhout Paul Weber, Sigismund Rucker, Illustre and about 12 more leading varieties, 6, 7 and 8-in. pots, 50c, 60c, 75c, 90c $1.00; specimens, $1.25 to $1.50 each. If pots are not wanted we take the fresh soil off, because Azaleas never make new roots during winter. This makes packing light and safe, which reduces the express charges considerably.

Lilium Harrisi and Japan Multiflorum—I have about 2,500 to offer, raised from H. F. Michell's special brand of bulbs; 6 inch pots, from 5 to 8 buds to a plant, 10c per bud; under 5 buds, 12c.

Cineraria Hybrida—I have a house full of 2,000 6 in. pots, all shades, from H. F. Michell's best strain, $3.00 $4.00 and $5.00 per doz.

Daisies—White (Marguerites), 6 in. pots, $3.00 per doz.

Begonia—Pres. Carnot, 6-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; mixed varieties, 4-in. pots, $1.80 per doz.; Vernon in bloom, 4-in. pots, $1.50 per doz.

Cyclamen—4 in. pots in bloom, $2.00 per doz.

Primula—Obconica, 4-in. pots, $1.80 per doz.

Spiraeas—Compacta, Superba, Floribunda, 6-in. pots $3.00 to $4.00 per doz.; Gladstone (new), 6-in. pots, $5.00 per doz.

Hyacinths—Only the choicest, my own importation, all shades, $10.00 per 100.

Hydrangea—Otaksa, 6 to 7-in. pots, from $4.00, $5.00, $6.00, $9.00 to $12.00 per doz.

Tulips—Touresol, double red or yellow, best selling Tulips, 3 in a 4-in. pot, $1.50 per doz.

Daffodils—Von Zion, best double-nosed, 3 in a 5½-in. pot, $2.50 per doz.

Araucaria—Excelsa, 5½ in. pots, 3 tiers, 50c; 4 to 5 in. pots, slightly damaged, 25c and 30c to 40c; 6-in. pots 5 to 6 tiers, 22, 23 to 26 ins. high, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 each; extra large specimens, 8-in. pots, 28 to 35 ins. high, 27 to 35 ins. wide, perfect jewels, $3.00 to $5.00 each, worth easily $5.00 each.

Ficus Klantica—(Rubber plants), 6-in. pots, from 20 to 28 ins. high, $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 and $6.00 per doz.

Dracaena—Branti, 22 to 25 ins. high, good for decoration, 35c to 50c each.

Moon Vines—Smith's Hybrid, best in the world, $5.00 per 100, 2½-in. pots. To save express charges please state if pots are wanted.

All goods are shipped at purchaser's risk. Cash with all orders. Buyers coming to Philadelphia are respectfully invited to visit my place and inspect my stock before buying elsewhere. Take 13th or Germantown avenue car to Ontario street.

STEAM HEATING.

Has anyone in the flower business experimented with steam heating otherwise than with the gravity system? We are thinking of building a boiler pit and the same will have to be blasted in the solid rock. We would like to know if anyone has experimented with steam boilers by placing them on top of the ground.

D. B. H.

There are many ranges of glass heated by steam with boilers on a level with the houses. With such arrangements steam traps are used and the return water discharged into cisterns or reservoirs sunk below the level of the returns, from which it is pumped back into the boilers. For this purpose boiler feed pumps can be used or the returns may discharge directly into a tank or reservoir to which a steam trap, which works on the vacuum principle, is attached, which will return the hot water directly to the boilers. For plants which are small the steam trap is very satisfactory when there is considerable drop in the returns, and when the boiler pressure is maintained above eight pounds. Few of the traps work on a pressure of less than six pounds. For very low pressures there is no successful system which returns the water to the boilers except the gravity system unless other power, such as electricity or an auxiliary steam boiler, is maintained to run a pump to feed the return water into the boilers. If it is practicable, maintain a gravity system.

DOBBS FERRY, N. Y.

The regular meeting of the Dobbs Ferry Horticultural Association was held Saturday evening, February 27, with President Henderson in the chair. There was a prize given for the best flowering plant grown in not more than a 6-inch pot, which was awarded to C. Wilson, for Primula obconica. Other exhibitors were Mr. Kasberg, Mr. Boreham, J. Bradley and T. D. Lee. Mr. Noodle and Mr. Kniff were the judges. An interesting discussion followed on the culture of the exhibits, in which almost all the members present took part. A schedule was made for the exhibition to be held on Tuesday, June 14. It was voted that this exhibition should be free to the public and that exhibits should be sold on consent of the exhibitor and the proceeds be given to the Dobbs Ferry Hospital Association. A. C. Field, Dr. Todd and B. Huston were elected honorary members.

TULIP TALK.

As regards soil, etc., it may be stated that the tulip delights in a nice rich light soil, and, when potting, leave the top of the bulb level with the surface of the soil, and do not press too firmly. The great point in forcing tulips, says a writer in the Gardening World, is to be sure that the bulbs are well-rooted ere commencing to force, as on this point much of their successful cultivation depends.

The Duc Van Thol varieties are the earliest for forcing; these are too well known to need description. A tulip well worth forcing in large quantities is Mon Tresor, a variety with large, rich, golden-yellow flowers of very attractive appearance, which can be had in bloom by Christmas easily; moreover it grows to a good height (11 inches). Pottebakker White, too, is very effective, as is Canary Bird, a rich, beautiful yellow. Proserpine, a rich, dark, silky rose, should not be omitted from the list. One of the finest for pot work is Vermilion Brilliant, which does not belie its name, and is worthy of a place in every collection. The writer has also found Bacchus a very useful variety for forcing. Then Cottage Maid and Rose Gris-de-Lin are both liked, their colors being so delicate, yet very distinct and pretty. Both respond readily to forcing. La Reine is too well known to need any description. L'Immacule, too, is a nice, early white variety, and is not expensive; while to those who desire a first-class tulip, Joost Van Vondel White is a lovely variety, albeit rather expensive. Pink Perfection is another variety of great merit, with its beautiful deep pink flowers, and is always appreciated. Keizerskroon is very effective, with its bright red, yellow-edged flowers. Three very fine scented varieties much liked are Prince of Austria, a delightful orange-shaded scarlet variety, and a nice, tall grower; Thomas Moore, rich orange, and Golden Prince, both of which latter are well known.

The writer forced all the above-mentioned varieties last winter, and they did so well as to merit another trial this year. In connection with tulip forcing, one often hears the cry of short stalks, but the writer averted this by the use of inverted boxes and pots to fit over the other boxes and pots, thus drawing the stems. In conclusion, the writer must not omit to mention Murillo, a double tulip. Double tulips do not, as a rule, "catch on" like the singles, but Murillo, with its fine double rose and white flowers, more like a peony, is always welcome.

MT. CLEMENS, MICH.—Robert Klagge is preparing to put up three more houses as soon as the weather will allow. He has his carnations and violets in fine shape. He still grows violets in bottomless pots, something the average grower used but one year.

BAY SHORE, N. Y.—H. L. Patthey has a good thing in his Gov. Odell carnation. It is a strong grower, free bloomer, with perfect flower and strong calyx. The color is a clear light pink. He has another variety, named Successor, which he proposes to put on the market next year. It is a cerise pink of good growth, fine flower and very long stem. It is much like the old William Scott in appearance but a much larger flower and better in every way.

HOUSES FOR SOUTH.

I want to build two houses, about 15x60, to run nearly east and west, one for carnations and one for general stock, with potting room at the west end, which will help to keep off the cold wind. What would be the best way to build them, separate or attached, and what kind of wall would be best; also what size boiler and how many pipes to keep the temperature up to 60 degrees when outside it is 16 below freezing. I want to use brick flues in case we have extra cold snaps, but 16 is the lowest we have had here for six years. G. J. S.

In my judgment the ridge and furrow plan will prove most satisfactory for two houses of the dimensions stated, to be used for stock demanding temperatures so near alike. Experience has made me an advocate of a nine-inch brick wall laid in double courses, with air space between the courses of brick, using a header course every fifth course, and a header course on top directly under the plate or gutter. A three-piece cypress gutter with cypress sash bars and a V-shaped valley between the houses supported on 2-inch gas pipe, the ends of which have been split and flattened by a smith to form a Y into which the gutter will fit will form suitable supports, provided the bottom end of the uprights are set firmly upon a stone, brick, or cement base. If, after the gutter is lined up, a concrete base can be made about the base of each upright by filling in for twelve or fifteen inches with soft concrete, which should be allowed to harden before the weight of the gutter is allowed to come upon it, a most satisfactory foundation will be secured. Such supports should be at least as close as six feet apart.

For your climate and houses of the size you mention hot water heating will prove most satisfactory. The houses can be piped with one 2-inch riser running under the ridge and dividing at the far end into twelve 1½-inch return pipes, which can be distributed under the benches or along the side walls, as may seem most convenient, always allowing at least one extra pipe under each of the benches next to the outside walls.

The boiler should have a capacity for at least 1,000 feet of radiation and should be arranged to work on the pressure system, with an expansion tank attached to the return near the boiler and opening into a forty or fifty gallon expansion tank located at least ten feet above the highest point in the flow pipes. The highest point in the flow pipes should be at the point farthest from the boiler, or where it subdivides to supply the returns. L. C. C.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—C. R. Hills, of the Grand Rapids Violet Co., has been in New York for a few days.

BALTIMORE, MD.—James Warden, said to be 102 years of age and formerly engaged in the trade, died in the almshouse February 26.

WICHITA, KAN.—Chas. Mueller's boiler gave out at midnight, February 13, and before repairs could be made the temperature fell to 34 degrees.

CHESTER, PA.—David Wilson, who recently broke one of the bones in his hand by a fall on the ice, is able to attend business but not yet able to use the injured member.

Novelties In Carnations.

We desire to call particular attention to the following novelties, each of which the most critical growers agree is a great advance over older varieties of the same color:

FLAMINGO. Finest brilliant scarlet yet introduced. Large flower, grand stem, early and continuous bloomer.

MRS. M. A. PATTEN. Finest variegated, will supersede Bratt, which it will out-bloom two to one. Better in stem and more pleasing variegation.

WHITE LAWSON. True sport of Lawson and like it in every respect except that it is pure white.

DAHEIM. Extra fine crimson variety, fully as large as Lawson. Grand stem, brilliant color, ideal habit, early bloomer. Will supersede other crimsons.

Price of above Big Four, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. There is sure to be a large demand; orders filled in rotation; it will pay you to book orders without delay.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Handling Seedlings.

In concluding my notes last week I said I would like to say something more about the care of seedlings. Seeds do not certainly need the light to germinate, for nearly all are hidden from the light by the covering of compost of some kind, but as soon as they are above the ground light is very essential or they will draw up and be spindling, and that is a poor start for them. Especially is this true of the dicotyledons, which includes the vast majority of our flowering plants. So, when above the ground, the fullest light should be given them. A temporary shade during the brightest hours of a sunny day is of benefit, for it prevents a sudden and severe drying out which would not be at all desirable, but you don't want them under glass that is whitewashed.

Asters, marigolds, phloxes, balsams, ten-week stocks, dianthus and all that class of annuals you will be sowing now and if you have sown thickly, which we are all so guilty of doing, the little plants, in spite of all the light and air you can give them, will quickly run up an inch or so above the soil before the seed leaves are expanded. As soon as the character leaf begins to show, it is time to transplant them into the flats from which they are sold or planted out of doors. The more room you can give them when transplanted, the stouter will they grow. Some may want an inch and a half apart, some two inches. This is when your asters begin to take up some space in your benches, but it is after Easter by that time and your congestion is over and cold frames and hotbeds have come into use.

Transplanting.

Just a word about this operation of transplanting the seedlings. In that well-known book on market gardening, "Gardening for Profit," by Peter Henderson, he impresses on the gardener the necessity for what he calls "firming" the soil round the roots of such plants as cabbage and cauliflower when putting them into the field. Transplanting these little flowering annuals into flats of 3 inches of soil, or maybe a bed or bench, is the same in miniature. It is no use to elaborate on how senselessly this is often done, or how not to do it. Make the hole in the sod large enough so that the roots can go down straight, and deep enough so that the roots and stem will go down and leave the seed leaves almost lying on the sod. Don't squeeze the soil at the surface tight around the little, succulent stem, the watering will do that, but get your dibbling stick down where the roots are and be sure the soil is compact round the roots, where they can at once take hold. I have seen several thousand little asters pine and grow yellow, because a big tall man punched the soil around the stem at the surface and let the roots hang in vacuum.

Excuse me for alluding to cabbage and cauliflower in these notes, but Mr. Peirce, of Waltham, Mass., says that cauliflower is simply a cabbage with a college education and the great Dr. Johnson said it was his favorite flower.

The Cobaea.

There is that free growing summer climber, or vine, that we have to grow, Cobaea scandens. With us April 1 is plenty time to sow it. When it gets growing it grows so rampant that we lose control of it and it is none the better for planting out with too much growth inside. If you don't know which end of the seed to squeeze into the ground, then sow it edgewise, not flat. Push each seed into the soil till the top edge of the seed is even with the surface and keep in a house at 55 to 60 degrees. When the true leaf begins to show, pot singly into 2 or 2½-inch pots and later shift into 4-inch. There is always a demand for this quick-growing empty space in your sand should be allowed now, for cuttings put in now will not bother you till after the Easter rush, when bench room is available. If you need them, put in all you can of coleus, achyranthes, ageratum, santolina, lemon verbena, heliotrope, lantana, in fact all that class of plants that enter into your spring trade.

If you grow Hydrangea Otaksa as an Easter plant, you will have propagated some young stock, perhaps two months ago. Don't leave them in 2½-inch pots to draw up into lanky plants. The foundation of a good plant for forcing is laid now. Shift them into 3½ or 4-inch pots and pinch out the crown of growth and give them room to make lateral growth as they need it. A light bench and 45 degrees at night is enough.

Easter Plants.

Easter is getting so near that it is uppermost in our minds and a few words about the principal plants for that all-important time seem unavoidable. We fully expected after three and a half months arctic winter that March would be mild and winter would be gone, or going. It is not so with us. Snow, ice and cloudy days are still with us and this makes all the difference with our crops. It is too late now to give any advice, for everything is under glass. Early as Easter is, it seems after all to climber and the price we get for it makes it more profitable than many things.

High Time to Propagate.

As the season advances there will be more sun heat, with the temperature of your houses higher, and less fire heat, with the sand of your propagating bed cooler. This is the reverse of favorable conditions for propagating nearly all soft-wooded plants and therefore no suit the majority of the crops quite as well as if it was fifteen days later. I can only mention some plants whose condition I notice and think about right at this date, March 14. If the largest buds of the Crimson Ramblers are just showing color they are all right. If the buds of the Japan lilies are beginning to point downwards they are none too soon and don't put them into a cool house until the buds are about ready to expand.

Tulips, hyacinths and other bulbous stuff you have only just brought in. If the sun shines they will be all right in a cool house; if cold and cloudy they may want 60 degrees at night. Don't be late with that beautiful double tulip, Murillo. It wants to be out several days to show its satiny pink shade. If azaleas are showing color they are just right; if too forward put them in a cool, shaded house. A bright, sunny day, if not shaded, makes them jump. Rhododendrons will do if just now showing color. They drop their flowers quickly and you don't want them a day too early. Spiræa (astilbe) with the very earliest of their flowers showing white, will be all right and they are wonderfully improved if each plant is stood in a saucer and some liquid manure is constantly kept in the saucer. Lilacs come on so fast that you are not likely to be late with them, but they last a long time in a cool house, so get them out. Every year we have sold 6 or 7-inch pans of double violets. Don't lift them till the last moment, for they are never as good as the hour or day you make them up. If you had Lawson carnations in 6-inch pots with a dozen flowers or buds, how they would sell.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Preparation for Easter.

Two weeks from next Sunday Easter will be with us and, as usual, you will year than it is at Christmas. Not only is it easier to get the blooms open on account of the increased sunlight and the natural strong, quick growth the plants always make about this time, but it is not so dangerous to the health of your plants. Raising the temperature at this time of the year is not so apt to injure your plants or make the stems weak, because the plants are more robust and growing stronger than in midwinter. Not only do they suffer less, but they will recover quicker. That is, of course, providing you do not overdo it. To raise the temperature 20 degrees and keep it up there for a week would go a long way toward ruining your plants for a good spring crop. You can get as many blooms to open by raising the temperature 10 degrees as you can by raising it 20 degrees, and it will not injure your plants.

If you have not commenced to feed regularly you must prepare to give your plants a little extra food during this period of forcing. The soil will be pretty well exhausted and unless you supply a little extra in the way of a liquid or a top dressing the blooms will come out small. A sprinkling of wood ashes would be an excellent thing, or a light dressing of sheep manure, about a good handful to every four plants. If you have neither of these, you can give a dose of liquid made of cow manure once each week.

Also see that there are no dry spots in the beds near the steam pipes or along this high temperature is red spider. After this long continued firing and infrequent syringing you will most likely find a spot here and there near the steam pipes where a few spiders kept themselves hidden all winter and are now multiplying rapidly, and unless you get rid of them at once you will find it a hard task to subjugate them when the days are bright and warm. This spell of raised temperature would give them such a start, too, that it would tax your efforts to the very utmost to head them off.

With saving up the blooms you should proceed much the same as you do at Christmas, only you cannot save them quite so long if the weather is warm. They come quicker and they go quicker. Whatever you do, don't hold back a lot of fine blooms which would bring a fair price until they become a lot of trash and will not only bring a trashy price themselves, but will injure the sale of your good, fresh blooms. In short, try to be fair to your plants and your customers.

A. F. J. BAUR.

ROSES.

Composting the Soil.

As soon as the frost is out of the ground the selection, collection and composting of soil for planting purposes should begin. This work, when left till near planting time, does not give the compost time to get thoroughly incorporated and put into the condition that the young stock requires to draw its food supply from, and consequently if too fresh the young plants have to remain in a starved condition while the food is being prepared by the process of decomposition.

The quality of soil being of paramount importance, its selection should be accompanied by careful, intelligent study and a thorough knowledge of the requirements of the different varieties to be grown. A stiff, fibrous loam is the most suitable for most of the varieties at present cultivated under glass, and this should, if possible, be taken from old pasture land which has a good, grassy sod. The top spit, six or seven inches deep, is the richest part and contains the most fiber. It is therefore the best and, when this can be obtained in quantity, it is preferable to going deeper.

This should be put into a neat pile on ground a little above the surrounding level and well decomposed cow manure added in the proportion of four of soil to one of manure for such varieties as Bride, Bridesmaid and Ivory. For Beauties and Meteors it can be made even a little richer. This should be allowed to lie for at least three weeks before being chopped up. After being chopped it should be allowed to lie for about ten days and then turned over. The turning over should be done, if possible, during bright sunny weather.

Turning the pile over two or three times will prevent weeds from growing and put the compost into that hearty and mellow condition so dear to the grower's heart. The young plants will then immediately go to work when benched.

Soil collected during the spring and handled thus is preferable to that collected during fall, as it does not sour so quickly and is not so liable to produce that objectionable crop of green scum on the surface.

want to cut about four times as many blooms during the week previous as you do during ordinary weeks. It is a much easier task to do so at this time of the the edges. That will tell on the quality as quickly as anything when the days are bright and warm. Another thing you should look for before beginning with

THE MAUFF FERN.

The illustration on page 811 shows the new form of nephrolepis originating with A. E. Mauff, Denver, Colo. This, like other forms now before the trade, is a sport from Bostoniensis. It was shown at the S. A. F. convention at Milwaukee last August and was highly commended by the judges of the plant display, who were A. Ferguson, Detroit; Henry Young, St. Louis; W. L. Palinsky, Chicago; Harry Papworth, New Orleans, and Otto Spiedel, Oconomowoc. The plant shown is in a 6-inch pot and shows the character of the variety. When grown with plenty of room each frond has a graceful curve and twist, while the pinnae are fluted on each edge. The fronds are as soft in texture as in the Boston but are twice as broad as in that variety. Mr. Mauff has worked up a stock of several thousand plants, but has not yet named his variety.

WORLD'S FAIR LANDSCAPING.

[Read before the St. Louis Florists' Club, March 3, by J. H. Hadkinson, Superintendent of Floriculture, Louisiana Purchase Exposition.]

Landscape gardening, what is it? I will try to answer this question. To some it implies a mansion or palace on a corner lot, or surrounded with a few feet of lawn, probably a terrace with a line of balloon-trimmed trees along the curb and another band of grass. To others it means a stretch of lawn with geometrical curves, angles, beds, etc., with statuary, fountains and trimmed trees as adjuncts, and to another class it is nature as near as can be, with a little of the art of man added, which very seldom improves it. This latter shows the hand of civilization in its progress, if so we may call it. How often in this style of gardening do we find trees and shrubs planted as if the planter was afraid of his first attempt and tried to hide by planting others in close proximity. Why not show the characteristic growth of the plants or shrubs? Is it because the planter is supplying the stock and needs to place a large bill before his client? Better plant to give a future effect.

There are other questions I might ask. Does a person plan a large dwelling or building without consulting an architect of repute? Why does this stop here? Is it because the owner can get his work done by men whose interests are of a financial nature and end here, never taking into consideration the future growth of these trees and shrubs? Why not employ a person whose previous training has been in this line and who can bring out, by planting, the prominent architectural features of the building and also block out by planting all unsightly objects in the distance and even close by, giving the desired effects and taking in by vistas, etc., the surrounding beauty spots? Why are homes crowded close together on small lots? Is it because this country is small? No, I say, but why is it? If I could allot this, I would give every person at least half an acre, so their families might enjoy freedom and fresh air.

However, I am leaving the part I wished to speak of off, naturalistic gardening. I can cheerfully quote the saying of Richard Rothe, "that the ultimate American will become heir to all the good qualities of his ancestors," therefore, as the boundless natural resources of our country continue to guarantee prosperity there is hope that the present century will yet witness the dawn of a new era of triumph for American science and art. As for the art of ornamental gardening, let us rejoice in our progress, but let us also realize that much more is to be learned in the naturalistic than in the formal line of work.

I cannot close my paper without a few remarks on the progress of the landscape gardening at the World's Fair, St. Louis, where many styles of this work will be found. The English, French, German, Japanese and even the department of landscape gardening and the department of horticultural, have their different styles, where visitors may choose or criticize as they deem best.

The landscape department has achieved quite a success in the work around the cascades, which ought not to pass without a word of recognition. The sunken gardens between the Mines and Metallurgy and Liberal Art buildings, also the gardens between Transportation and Machinery, come in for a share of praise. The sites of the Agriculture and Horticulture buildings are surrounded by a tract of land given up to the department of horticulture to plant with exhibits of shrubs, trees, plants and grass seed, and which was plotted by this department and is now mostly planted, except the exhibits, which are to come in seasonable weather a little later. The whole tract comprises seventy-three acres, the buildings covering twenty-six acres, leaving forty-seven acres to be divided among exhibitors and their exhibits placed in as pleasing a manner as possible to give a good appearance when finished.

During the latter part of April, 1903, work was commenced by this department on this tract, which was then clay hills and banks, to subdue it and get it in proper shape for planting exhibits. This was up-hill work, as engineers, contractors, graders and others were working and endeavoring to get ahead with their work and ahead of each other, so each could make a showing, and the results of this at the present time is that everything is in fine condition for the finishing touches in the spring.

Twenty thousand roses were planted by this department, which made as fine growth as six feet. Paul Neyron planted May 13 made four feet three inches. Shrubbery was planted as late as June 12 and all has made a remarkable growth. The first bed of roses, a circle of fifty feet diameter, was planted when steam graders were working all around, and the next bed was planted a quarter of a mile away. By this you will understand what difficulties had to be bridged over when commencing. At the present time every inch of the ground has been covered with from three to sixteen inches of good black loam, as necessity required, and lawns of mossy grass have appeared in places which were clay mounds.

East of the Agriculture building is located the rose exhibits in this section, six acres in extent, being contributed by many nurserymen. Adjoining this is a section given up to conifer exhibits. Directly north of the north main entrance to this building is located the floral clock, which has a dial of 100 feet in diameter. This dial will be planted with flowering and foliage plants. The minute hand is fifty feet long, and last, but not least, will keep time, the minute hand moving six feet every minute. The mechanical working of this clock will be revealed by doors in the tower opening at each hour. It will also strike, marking the hours and half-hours. Electricity will make it possible to see the time by this floral feature after darkness sets, for 2,000 lights are dispersed over the dial.

On the west side of the Agriculture building, north of the center, will be massive beds of cannas, gladioli, caladiums and dahlias, in extent from 400 feet to one-half acre. South of the center on the west side of the Agriculture building, on a two-acre tract, will be located the wild flower section, these flowers varying from nymphæas to opuntias. Fall flowering perennials will be prominent in this planting, also the beautiful autumn foliage.

Returning to rose gardens, we will journey south adjacent to this section. On the south are collections of shrubbery and specimen lawn trees. Farther south, northeast of the conservatory and southeast of the Agriculture building, the aquatic sections are located, the larger being one acre in size and 800 water plants will be used, mostly nymphæas. The space between the Agriculture and Horticulture buildings will be given over to formal treatment. Flower

THE GULLETT ESTABLISHMENT.

We present this week two views of the greenhouses of W. H. Gullett & Sons, rose and carnation growers, of Lincoln, Ill. One illustration shows a partial exterior view; the other shows two new iron gutter carnation houses, the one nearest the camera being the Lawson house in full crop. Gullett & Sons' place consists of twenty-two houses and about 80,000 square feet of glass, mostly devoted to the production of cut flowers, which are shipped principally to the St. Louis market. The firm has some very fine fancy carnations, Adonis, Prosperity and Enchantress, as well as most of the good standard sorts, and grows some fine Brides, Maids, Meteors, Perles, Ivory and Golden Gates; also two houses of American Beauties.

THE GLADIOLUS.

The following is an extract from a paper recently read before the New Jersey State Horticultural Society by Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y.

While I do not claim to be an authority on the gladiolus, I do lay claim to being the most enthusiastic grower in the country, and I think justly so, too, for annually I have this confirmed by amateurs, seedsmen and professional growers who visit my fields, leaving them reluctantly and always with the remark that they have never seen better quality and in such quantity.

Being an enthusiast and having experimented with almost every known type of this flower, with varied results, naturally I have found some strains so much superior to others that I am constrained to more especially refer to them. It is an acknowledged fact among all growers of summer flowering plants, shrubs and bulbs, be they professional or amateur, that there is no flower grown which requires so little attention and care, and so limited a capital commensurate with the results, as the gladiolus. Although it is a flower which is especially adapted for indoor blooming after the buds are well developed in the gar-

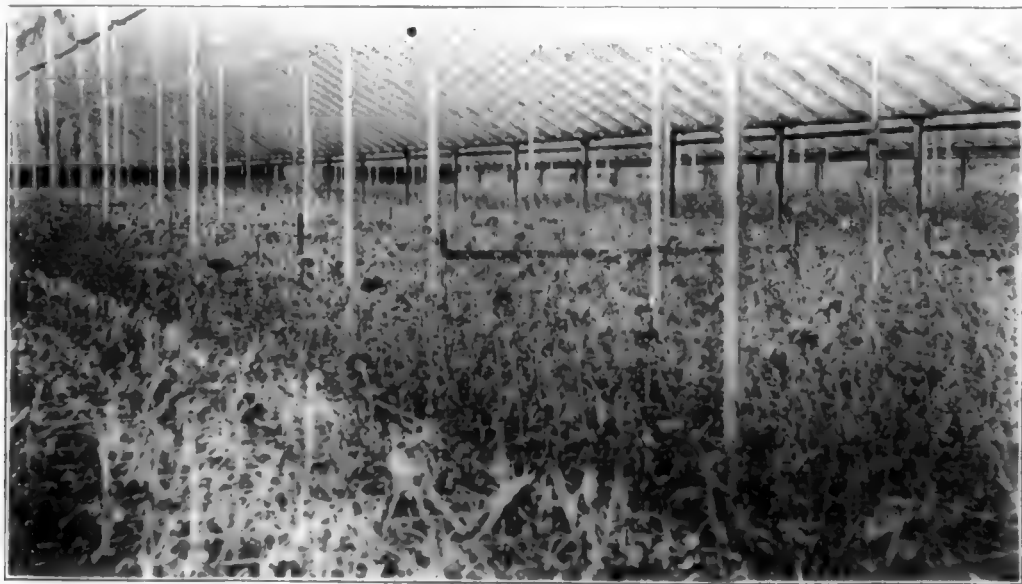

When but a boy on the farm I became especially interested in the gladiolus, noting the many attributes which combined to make it one of the most popular and valuable of flowers. Little did I think, however, at that time that there were such possibilities in the development of the size and beauty of the flower, strength of spike, vigor and vitality of corm as has been accomplished. From the common red varieties, with a few inferior light and mixed colors of a few years ago, have been realized by the hands of the skillful scientific hybridists, thousands of the largest and most gorgeous colored flowers, and in some strains the small flower of a few years ago is now the exception.

With the idea of securing the highest quality possible, naturally, without the knowledge since obtained, I turned to the high-priced European and American novelties as a basis for a large collection. Many of the former, however, for the first one or two seasons, would produce magnificent results, but afterward, owing to some unfavorable climatic conditions, or to supposed improper breeding, such varieties would show deterioration not only in the size of flower, but in the size and strength of corm as well. I have spent in one season as much as $1,000 upon one variety, paying for the same in the neighborhood of 50 cents each for the corms, to find three years after but thirty bulbs left. A most magnificent flower and well arranged upon the spike, but not of sufficient vitality to prosper even under the favorable conditions which my fields afforded. This same variety, protected and coddled like a sick child, has been retained by a few growers.

Then, too, the multiplying qualities of most of the novelties of both foreign and domestic origin have been so meager that it would take many years to increase them sufficiently so as to place them within the reach of other than the wealthy. Whereas, with the new hybrids, the reproductive qualities have been strengthened so that not only quality but quantity is as readily secured, thereby placing them within reach of the masses.

I remember very well my first experience with that old red variety, Brenchleyensis, which is generally considered to be a very rapid multiplier, but which, compared with some hybrids with which I am most familiar, is very slow indeed. It is unusual to find more than 100 cormels attached to this old variety, while upon the new hybrids it is quite the rule to find hundreds, and these, too, from bulblet planting.

It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that many growers of this queen of flowers have become discouraged and disgusted with its cultivation, after having secured at high prices varieties bearing the name of some distinguished person or place, and at the same time a most enticing description, to find that these lauded varieties are chance hybrids, the work of bees, butterflies, etc, and not the result of the work of the careful hybridist, with whose extended experience and knowledge of the proper selections of parent plants, these same hybrids or their counterparts could be secured, and of such vitality and vigor that the liability of deterioration would be remote, compared with the chance hybrids which in most strains are the rule rather than the exception. In making the above statement I do not wish to be understood as taking the position that all named va-beds will embellish this portion of Agriculture hill. On the terrace north of the Horticulture building will be placed the foreign exhibits. A terrace 500 feet long, with promenade along entire length, will be treated formally.

den, still a most magnificent display can be secured by planting en masse or by the use of this flower as a background for continuous blooming dwarf annuals. With a succession of from two to three plantings about two weeks apart, there would be no lack of bloom during the entire season in our northern climate, and with more plantings, our flower loving friends in the south and warmer climates could prolong the blooming season.

rieties are chance hybrids, for there are many which have been secured by careful work and are a credit to the hybridizer. Nor do I say that there are not some fine creations secured, the result of pollen-carrying insects. The percentage of worthy varieties thus produced, however, is very small, and the parentage of even these too questionable to rely upon.

The fundamental points of excellence to which the hybridizer directs his attention are beauty, quality, purity of color and a constitution able to produce healthy and vigorous growth under climatic changes, consequently in working up to his ideal, many fine specimens have to be discarded, which, under most favorable conditions, might be retained. These points of excellence, of course, are not considered by the honey searchers, and there are few hybridizers whose standard of quality is so high but that they retain many varieties lacking some of these attributes.

My principal object in making these statements is to impress upon you that it is not always the highest priced bulb which gives the best results, for from a system which is quite contrary to the general rule which has been followed by gladiolus hybridizers, there have been obtained strains the quality of which far supersedes many of the high-priced named novelties, which strains, by reason of their prolific multiplication the grower has been able to place upon the market at exceedingly low prices. These strains can be multiplied by the purchaser with little fear of deterioration.

But a few years ago, and even today among many flower enthusiasts, the blue gladiolus is unknown, while there are to be had many shades of this color, embracing also delicate hues of lilac, heliotrope and clematis, enhanced and relieved by wonderful stains and blotches. The foundation of this strain is the species Papilio, and although the flowers are small, compared with most commercial strains, yet, through crossing, larger and more magnificent flowers are being secured yearly, which is sure to make this strain most popular.

ANTHURIUMS.

This genus of warm greenhouse or stove aroids are mostly natives of the West Indies and tropical America and form one of the most handsome and attractive groups, both as regards flower and beauty of foliage. The intensity of color and brilliancy of some of the flowers, such as A. Scherzerianum Veitchii, is unique and startling, and has been named the flamingo plant, from the fancied resemblance which the flower and stem bears to the head and neck of that bird. This variety must not be confounded with A. Veitchii, a white variety introduced in 1877 and grown more for the beauty of its foliage than for its flower, which is inconspicuous.

A. Scherzerianum is also a very handsome and striking variety, with intense scarlet spaths three inches long and two inches broad, and has an orange colored spadix, compact habit; height, one foot. A. Scherzerianum maximum is a very fine variety with brilliant scarlet spathes, which measure nine inches in length by four inches in breadth. A. splendidum, which is grown for the beauty of its foliage, is quite distinct from any others of the genus. It is a noble looking plant and would grace any collection.

There are many hybrid or garden varieties which are beautiful in foliage and flower and are quite as easily grown as the species. They all require a warm, moist temperature, and until the plants are well established a good deal of intelligent care, which is amply repaid by the beauty and lasting qualities of the blooms and by the gorgeous tropical appearance the wealth of foliage gives to a house. As a parlor or window plant during the summer they are unsurpassed. The method of culture which seems to suit nearly all the species and varieties, whether grown for beauty of bloom or foliage, is nearly as follows:

The true condition of atmospheric moisture seems to be essential for this class of plants, and any one who wishes to be successful in the culture of these aroids will have to study the climatic conditions which they enjoy in their native habitat. The soil or compost in which they thrive best is composed of two parts fibrous peat broken into pieces of about half an inch square, one part fibrous loam of the same dimensions, and one part sphagnum. To this should be added some broken potsherds, some charcoal and some silver sand. The pots must be perfectly drained, so that all surplus water may escape freely. The roots must be carefully spread out and the compost worked in between, keeping the crown of the plant a couple of inches above the rim of the pot, the compost to form a sort of a mound leading up to the crown.

They must be syringed frequently and the atmosphere of the house kept moist. They succeed well in a temperature of 65 or 70 degrees and after the season of growth is past a partial rest at 60 degrees for two months will do them good. Some of the less tender varieties even succeed in maturing their growth and flowering at this temperature. After being potted they should have a light shade until growth is commenced.

Propagation can be effected by seeds, but the process is so slow that it is not very interesting, requiring about a year from the time of fertilizing until the seed is ripe and another year before the plants are fit for anything. The usual method employed is to divide the crowns during January and treating them much in the same manner as the old plants.

As they are moisture loving plants, they must have copious supplies of water at all times, and particularly during the growing period, which is during spring and early summer. RIBES.

A CENTURY OLD.

The Royal Horticultural Society of Great Britain was organized March 7, 1804, and the Gardeners' Chronicle commemorates the centenary by a special issue containing a story of the long and honorable career of the society and sketches of the founders, all fully illustrated. As the historian concludes, "in spite of all its vicissitudes the record of a hundred years is decidedly inspiring. The second century opens well and hopefully. The future of the society, in so far as the advancement of horticulture is concerned, will depend upon the practical recognition of the fact that no real progress is possible without the extension of scientific knowledge and its application to practice."

TRICYRTIS HIRTA.

Herbert W. Greensmith, who has charge of Dreer's hardy garden at River-ton, N. J., writes as follows to our English contemporary, the Gardeners' Chronicle:

The recent notes on Tricyrtis hirta were very interesting to me, as this beautiful plant does well here without very much trouble. All it asks of us is to give it a semi-shaded place to protect it from the burning rays of our summer sun. If planted out in the open the fierce light first burns the ends of the leaves and ultimately the stem, till by the end of August the whole plant is almost ruined. It will, however, even then send up shoots from the base, and attempt to flower; and should we have a prolonged fall, it will do so bravely. But planted where the sun will not strike it till towards evening the result is very gratifying. If not disturbed for two or three years it then grows four to five feet high, and produces from thirty to forty of its quaint but prettily spotted flowers on each stem from the summit and axils of the leaves, during the latter part of September and October, for four weeks, or even longer, if there is cool, clear weather; I have known them to last into November.

It is not at all fastidious with us as to soil, growing equally well in sandy and moderately heavy but well-drained soils. I have never had occasion to use any peat, and the plant has been left unprotected during the winter months when our thermometer has shown a temperature of 3 degrees below zero, but has received no injury. I have found it to give most satisfaction when closely divided each year to single crowns or from autumn-struck cuttings, which give the same results. These I plant as early in the season as is possible about six inches apart each way in a solid bed; they then grow about a foot high, and for four weeks or more in the fall are a beautiful sight, being one complete mass of prettily spotted white-and-purple flowers. I have had as many as twenty-three fully developed flowers on a single stem at one time from plants thus grown. Another advantage in keeping them dwarf in this way is that they can, if necessary, be easily protected from early frosts, and thus massed in a solid bed are much more effective than a few isolated plants would be. Cuttings of the growing tips taken in the fall root very readily if inserted in sand and placed in a cold frame in a box or pan. Propagated in this manner, I never care to risk them during the first winter without protection. The tops will die down at the approach of severe frosts to the newly-made callus, from which springs an eye for next summer's growth.

We have also a variegated variety imported as Tricyrtis macropoda variegata. The flowers are not very conspicuous; perhaps this is on account of its not being so happy as the one previously mentioned. This variety flowered in May, and produced large inflated pods, and afterwards purplish-black fruits. Towards autumn the foliage is prettily striped with white, so I should judge, from the Dictionary of Gardening (Nicholson's), it is T. macropoda striata.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market has not yet improved greatly. The cloudy weather has had its influence on the quality of shipments and stock is not up to the mark. Quoted values cannot be considered arbitrary. Often it is "take what you can get." The supply is far in excess of the regular demand and nothing is happening now to create an unnatural call.

Notwithstanding a generally expressed fear that there will not be enough lilies for Easter to go around, the cut flowers are selling at from 8 cents down. Advance orders for pot lilies are being booked generally at 12 cents. Inferior stock may go at 10 cents then, but 12 cents may be safely banked upon as bottom for first quality.

A few bright days last week relieved the violet congestion and many thousands were cleared at $1 per 1,000. There have been very few harvest days for the street merchants during the severe winter. Now their day has come. Its a good thing for the cut flower market. These gentry whom we all decried as a menace in the old days, we now realize to be a great help under certain circumstances.

Southern narcissi are coming in thick and fast, lowering prices still further. The bulb growers have just cause to feel disheartened. Tulips are simply of no account, except a few fancy doubles. Sweet peas are here in floods. Carnations are abundant and prices sagging. The very best of these and roses always find a market, but even the select never go above the price quotations. An examination, however, of last year's prices at this date is interesting. Quotations last March 25, were Beauties specials, $15 to $25; Brides and Maids, $6 to $10; carnations, 50 cents to $8; lilies, $8 to $10; violets, 20 to 40 cents; smilax, $10 to $15 and valley, $1 to $2. The general average is about the same as now.

Rose Night at the Club.

The New York Florists' Club's regular meeting took place on Monday evening, it being rose night. The attendance was about 100 and many were doubtless kept away by the severe storm. The resolutions on the death of Ernst Asmus were read and embodied a touching and beautiful tribute to his memory. Mr. Sheridan, of the dinner committee, made a very satisfactory report. Mr. Nugent, of the entertainment committee, received evidence of the club's appreciation in a special appropriation of funds. The outing committee reported complete arrangements for the summer festival. E. A. Asmus, of West Hoboken, and Henry May, of Chatham, were proposed for membership and Jos. Hayden, of Floral Park, was elected a member.

Carnation The Belle.

The exhibits of roses included vases of Golden Gates, by Robert Simpson; Chateaufort, by Peter Reinberg, of Chicago; La Detroit, by E. G. Asmus' Son; Uncle John, by Peter Reinberg; Liberty, Brides and Maids by John H. Taylor, of Bay-side; Maids, by Frank L. Moore, of Chatham; Brides and Maids, by Henry Hentz, Jr., and Gen. MacArthur, by John N. May and A. Farenwald. A vase of the white Lawson, grown by Chas. H. Allen and exhibited by the F. R. Pier-son Co., and a vase of red seedling carna-tions, by J. M. Cooper, of West Grove, Pa., completed the exhibits, which were all of the very highest quality.

Robert Simpson's paper was entitled "The Rose Grower and his Problems," and was listened to with intense interest. It proved to be most fearless, instructive and original. It condenses the problems of twenty years' experience. He advised the production of high grade stock, even if efforts were confined to the grow-ing of but one variety, so that this may be grown first class and so establish a reputation for doing things well. He spoke of the reluctance of buyers to take up a new variety and considered this an injury to the business, advising a greater variety for the flower loving public. He suggests the resumption of some of the old favorites, mentioning especially Hoste, Watteville, Papa Gontier and Bon Silene.

A. Farenwald gave an interesting im-promptu address, referring particularly to Liberty and La Detroit, to his sys-tem of disbudding and destroying infer-ior flowers to the end that perfection might be attained, declaring that only by keeping the standard of roses high could the place at the head of the pro-cession be maintained. The danger of the carnation taking the lead was des-canted on and a hearty invitation to all present was given to attend the meeting next week of the Rose Society at Phila-delphia.

Antoine Wintzer, of West Grove, Pa., gave a practical and interesting talk on the history of the rose and especially of Golden Gate, one of seven sent to the Dingee & Conard Co., in 1885, by Robert Little, of New Orleans. He gave a his-tory of the rose since 1870, and its prog-ress, speaking especially of the Duchess of Edinburgh, Papa Gontier, Perle des Jardins and American Beauty, of the difficulty of estimating the value of a novelty and the wisdom of an experi-mental station for the careful trial of all new roses before their dissemination. He especially commended the Crimson and Philadelphia Ramblers and Dorothy Perkins for outdoor culture and for Easter forcing.

After Mr. Heller, of New Castle, Ind., was introduced, Mr. O'Mara gave one of his practical and witty talks. The en-tertainment committee did itself proud by a liberal supply of the best the mar-ket affords in the line of refreshments. The club's exhibition nights are a fea-ture that merit perpetuation.

Various Items.

The California violets in pots find a ready sale at Jno. Perkins' whole-sale establishment. The plants are two feet in height and "profusely illus-trated."

Carnation Lady Bountiful.

Friends of Wm. Tricker, the veteran water lily specialist, will be pleased to know of his engagement with the Per-cival Roberts' estate, at Narberth, Pa.

Robert Bottomley, dear to Asheville conventionists, has located at Bernards-ville, N. J., with Senator Dryden.

Anton Schultheis, of College Point, has again been appointed school commis-sioner. Evidently he made a good rec-ord and they had to have him for a sec-ond term.

J. F. McConnell, of New Rochelle, manager for L. M. & L. A. Noe, met with a nerve racking experience last Fri-day night, which included an interview with a burglar and the loss of about $200. A $300 diamond brooch was dropped in the gentleman's haste to close the session and the silver was overlooked. The entry was made from the upper win-dow while the family were dining, and Mr. McConnell could not induce the visi-tor to "stay and have something."

Lewis A. Muller, of the Noe force, has been in line with the rest of the boys; home a week with the grippe.

The New York Cut Flower Co. holds its regular meeting this week.

Charles Millang, whose conservatories have become such an extensive adjunct to his business, employing four men con-stantly, started this line of wholesaling in a small way some eight years ago. Mr. Millang has added to his office force and has secured the whole floor above his wholesale cut flower department for a special Easter display.

Eugene Dailledouze has only good things to say of the Detroit convention. He brought back, among other things, a touch of lumbago.

John Scott has three houses filled with the Scottii fern in all stages of develop-ment, from myriads of runners to 14-inch tubs and specimens that for perfection of shape and complete retention of variety and strength of foliage can-not be excelled by any fern in cultivation. It is such a prolific reproducer that or-ders which were not promised to be filled before June 1, will go out early in May. Three years ago last October there was but one plant of it, with four fronds; now there are three houses 150 feet long crowded with it and after Easter the en-tire Flatbush plant will be utilized for it and Scottii will reign supreme. I saw a single order on Mr. Scott's books for $1,000 worth of large plants from a Fifth avenue florist for fall delivery. Mr. Scott has about 8,000 pots of as fine lilies as I have seen this season, car-rying from five to fifteen flowers.

There have been several cases of prim-rose poisoning lately. Mrs. Warendorff, the florist and mother of florists, has been the principal sufferer.

Charles Weathered has been confined to his home for some weeks with a severe attack of rheumatic gout, but is conva-lescent and was able to attend the club meeting a short time on Monday even-ing.

The New York Market Florists' Asso-ciation met on Tuesday evening for con-sultation about the use of a large tent for market purposes during the spring and summer season, the intention being to cover the entire block at the old stand.

The shamrock will be greatly in evi-dence on Thursday. The morning papers report an "unprecedented consignment of them from the auld sod." There is an annually increasing sale for the plants in the city stores.

Wm. C. Krick, of Brooklyn, removed May 1 to his new establishment, 1164 Green avenue, giving up his retail busi-ness. In the wholesale factory he will have new and modern machinery for the manufacture of his letters and novelties. The Tree Planting Association is agitating the idea of extensive tree planting in the streets of New York from a health standpoint. Madison seems quite like old times again, with Arthur Herrington home from his English voyage and William Duckham recovered from his long and severe illness. John I. Raynor's lieutenant, Mr. Smith, has added to the prospective wholesalers of Twenty-eighth street. The boy and mother are doing well, and Mr. Smith can now attend to his bowling duties with renewed courage. The Easter show and sale at the Herald Square exhibition hall has been abandoned. The growers did not take to the idea. S. R. Wiley has opened an attractive store at 952 Madison avenue, an excellent location.

Bowling.

The Bowling Club will have another prize night contest March 28. Every member of the trade is invited to come and bring a prize to the value of $1 or over. High man gets first choice of the packages. Following are the scores made last Monday:

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business in cut flowers continues extremely dull. Flowers are coming forward in increasing quantities, with a very light demand. There is little prospect of any betterment before Easter and the present season promises to be far from a lucrative one for members of the craft. The weather continues very cold, in marked contrast to a year ago, and plenty of snow and ice still remain. Fuel bills will cut a big hole in profits and the winter of 1903 and 1904, with its severe cold and seventy-three days' continuous sleighing, will not readily be forgotten. Roses are coming in of better quality, particularly in the case of Beauties, $40 per 100 being top price for them. Brides and Bridesmaids are $6 to $10 for the best. Meteors are cheap, nothing bringing over $4, while Liberty has varied from $2 to $10 according to quality. A few Golden Gate, Morgan, Mrs. Oliver Ames, Perle and some nice hybrids are seen, the latter principally Jacqueminot, Magna Charta, Brunner and Mme. Gabriel Luizet. Carnations of ordinary grades are worth about $10 per 1,000. Fine Lawsons are sold for $2 per 100. Fair Maid and Enchantress bring $3, although some have been sold lower. Very few bring over $3. Large quantities are being handled by the street fakirs, who also have a full line of roses, violets and bulbous stock. Double violets seldom reach over 2 cents per 100 and $1 secures 300 of the finest Princess of Wales. These are placed on the market in very large quantities now. Bulbous stock continues decidedly "druggy." Pansies, daisies, myosotis, wall flowers and other flowers suggestive of spring are becoming more in evidence. Opinions vary as to the supply of lilies for Easter, but there will probably be an ample supply for the demand. Prices are still problematical. Disease appears to be very rife still, especially in the Bermuda stock. Some years ago L. candidum was quite considerably grown for the Boston market, but owing to disease was dropped and is now rarely seen. During the past few years some of the private gardeners have taken this in hand and with north of France bulbs have no disease whatever and the spikes carry from eight to fifteen flowers. It would pay some of our enterprising florists to grow batches of this finest of all white lilies for another season. Various Notes. At Horticultural Hall on March 12, Arthur Cowee, of Berlin, N. Y., spoke on the gladiolus, devoting considerable attention to Meadowvale Farm, where seventy acres of gladioli are grown, 10,000 bushels of bulbs dug and over 100 hands employed. Mr. Cowee declined to state what fertilizers he used in his field to produce good bulbs, but said a mixture of three parts bone and one part ashes was good. There will be no lecture at Horticultural Hall on March 19 and 26, the hall being let for an automobile show for the former date and the spring show occurring on the latter.

A delegation of twenty-five from the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club visited the Oakes Ames and F. L. Ames estates, at North Easton, on March 8. Further excursions on field days will be held during the season. The annual grand spring exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will open March 24, closing on the 27th. Everything points to the show being the best held for many years. Exhibitors from outside the state will be particularly numerous. Special features will be orchids, hard-wooded plants, bulbous stock, cyclamens, cinerarias, Rambler roses, etc. Many of the new carnations will be shown. At the last meeting of the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club, on March 16, there was a large attendance. Several new members were elected. The lecture of the evening was by Irving T. Guild, on landscape gardening. At Prof. C. S. Sargent's estate, in Brookline, Mass., there is at present a magnificent display of imantophyllums, big specimen plants in large pots and tubs carrying a dozen or more spikes each of their gorgeous, orange-colored flowers. The death roll among shrubs promises to be an unusually lengthy one this season. Evergreens have suffered severely, many being killed outright. Deciduous shrubs are also badly killed, the much planted California privet again being cut to the ground. Bostonians are sorry that the carnation convention is not coming to the Hub in 1905, but will welcome it in 1906. W. N. CRAIG.

Bowling Contest.

The Philadelphia and Washington bowling teams journeyed to Baltimore on Monday night to play in the three-cornered match for the silver cup offered as a prize by F. H. Kramer, of Washington. The boys from the capital put up a good game, but Philadelphia played better and Baltimore bowled best, so that the handsome trophy will stay with them. After the contest the visitors were entertained by the Baltimore craftsmen. Elaborate preparations had been made for the event. At the conclusion of the repeat E. A. Seidewitz took charge as toastmaster. The principal speaker was E. Morgan, president of the first branch of the city council. Responses were also made by Captain Ernest, of the Washington team; Captain Gibson, of Philadelphia; Captain Seybold, of Baltimore, and others. It was an occasion long to be remembered. Following are the evening's scores:

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The ground hog certainly knew his business when he returned to his winter quarters after a look at the sun on the second day of February. We had our six weeks more of winter, and are on our seventh week. The government weather man says that real spring may be expected any minute, but the only way one would know that it is March instead of an average January is by consulting the calendar.

The continued cold weather is having the result of retarding production in the greenhouses and helping to tide us over the quiet season preceding Easter without a serious glut. There are, indeed, enough flowers, with the possible exception of Beauties, and prices have been weak, but the market has cleaned up on the staples pretty well right along. The process of accumulating a stock for Easter will from this on undoubtedly cause a steadily rising market. Shipping demand continues fairly brisk and steady, and local trade has improved in the last few days.

Qualities are good in almost all departments. Beauties are the scarcest item, although few Meteor roses are to be had; indeed, they are nowadays not often called for, the inquiry being almost always for Liberty, of which there are plenty if shorts are allowed to count. Long Liberties, like long Beauties, seem almost always short of the demand. Brides and Maids are equal to all requirements. Carnations are in good crop, but cleaning up fairly well. Prices have stiffened slightly in the last few days. Bulbous stock is selling slowly. Callas are still a glut and there are lots of Easter lilies, many of them of indifferent quality. The less said about violets, the better; it isn't a pleasant story. Smilax is scarce, but asparagus is in large supply.

Easter points to big business, as many inquiries for prices are coming in. In general it is thought last year's list will prevail, at least for advance quotations. There are sure to be quantities of lilies, but many of them will be poor; Harrisii show much disease. Roses will be in fair supply, but there is likely to be a shortage or select stock. Many growers report decreasing cuts of carnations, so that there is no likelihood of too many for Easter; in fact there seems to be no limit to the quantities of good stock this market can take at moderate figures. Pickled stock won't go at all. Don't pickle.

A good many lilies have been sold for local delivery on the plants. There will be large stocks of bulbous plants in pans and azaleas are plentiful and well flowered. There are a few hydrangeas and Ramblers and plenty of primulas, etc. There are not many growers of this class of stock and few novelties are offered.

Various Notes.

Speaking of general market conditions, E. E. Pieser says the season's results are about on a par with last year, except that fancy carnations have not brought to within twenty per cent as much as last season, and violets are off probably fifty per cent in total sales.

C. M. Dickinson, manager of E. H. Hunt's, has returned from a two weeks' trip to Los Angeles to look at the property there in which he is interested. He was well pleased with his trip. W. E. Lynch, of the same house, is also back from a trip to Hartford, Conn.

P. J. Foley is a director of the Allen Gold Mining Co., with mines in operation at Anaconda, Mont.

Paul Kreismann has sold the Morton Grove Greenhouses to N. C. Moore, of Batavia, Ill., who will take possession at the end of the season. It is one of the largest plants in this locality.

Last week's club meeting was held at Winterson's, twenty-six being present. P. J. Hauswirth and W. N. Rudd constitute a committee appointed to look after a hall suitable for both the exhibitions of the Carnation and Rose Societies next February. The club met last night to hear its report.

The George Wittbold Co. is putting up a number of Easter decorations in the State street stores.

Wietor Bros. are cutting large quantities of choice carnations; they had 18,000 last Friday.

E. F. Winterson spent last Sunday visiting growers at Milwaukee under the chaperonage of C. C. Pollworth. He says that all the stock there looks good but none of it better than the roses of his host.

E. H. Hunt, who bought out J. A. Lynn's birch bark ware business, has made up a large stock of this popular Easter specialty. The bark itself seems of particularly fine quality this season, and these goods are now made up in many attractive shapes. They report a fine trade on it.

Poehlmann Bros. report that quite a number of their lilies, like those of other growers, will be too late for Easter, but that the stock is good. They are now getting 12 to 14 cents for fancy Golden Gate roses.

The Pictorial Printing Co., at Aurora, in which O. P. Bassett and C. L. Washburn are largely interested, had a narrow escape from fire last Sunday. The plant represents $160,000.

Weber Bros. are being congratulated on their success with lilies. They are all longiflorum and a very even lot.

George Reinberg's store has been rearranged and is in better shape than ever before. Their cut has been steadily increasing until they were badly handicapped for space.

Peter Reinberg has accepted the democratic nomination for alderman in the twenty-sixth ward, and will enter upon an active campaign. The ward is normally republican by 800 to 1,000, but Mr. Reinberg is expected to win. Certainly no better candidate could have been selected and every florist in the ward, of whom there are many, will get out and hustle for him. It will be a great advantage to the trade to have him in the council.

Visitors: S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia; E. S. Thompson, South Haven, Mich.; C. R. Hills, Grand Rapids, Mich.

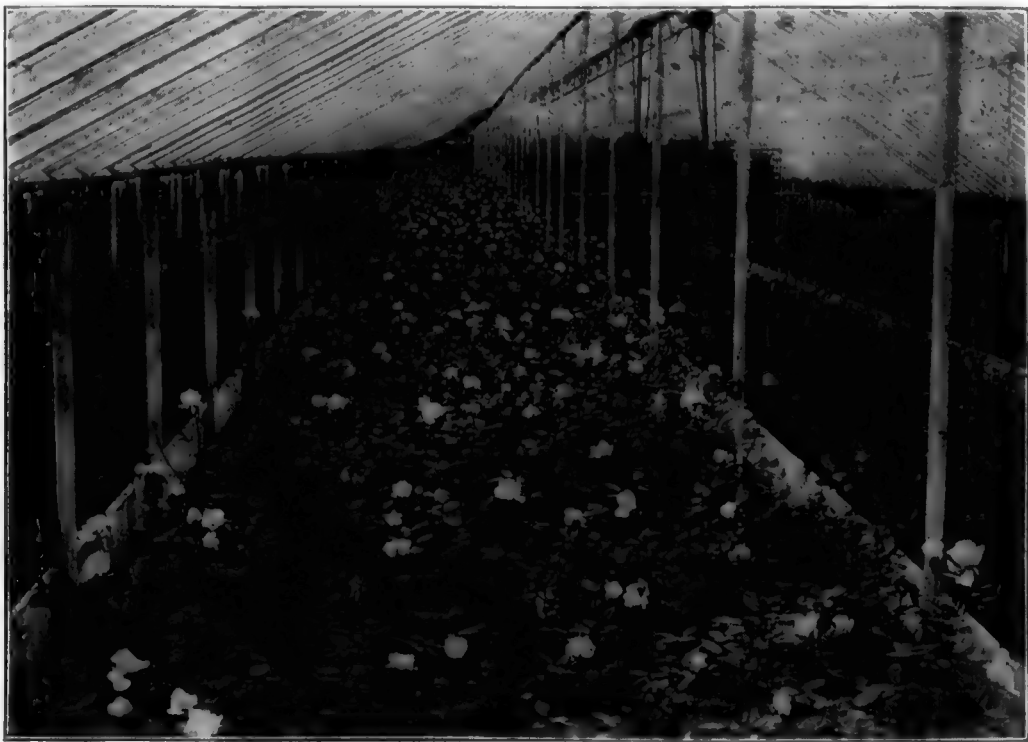

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

A brisk snowstorm gave the city a wintry look at the beginning of the week, slightly retarding crops and adding to the coal consumption at a time when it was thought the worst was over. Roses are more plentiful and, as they appear in slighter demand, prices are easier. Other flowers are about as at last report. Great quantities of bulbous stock are bought at low figures. The event of the week is the shamrock pots and pans offered by W. K. Harris for St. Patrick's day. The department stores bought them in large quantities and the retail florists in smaller numbers, though in the aggregate they consumed a great many.

Easter Plants.

The outlook for Easter is that azaleas will be plentiful and of extra fine quality. Lilies will be offered in fair quantity, but it is probable that really fine stock will be in short supply, with prices ranging from 12 to 15 cents a flower. Several large lots have been sold as low as 8 cents, but it is doubtful whether the grower made a profit on these transactions. There will be many belated lilies, more it is feared than usual. Spiræas promise well. Hydrangeas of good quality will not be plentiful, except at one place. There is a fair supply of rhododendrons, genistas, Crimson Ramblers, white daisies and pot roses are numerous.

A Bench of Brides at the Establishment of the Benthley-Coatsworth Co., New Castle, Ind.

Bulbous stock will be plentiful. There is a noticeable increase in what might be called the centralization of Easter plant sales. Pennoek, Niessen, Reid and the Flower Market are all offering choice plants, which should prove a great convenience to the buyers.

Various Items.

The American Rose Society will hold its annual meeting on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week at Horticultural Hall, in connection with the State Society's spring show. It is hoped that Messrs. Anderson, Andre, Beavis, Burton, Campbell, Farenwald, Heacock, Knorr, Mortensen, Myers & Samtman, Palmer, Weiss and our other noted rose growers will uphold the local honor against all comers. The Florists' Club will give a banquet on Wednesday evening in honor of the Rose Society.

The department stores continue to do a surprising amount of decorating. The Wm. Graham Company embellished Blum Bros.' store last week, while Hugh Graham made fine displays at Gimbel's and Lit's, both of which were in evidence this week.

The Germantown Horticultural Society held its March meeting last Monday evening. There was a nice display of blooming plants in great variety. Albert Woltemate showed Spanish iris, quite an Easter rarity. W. P. Peacock, of Atco, N. J., the essayist of the evening, was unable to be present. His paper on dahlias arrived just at the nick of time by special delivery. It was a clever article, well read by the secretary and received a hearty vote of thanks from the society. A number of questions asked will be forwarded to the essayist.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society held a business meeting on Tuesday evening to arrange details for the show next week.

The note in this column referring to the J. Wolff Moore Co.'s dinner decorations, should have read J. Wolff Moore. The business is carried on individually and not by a company.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., returned on Monday from a very successful business trip.

Wm. J. Muth, of C. F. Edgar & Co., has just returned from a trip up the state. This firm is much encouraged by their March business.

Berger Bros. are receiving fine carnations from Davis Brothers, of Bloomsburg. Their scarlet variety, Crisis, is very effective.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., is back again from his second trip, with which he was much pleased.

Edward Reid has lighted his basement throughout with electricity. The new rose cellar shows to great advantage under the bright light.

Hugh Graham has a fine stock of azaleas in all sizes.

PHIL.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade has been very quiet the past week in all lines except funeral work, which seems plentiful. There is nothing of special importance going on in the social section. Milder weather enlivens the outlook for spring trade. The plantmen, landscape gardeners and nurserymen are preparing for a very busy season in their lines and many of them report plenty of orders ahead. During the past week a great influx of fakirs was noticed. They came from all parts of the country, no doubt drawn here by the near approach of the opening of the World's Fair. All the downtown corners are lined with them, selling violets and carnations. This is not much to the liking of the downtown storemen, who are up in arms. A committee called on the mayor to see what could be done in order to stop this great nuisance and he has promised to look into the matter at once.

The beautiful bright and balmy days we have been having of late will be very conducive in getting the blooming plants in fine shape for the Easter trade. This stock at the present time promises to be fine, especially that of Schray, Beyer, Fillmore and Windler in the south end and Young, Sanders, Felter and Jablonsky in the west end. These gentlemen have a reputation for having fine blooming plants for Easter trade.

In cut flowers, stock of all kind is very plentiful and prices on all grades are down. The market has never been better supplied as to quality and variety. We see today (Monday) a fine lot of Harrisii, tulips, Dutch hyacinths, lily of the valley, California violets, roses and carnations. All three wholesale houses are stocked up for all demands, at prices in reach of everybody. Shipping trade is good.

American Beauties with long stems are somewhat limited as yet, with the price ranging from $3 to $5 per dozen. For the others the price is according to the length of the stem. Brides and Maids are of fine quality, with the select in good demand at from $6 to $8 per 100. Other grades sell slowly at $2 to $3 per 100. The same may be said of Meteor, Liberty and Golden Gate. Perles are soft, with very little call. Carnations are increasing in quantity. Common sorts bring $1.50 to $2. First quality are $3 and fancies run $4 per 100. Quality is of the best, with fine long stems to suit any buyer. In bulb stock Harrisii have taken a drop to 15 cents, with the market fairly well supplied with good, clean stock. Callas are also plentiful and so are tulips, Romans, valley, freesias, daffodils and Paper Whites. These go at prices to suit the buyer of large lots. California violets and sweet peas are altogether too many for the demand and are sold very cheap in order to make room. Smilax is in big demand but very scarce, at prices ranging from 15 to 20 cents per string; $2.50 and $3 per 1,000 is asked for common ferns.

Various Notes.

The S. A. F. executive committee which met here a week ago selected Music Hall for the meeting place and the east nave for the trades' display. Both of these are in the Exposition Building at Thirtieth and Olive streets, which President Breitmeyer says is second to none for the purpose. During the meeting the local club recommended Charles A. Kuehn, whose portrait appeared in our last issue, as superintendent of the trades display. The gentleman was duly confirmed. Mr. Kuehn has already received a number of applications for space and it would be well for those who intend to make displays to communicate with him at once. His address is 1122 Pine street. Mr. Kuehn is at present hard at work making a plan of the floor space in the hall. This will be ready in about ten days and will be sent to exhibitors. Another good move of the executive board was the reappointment of Phil Hauswirth to supervise the bowling contest and Robert F. Tesson the shooting. A great many prizes for both of these contests have already been promised. With the assistance of Carl Beyer, the local chairman on sports, these contests will be in good hands.

The St. Clair Floral Co., of Belleville, Ill., through its president, Dr. A. S. Halstedt, send your correspondent a few blooms of a new red seedling carnation, a cross between Crane and Bon Homme Richard. It certainly looks good and has the habit of the latter in stem and calyx, which speaks well for it. Mr. Halstedt says he will exhibit a number of blooms at the next club meeting.

Charlie Kuehn and Otto Koenig visited Max Herzog last Sunday. They found Brother Max getting along nicely, but not yet able to leave the house.

Miss Tillie Meinhardt, who attended the carnation meeting at Detroit, in company with Mrs. M. S. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., and afterwards stopped a week with Mrs. Vesey, returned home much pleased with her trip.

The death of Walter Kreitling, at Chicago, was a great shock to his many friends in St. Louis, who are with me in extending to his family our heartfelt sympathy.

Reports from the family of Carew Sanders, who had a severe surgical operation performed two weeks ago, is on the road to recovery, to the gratification of his many friends in the trade.

Nic. Himmer, out at Meramee Highlands, is making preparations for building four new greenhouses this spring. Each will be 25x100. Nic is sending in a fine lot of violets, both single and double.

A new floral establishment is to be opened this week by J. W. Dunford, president of the St. Louis Carnation Co., of Clayton. The store will be located at Broadway and Franklin avenue, in Johnson's drug store. It will be in charge of Miss Jennie Repeto, who just left her cousin, Miss Badaracco, at 1308 Olive street.

John Steidle, of Clayton, left Sunday night in company with Fred C. Weber, for West Baden, Ind., to be gone about ten days.

Bowling.

Next Monday night the Florists' Club team, composed of C. A. Kuehn, A. Y. Ellison, Carl Beyer, Theo. Miller and J. J. Beneke, will bowl a match game with E. W. Guy's Belleville team, at Worden's alleys. The return match is booked for the Sunday after Easter at Belleville.

The Florists' Bowling Club's two teams rolled a match of five games on Monday night. Some extra fine work was done, as the following scores will show:

ARTHUR COWEE, of Berlin, N. Y., has a handsomely illustrated article on the gladiolus in the March issue of Country Life in America.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Trade this week has been considerably better than the previous week and stock has been cleaned up in a way that pleases both wholesaler and retailer. A noticeable feature has been the sudden shortage in bulb stock and the increase in the carnation supply. While the demand for bulb stock may have been greater, yet the supply was much smaller, so that many orders were refused. At present writing a severe blizzard is passing over this part of the country, which will again demoralize trade.

Carnation Show.

The annual carnation show held under the auspices of the Toronto Electoral District Society, Toronto Horticultural Society and Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association, took place on Friday at St. George's Hall and was without doubt the best exhibition of this kind ever held in Toronto. Much credit is due the exhibitors for both the quality and quantity of the stock they staged.

The chief prize was a challenge cup given by the Toronto Florists' and Gardeners' Association which was won by the Chicago Carnation Co., with their new Fiancee. John H. Dunlop, of this city, was second, with a magnificent vase of Lawson. Other vases for this cup that may be worth special mention were Enchantress, put up by the Thompson Co., Joliet, Ill.; Harlowarden, Alba and Enchantress, by the Chicago Carnation Co., and Enchantress put up by J. H. Dunlop.

For collection of carnations, J. H. Dunlop received first, with fifteen varieties of grand stock. The Chicago Carnation Co. exhibited seven varieties, 100 of each variety, which made a close second. For the best display in the hall, W. J. Lawrence received first, exhibiting some magnificent roses, a number of his Ivory having stems over five feet. Easter lilies, azaleas, lilacs and bulbous stock were also shown. W. Fendley, of Brampton, exhibited violets and received special mention in the judges' report.

The only certificate of merit given was for The Cardinal, exhibited by the Chicago Carnation Co. This company also exhibited Crusader, which is a fine color and good stem, but the flower appeared to be light, not having enough petals.

The other exhibitors were H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md.; Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind.; F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; W. J. Palmer, Buffalo, and John N. May. These exhibited new varieties of carnations, all of which are very promising.

The new roses exhibited were J. Breitmeyer's Sons' La Detroit, which is a new and pleasing shade of pink, with fine stem and foliage; Peter Reinberg's Chateaux, which is favorably commented upon, and Uncle John, similar to Golden Gate, only of a more decided pink; Storrs & Harrison's General McArthur, a rose of much promise.

Other exhibitors were the Dale Estate, Brampton, which put up a fine exhibit of roses and carnations; Wm. Fendley, of Brampton, who put up a fine show of carnations and violets; Manton Bros., who put up a fine collection of plants, including orchids; Jay & Son, who had a collection of plants and carnations.

Among the visitors from out-of-town were Jas. Hartshorne and J. D. Thompson, of Joliet, Ill.; E. Dale and Wm. Fendley, of Brampton; H. L. Janzen, of Berlin; H. Stansbury, Oakville; A. H. Ewing, Woodstock, and John Morgan, Hamilton.

A very interesting part of the show was the auction sale at the close, with Thos. Manton as auctioneer. The stock was in fine shape and realized good prices. Of course, this was only done with stock shipped a long distance, as there was duty and express against it.

CINCINNATI.

The Carnation Show.

Our annual carnation show proved to be by far the finest we have ever held and it is an open question whether a finer lot of carnation blooms have ever been staged at any show anywhere in this country. In this statement I am backed up by a well-known carnation grower who has seen all the principal shows. There were so many blooms staged that the club rooms were scarcely large enough to hold all of the exhibits. The average quality of the blooms were way ahead of the ordinary, and one thing that is especially worthy of note is, that there was not a sleepy bloom to be seen anywhere. Nearly all of the late introductions were represented, besides a large number of older varieties, many of which did not suffer greatly in comparison.

So many were the varieties exhibited that it would be impossible to give even a brief description of them all; but among the exhibitors were W. K. Partridge, Richard Witterstaetter, the Thompson Co., H. Weber & Sons, Baur & Smith, F. Dorner & Sons Co., Chicago Carnation Co., Henry Schwarz, J. W. Rodgers, C. C. Murphy, the E. G. Hill Co., E. T. Grave and C. H. Kunzman. Prizes were awarded as follows:

Best vase fifty blooms, white, first to W. K. Partridge, with Alba; second, R. Witterstaetter, with Albatross; third, Chicago Carnation Co., with No. 500.

Best vase pink, first, R. Witterstaetter, with Enquirer; second, Baur & Smith, with Indianapolis; third, the E. G. Hill Co., with Lawson.

Best vase red, first, R. Witterstaetter, with Adonis; second, the E. G. Hill Co., also with Adonis; third, W. K. Partridge, with Chicago. In this class The Cardinal was entered by R. Witterstaetter, but was not considered by the judge, owing to its being a seedling. It was generally conceded that this variety was by far the best red in the show.

Best vase crimson, first, Chicago Carnation Co., with Harlowarden; second, W. K. Partridge, with the same variety.

Best rose variegated, first, W. K. Partridge, with Prosperity; second, J. W. Rodgers, with Bradt; third, The Thompson Co., with Patten.

Best vase variegated, first, W. K. Partridge, with Dorothy Whitney; second, R. Witterstaetter, with the same variety.

Best vase seedlings, first, R. Witterstaetter, with The Cardinal; second, R. Witterstaetter, with Albatross; third, C. C. Murphy, with a red seedling.

Best general display was awarded to R. Witterstaetter.

Baur & Smith's Indianapolis was awarded a certificate of merit.

W. K. Partridge made the largest exhibit, staging over thirty-five vases of blooms. It was a magnificent sight; besides being staged in first-class shape, the blooms averaged an exceedingly high grade.

R. Witterstaetter's exhibit consisted mostly of seedlings and there were many of them. A large vase containing almost fifty distinct varieties was the center of attraction. One of his seedlings, No. 1000 A, a light sparkling pink, darker than Enchantress, is one of the most beautifully colored carnations I have ever seen, and if it turns out as good as it looks it will be heard from next year.

Theo. Bock, of Hamilton, was the judge, and did his work in his usual thorough manner.

The Market.

Business is about the same as last reported, but there is not quite so much stock to be had and prices are stiffening up a bit. Bulbous stock is going somewhat better, especially Harrisii. Green goods are still scarce, especially smilax. The supply of ferns is short also, and the price is now $3.50 per thousand, the highest I have ever known them to be.

Notes.

J. O'Malley was on the sick list, but is about again.

Arthur George, son of Ben. George, has arrived from England and will study the greenhouse business under his father.

Visitors: Mr. Fulle, E. G. Hill and Vernon Grave, of Richmond, Ind.; Theo. Bock, Hamilton O., and Walter Mott, Jamestown, N. Y. C. J. OHMER.

GRAND RAPIDS.

The weather conditions have been a potent factor up to date. Half the water service in town is frozen up, so great has been the cold. James Schols was one of the afflicted ones, he had to lay pipe a block on the surface of the ground to a water hydrant in order to get a supply. The writer was summoned home from the carnation convention to thaw out the water at the Lake plant. The plant was 3½ days without water; 1,400 feet of pipe was laid on the surface of the ground to get water until the regular supply was thawed out.

We have had a few sunny days that have helped to improve the quality of carnations and roses, which are flowering now a bit too freely for an extra large crop for Easter.

The lily crop is away behind but if there are a few more sunny days there will be at least some growers in with a heavy cut. The outlook for flowering plants for Easter is fair.

Mulick Bros. froze up during the extreme cold and have planted their houses to lettuce, radishes and cucumbers.

Eli Cross has eight violet houses thrown out and planted to lettuce and cucumbers; it is considered a paying crop, after the holidays are over.

There will be considerable building this season, in spite of the hard winter and enormous coal bills. The intending builders placed an aggregate order for 1,200 boxes of glass which will later be considerably increased.

YOUR paper gives more returns than any other.—A. SCHOEPE, Marietta, O.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The market for cut flowers remains about the same as at my last writing, with stock slightly on the increase, but not enough for the demand, as it is cleaned up every day. Prices for carnations are from $2 to $6 per 100, which sell at retail from 60 cents per dozen for dark colors, 75 cents for all light colors and $1 per dozen for Enchantress. Tulips, daffodils and hyacinths find a ready market this winter at from $2 to $4 per 100.

Various Notes.

The florists and gardeners of this city have organized a club and have elected active members to occupy the chairs. It is expected that we will have many interesting meetings during the year. Honorary members will also add to the success of the club. Another meeting will be held in a few days, which will bring more accomplished work in view.

Geo. F. Boucher, 191 E. Main street, has opened a flower store with James Vick, the seedsman, and reports a good trade.

Felix Albert, 70 East avenue, has opened a fine store decorated with palms and seasonable cut flowers, also novelties in baskets, jardinières and ribbons.

With the Growers.

Recently I took a trip around to see how the greenhouses were coming out after the arctic weather we have had. I found them all in just as good shape as expected. First of all I called on Miss Crooke and found the foreman, H. Salmon, just as good natured as ever. He was busy with his man potting up bedding stuff and had his houses pretty well loaded, as he said he could not find enough room for all the plants and is anxious to have warmer weather so he can put some of them out in frames. He showed me his carnations, which looked fine, and reported good steady picking for the season. Miss Crooke has a splendid cemetery trade. She reports trade much heavier this season and intends to increase her plant.

I then called on H. Teute, formerly Teute & Diendreff. He has one greenhouse 30x130 devoted to carnations, and one frame on the east side of his house for violets. Everything looked well. It is only his second season in business. He reports trade good. He will add another twenty-five boxes of glass to his place this spring.

I called on C. Suhr, where you will find Enchantress and Lawson in their glory. The house was covered with bud and bloom and was a sight worth going a long way to see. He said that is the way they have been right along.

I then called on Jas. Bishop, who has a fine house of sweet peas, but next season he will plant it to carnations, as he has great call for them. H. M.

WAUSAU, WIS.—C. Lund says that this has been the best season as far as sales are concerned but that it has been an expensive one on account of so much cold weather. He has burned close to 200 cords of slabs to March 1, when the supply ran out and he had to buy coal. Slabs cost $2.50 per cord and coal $5.50 per ton. He is in hopes coal will prove the cheaper at those prices.

MASCOUTAH, ILL.—George Nickel has decided to discontinue business and has sold his stock to Gus Nickel, already in the trade.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The carnation meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists was held at Jacob Schulz's residence Tuesday night, March 8, and brought out a very large attendance of florists and ladies who came to admire the beautiful new roses and carnations which were sent from the different growers. The tables on which they were shown were beautifully arranged.

Breitmeyer's Sons' new rose, La Detroit, and Peter Reinberg's new rose, Uncle John, were the centers of attraction and were admired by all who saw them.

F. Dorner & Sons Company showed their new carnations, Lady Bountiful and The Belle, which were considered the coming whites. Baur & Smith's vase, of Indianapolis, a beautiful pink, took the eyes of everybody. E. G. Hill Company, of Richmond, Ind., showed a vase of Adonis which was well done and much admired, also their vase of Lawson was hard to beat.

The Cottage Gardens showed The President, Judge Hinsdale, Octoroon, Ethel Ward and Sensation. John May's vase of The Bride was admired. It is a beautiful white. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., showed a vase of their New Daybreak and some new seedlings. The Thompson Company showed Nelson Fisher and Mrs. M. A. Patten. E. A. Nelson, of Indianapolis, showed a very fine vase of Mrs. E. A. Nelson.

R. Witterstaetter, of Cincinnati, showed a vase of The Cardinal, a beautiful red, which pleased everybody. A Rasmussen, of New Albany, Ind., showed a vase of well done Enchantress and Lawson.

Joseph Coenen & Co. showed a vase of different kinds of carnations. A. Heitz showed a vase of roses consisting of Brides and Bridesmaids.

Jacob Schulz's display was a vase of Nelson, Prosperity, Estelle, Lillian Pond, Joost, Enchantress and Adonis and several vases of his seedlings, which were very fine. Also a vase of Mme. Chatenay roses, sweet peas and some very fine pansies in bloom. His lilacs were very fine and admired. C. H. Kunzman showed a very fine vase of Prosperity.

WATER-TIGHT BOILER PIT.

Will some one please tell me through the REVIEW how to go to work to build a pit that will be water tight in low land, to set in boilers for greenhouses?
R. S. H.

It is a very difficult matter to build a pit to keep water out. It is much easier to build one to hold water. Probably as nearly a waterproof pit as can be secured would be obtained in the following manner: Excavate a pit at least two feet larger on all sides than is desired and make the excavation at least a foot deeper than desired. First lay a concrete floor consisting of broken stone, sand and Portland cement in the following proportions: One part of cement, two parts sand and five parts broken stone broken about one to two inches in diameter. Mix all thoroughly and moisten sufficiently to make sand and cement adhere to stones, then tamp firmly. Lay a floor composed of such material at least four inches thick over the entire pit. After it has set (hardened) coat the surface with a mortar composed of one part cement to three of sand, to the depth of one-half to three-quarters of an inch and on top of this build the walls of the pit, laying the stones or brick in cement mortar and plastering the wall with a good coat of cement mortar similar to that used for surfacing the floor. Do not replace earth about the sides of the pit until the wall has set and the plastering on the outside is hard. It should be done, however, before the cement mortar dries sufficiently to check.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—C. H. Kunzman has a new carnation support which he proposes to put on the market. It is three stakes carrying two rings and is collapsible, making it very easy to handle.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.; Vice-Pres., F. A. Weber, St. Louis; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-eighth annual convention will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

THE nurserymen who handle phloxes report an annually increasing business on this item.

A HARDY shrub worthy of more general use is Andromeda Mariana, sometimes referred to as the lily of the valley shrub.

At Palestine, Tex., thieves have been raiding George Reuter's nursery. Among the stock stolen were 800 trees of the Reuter October peach.

SOME of the shrubby hypericums are useful as ground covers in many places, as they can be grown in shaded situations where few shrubs will thrive.

If the severe winter has killed Caryopteris mastacanthus to the ground, the young shoots may be expected to spring up freely and flower the first season.

WHERE Viburnum plicatum is seen in comparison with V. tomentosum planters almost invariably choose the former; there is now only a slight difference in price.

THERE is a constantly increasing sale for hedge plants. Any florist who can maintain a piece of well kept hedge on his grounds will find it a standing source of profitable orders.

THE Capital City Nursery and Orchard Co., of Indianapolis, has been licensed to incorporate with $10,000 capital stock. The incorporators are H. G. Beckner, E. A. Henby and Oma Beckner.

THE ginkgo, Salisburia adiantifolia, is in good demand; it is one of the best of trees for use in cities. Not only is it odd and ornamental, but it is immune from most insects and grows where the unnatural conditions are fatal to many trees.

SPEAKING of the success which attends care in the shipment of collected rhododendrons, the Wm. H. Moon Co. states that last season a customer to whom they sent a consignment of six carloads lost less than two per cent of the plants. They dig a large ball of earth and protect it in damp moss.

CHARLES A. SADDLER, the well-known nurseryman of Bloomington, Ill., died March 10, of pneumonia. He was, with his brother, proprietor of the Home Nursery, with which had been merged the business of F. S. Phoenix. Mr. Saddler was a man of most exemplary character and high standing in his community and the trade. He was but 46 years of age and had gained a considerable fortune.

Vegetable Forcing.

"I do not know," says an English writer, "to what extent the practice of raising onions under glass early in the year, to be afterwards transplanted into the garden, obtains, but it is apparent that those who have accorded it a fair trial are so enamored by the results as to have adopted it instead of the old method of sowing in the open."

THE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, March 16.—Radishes, 25 to 60 cents dozen bunches; lettuce, heads, $3 to $3.50 barrel; leaf, case, 40 to 45 cents; cucumbers, 50 cents to $1.50 dozen.

NEW YORK, March 15.—Cucumbers, $1 to $2 dozen; lettuce, 10 to 20 cents dozen; mushrooms, 10 to 60 cents pound; radishes, $1 to $2.50, 100 bunches; tomatoes, 10 to 20 cents pound; rhubarb, 30 to 65 cents dozen.

HEATING VEGETABLE HOUSE.

Will you oblige me by giving points about my heating plant? I have bought a new vertical twenty horse-power boiler and wish to know how to pipe my vegetable house in the best manner for steam. The dimensions of the house are 25x180, fourteen feet to ridge, with span of twenty feet to the south and eight feet boarded up to the north. E. E. B.

I judge from the writer's letter that he wishes to use the house in question for the production of lettuce, radishes, and possibly cucumbers late in the season. If so the temperature required by these crops will necessitate about 1,890 square feet radiation or a 3½-inch riser running from end to end of the house under the ridge and returning by sixteen 1¼-inch returns. These may be arranged upon the outside walls in coils or, if raised benches are used, small coils, say of three pipes at the south side and four at the north, may be placed on the walls, with the other nine pipes distributed under the benches. If solid benches are used the nine pipes may be distributed over the benches about eighteen inches from the surface of the soil.

The upright boiler will require a deep boiler pit, as the water line in the boiler should be at least two feet below the lowest point in the return pipes, otherwise a steam trap or pump will be necessary to return the condensed water from a hot well to the boiler. In general upright boilers are not desirable for greenhouse heating on this account and because of the small fire box with which they are usually provided. L. C. C.

MUSHROOMS IN CELLAR.

In recent issues of the REVIEW I notice W. S. Croydon's notes on mushrooms and would like to get some further information with regard to the best way to make a start in growing mushrooms. I have one cellar 16x27 and another 8x40 feet. C. B.

In a cellar 16x27 you can have four beds, two on each side, one being built above the other. The beds would of course run lengthwise of the house and in the width of sixteen feet you can make your benches six feet wide. As the bed is better to be away from the cold, damp wall, a space of three inches could be left between the back of the bench and the wall. This would leave a passageway three feet six inches wide up the center of your cellar, which would give ample freedom to take in and out the material for constructing the beds. In the cellar eight feet wide the benches would have to be constructed on the one side only, and to allow freedom to work could not be over five feet wide.

In a very high cellar three benches could be constructed in each tier, but enough space should be left between the benches and over the upper one to give freedom to work. This would require about three feet of space. The lower bench is better to be raised above the ground sufficiently to allow of a free circulation of air under it. In a case of limited space six inches would do, but if a little more can be given, all the better.

The benches should be one foot deep and the bottom boards cut so as to fit closely together. It is a good plan to leave the bottom boards of the upper benches unnailed, so as they can be lifted aside when making the bottom beds, those being the first to be made up, thus allowing an opportunity to get into them and pack the material with the feet.

To make your cellars suitable for mushroom culture through the winter months it would be necessary to have some means of supplying heat, as this crop cannot be grown with any certainty of success if the temperature falls below 50 degrees. In a good, close cellar, with the assistance of the heat from the beds, a flow and return hot water 4-inch pipe ought to be sufficient to give the desired temperature in the 8-foot cellar and double that amount for the 16-foot cellar. The pipes should be arranged so that they will not be too close to any of the benches or they would dry the bed out at the point nearest, which would make the crop come uneven and might even result in considerable injury thereto.

Now that the cold weather is over you could try some beds on the floor of the cellars, making them about five or six feet wide and about two feet deep. This depth would be necessary to insure their retaining sufficient heat to mature the crop. The article you mention having read pretty well covers the preparation of manure, the making up of the beds, spawning, etc., but to this I would add a warning to avoid manure gathered from stables where they use sawdust or wood chips for bedding, as there is always the danger of these containing the mycelium of fungi, which if introduced would work havoc in the mushroom bed.

A moist atmosphere is necessary in the culture of mushrooms, but with the absence of artificial heat the necessary moisture should be easily maintained. Should the atmosphere become dry, however, an occasional sprinkling of the space between the beds may be necessary and even the walls might be lightly sprinkled, but a heavy, stifling atmosphere must be avoided. Some means of airing should be provided and a little air admitted every day when the air outdoors is not too cold, but cold draughts must always be avoided.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. B. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 23d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

E. J. BOWEN, the venerable and wealthy California seedsman, died March 5.

VISITED CHICAGO.—E. M. Parmelee, of the John H. Allan Seed Co., Cheboygan, Wis.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Onion sets are practically sold out here, no yellows are to be had, and but few whites.

THE pea and bean growers all agree that the percentage of shrink and the cost of hand picking has been unusually heavy this season.

FROM the jobbers' standpoint the scarce stocks at present are muskmelon, squash, pumpkin, field corn, beans, sweet peas, seed potatoes and onion sets.

THE board of general appraisers has sustained the protest of R. S. Porter & Co. that certain merchandise classed as seed peas by the collector of customs at New York was dutiable as dried peas.

TORONTO, ONT.—S. E. Briggs, of the Steele-Briggs Seed Co., and W. E. Wellington, of Stone & Wellington, nurserymen, have been elected members of the executive board of the Industrial Exposition.

THE Republican of Ventura, Cal., for March 3 contained an illustrated write-up of the begonias growing on the grounds of the Theodosia B. Shepherd Co., where many fine varieties, including Marjorie Daw, originated.

THE market garden trade is the seedsman's standby. Early or late seasons do not affect it; hotbeds are made when the time comes, regardless of weather, and a yearly order may be relied on with but slight variations.

THE cold weather and snow storms at the north and the planting time advancing at the south makes it hard for the seedsman to make proper connections. An uncompleted southern order is a most annoying thing at present.

THE longer the bad weather continues the harder it will be to properly size up the seed sweet corn situation. The gaps have not yet been filled and no sweet corn has been grown since last fall's harvest, but a lack of inquiry caused by weather conditions has a depressing tendency and will weaken prices until the weather changes.

THE G. W. P. Jerrard Co., Caribou, Me., says that potatoes never kept better in this county than they have the past winter. No rot and very few frosted ones. They are going forward rapidly now at very satisfactory prices. Market stock is netting the farmers from 75 to 80 cents per bushel and seed varieties are selling at an advance of these figures. The indications are that there will be quite an increase in the acreage the coming season. Oats, 50 cents per bushel; hay, $10 per ton.

PITTSBURG CUT FLOWER COMPANY, LTD.

504 LIBERTY AVE., PITTSBURG, PA.

ELMIRA, N. Y.

U. S. Cut Flower Co.

The plans of the United States Cut Flower Company have been materially changed since its inception last summer. It is now fully organized on a substantial basis and is composed entirely of conservative Elmira business men, with the exception of William Algie, who comes here from Alton, Canada, having been connected with the management of the Dale Estate greenhouses for a number of years. The directors of the company are Wm. Algie, president and general manager; W. R. Compton, vice-president; H. C. Mandeville, secretary and treasurer; Frank Inksater and H. N. Hoffman. Plans are being prepared and contracts let for the construction this spring on their tract of land at Elmira Heights, of a block of seventeen houses each 21x200. The King Construction Company's trussed roof with iron gutters will be used, with double purlins, thus allowing the use of light sash bars, 16x24 glass and double rows of ventilators. Mr. King's system of steam heating will also be used, without the automatic stokers. The boiler house will be located alongside the tracks of the Lehigh Valley railroad and a switch run in for coal, etc. It is expected that this block will be completed by July 1, so that stock may be planted at that time and have flowers ready for market in the fall. Most of the space will be devoted to roses and carnations, with some lilies, chrysanthemums and green stuff. H.

QUEENS, N. Y.—The secretary of state has licensed the incorporation of the Cottage Gardens Co., capital $60,000, incorporators Charles W. Ward, Wilhelmina S. Ward and John C. Gowing.

PACIFIC COAST
GREENS FOR EASTER

Huckleberry Branches, the most beautiful of all the wild greens for filling in with cut flowers and decorations. PACIFIC COAST FERNS, with their fine fronds from 2 to 3 feet in length, stand rough usage better than all others. Just the thing for large bunches and decorations. Can be used in place of Cycas. Extra large Ivy Leaves and Sprays from 2 to 4 feet; Mahonia Leaves and Stalks, bronze and green; Pacific Coast Leucothoe, etc. Send for prices.

DENVER, COLO.—The liabilities of Bes-sie Hortop, whose retail store on Six-teenth street passed into the hands of G. S. Redd, assignee, are $3,900, with assets of some $800. On March 2 D. V. Burns was appointed trustee to wind up the business.

APPRECIATION.

From Massachusetts:—"Would not know how to get along without the RE-view, as it contains much valuable in-formation every issue."

From Ontario:—"We are much pleased with the REVIEW and would not care to do without it."

From New York:—"I am much pleased with your interesting paper; it is all anyone could wish for."

From Nebraska:—"The REVIEW has become indispensable to us."

From Kansas:—"The recent article on propagating hardy roses is worth a year's subscription to the average nur-seryman."

We certainly like your paper very much and would not want to do without it.—F. G. MENSE, Glen Cove, L. I., N. Y.

by WILLIAM SCOTT

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid.

Florists' Publishing Co., CAXTON BUILDING, Chicago.

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

HEADQUARTERS FOR EASTER PLANTS

Blooming Easter week and from now on if desired. I am noted for the past years and have a reputation and the trade all over the land to grow a large assortment and plenty of choice blooming plants of every description. I have an immense stock—seven large houses and five hotbeds are crammed to their full extent, and are in better shape and condition than before.

Azalea Indica—Three houses filled with this only choice American variety. I know exactly what my customers and the public in general want. I and my son Howard went to Europe last summer on account of the scarcity of Mme. Van der Cruyssen, and must say with great pleasure that we were successful in obtaining 2,000 of this beautiful variety. I offer you them now as the gem of my stock, only none of it has been picked out by fall sales (and have the residue left). I make it as a rule not to offer any in the fall outside of Xmas. Please note my prices of the 2,000 Mme. Van der Cruyssen: 6, 7 and 8-in. pots, all sizes, as round as an apple, covered with buds, 60c, 75c, $1.00; specimens $1.25 to $1.50 each. Other varieties of plants. We also have a large stock of Bernard Andre Alba, Niobe (double white), Empress of India, Prof. Wolters, Veraneana, Dr. Moore, Soode Manhout, Paul Weber, Sigismund Rucker, Illustre and about 12 more leading varieties, 6, 7 and 8-in. pots, 60c, 75c, 90c $1.00; specimens $1.25 to $1.50 each. If pots are not wanted we take the fresh soil off, because Azaleas never make new roots during winter. This makes packing light and safe, which reduces the express charges considerably.

Lilium Harrisii and Japan Multiflorum—I have about 2,500 to offer, raised from H. F. Mitchell's special brand of bulbs: 6 inch pots, from 5 to 8 buds to a plant, 10c per bud; under 5 buds, 12c.

Cineraria Hybrida—I have a house full of 2,000 6-in. pots, all shades, from H. F. Mitchell's best strain. $3.00 $4.00 and $5.00 per doz.

Daisies—White (Marguerites), 6 in. pots $3.00 per doz.

Begonia—Pres. Carnot, 6-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; mixed varieties, 4-in. pots, $1.80 per doz.; Vernon in bloom, 4-in. pots, $1.50 per doz.

Cyclamen—4 in. pots in bloom, $2.00 per doz.

Primula—Obconica, 4-in. pots, $1.80 per doz.

Spiraeas—Compacta, Superba, Floribunda, 6-in. pots $3.00 to $4.00 per doz.; Gladstone (new), 6-in. pots, $5.00 per doz.

Hyacinths—Only the choicest, my own importation, all shades, $10.00 per 100.

Hydrangea—Otaksa, 6 to 7-in. pots, from $4.00, $5.00, $6.00, $9.00 to $12.00 per doz.

Tulips—Touresol, double red or yellow, best selling Tulips, 3 in a 4-in. pot, $1.50 per doz.

Daffodils—Von Zion, best double-nosed, 3 in a 5 1/2-in. pot, $2.50 per doz.

Araucaria—Excelsa, 5 1/2 in. pots, 3 tiers, 50c; 4 to 5 in. pots, slightly damaged, 25c and 30c to 40c; 6-in. pots 5 to 6 tiers, 22, 23 to 26 ins. high, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 each; extra large specimens, 8-in. pots, 28 to 35 ins. high, 27 to 35 ins. wide, perfect jewels, $3.00 to $5.50 each, worth easily $5.00 each.

Ficus Elastica—(Rubber plants), 6-in. pots, from 20 to 28 ins. high, $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 and $6.00 per doz.

Dracaena—Bruanti, 22 to 25 ins. high, good for decoration, 35c to 50c each.

Moon Vines—Smith's Hybrid, best in the world, $5.00 per 100, 2 1/2-in. pots. To save express charges please state if pots are wanted.

All goods are shipped at purchaser's risk. Cash with all orders. Buyers coming to Philadelphia are respectfully invited to visit my place and inspect my stock before buying elsewhere. Take 13th or Germantown avenue car to Ontario street.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Tony Wean, who had a bad fire at his greenhouses October 24, losing $2,300 on stock, without insurance, now has a good stock worked up again. He sells his product at the Chippewa market and has lately rented larger and better quarters there, which he is busy rebuilding to be in shape for the Easter trade.

All Your Easter flowers and plants will have an added charm, an added value, if you use the RIGHT RIBBONS on them.

"Right Ribbons" are special ribbons for florists. They are perfect in weave, uniform in quality and of superior lustre. The colors match perfectly the Foliages, Carnations, Roses, Violets.

And yet—the prices are less, much less than the usual kind, for "you save all between profits" by buying direct from the mill.

PACIFIC COAST.

OCEAN PARK, CAL.—About fifty persons are employed in the local carnation field of twenty acres.

At Haywards, Cal., a Rhubarb Growers' Association has been organized to market the crops from some 700 acres planted to rhubarb.

LOOMIS, CAL.—A. Mitting has sold a half interest in the California Carnation Co. to Harry McGowan. It is the intention to greatly extend and enlarge the business.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—F. A. Miller is retiring from the cut flower trade. Last week he sold his Market street store, known well locally as the California Floral Depot, to L. Wickstrom, a young man who several years ago was in Mr.

Miller's employ. Two veterans in the trade, August Duhem and H. C. Leopold, formerly with the John H. Sievers Company, and later in the San Francisco trade with good success for their own account, have been engaged as Mr. Wickstrom's principal assistants.

THE PHOENIX.

In California certain species of phoenix attain their greatest size and luxuriance. Chief among them is P. canariensis, which all must admit is the queen of palms. It is hardy as far north as Oregon and none thinks of growing it as a house palm in the neighborhood of San Francisco. It is raised from seed and attains the height of two feet the second year, with several characteristic leaves. When planted in a situation that is sufficiently moist, as this variety likes considerable water, it will grow about three feet a season. The trees begin to bear seed at about their eighth or tenth year and after that when the pods drop the young plants will spring out by the hundreds if the surface of the ground is sufficiently moist. We have in San Francisco specimen trees of the P. canariensis thirty feet high and about the same distance across the foliage. They do very well as pot plants and will endure a great deal of neglect without showing much signs of it on the leaves. The tree commences to make a trunk as soon as it bears seed and our grand specimens in California are the wonder and delight of our eastern visitors.

I have planted in close proximity to the variety just described, several trees of P. reclinata. This is, I find, not as hardy or of as fast growth as the other, although it is one of the most beautiful of the date palms. For the first few years I covered them with burlap each winter and even then the ends of the young leaves were bitten, but they have been planted now about five years and are strong enough to hold their own. P. reclinata is inclined to sucker somewhat here, but if it was a little more hardy it would be an ideal phoenix to plant in a limited space.

P. sylvestris grows slowly with us also but is perfectly hardy. It has not the long, drooping, graceful branches of the two varieties I have previously mentioned, but it is of a more stubby and compact growth and of a glaucous green color. The leaves and stems are exceptionally tough and wiry but I do not think it will ever become very popular here for ornamental planting.

We have several specimens of P. pumila here and were it not so tender it would be an ideal palm. When sheltered it grows a couple of feet a year and when ten feet high the trunk is not over six inches in diameter, after the style of a dracaena. It is very much valued in the southern portion of California but in the neighborhood of San Francisco it cannot be recommended for general planting. The same can be said of P. leonensis, which very much resembles P. canariensis in looks and habits of growth. P. tenuis is a very graceful variety and makes a good pot plant. It is of fairly rapid growth but will not stand frost and consequently is not much cultivated here. The most graceful, however, of all the varieties that have to be kept in pots is P. rupicola. This variety makes splendid, arched branches, very wide spreading and is a splendid seller for a house plant. It is easily handled and good sized plants are always in demand.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Notes.

The florists are beginning to wonder whether the rain will ever stop. Last month we had only half a dozen days that were not showery and this month bids fair to be likewise. Violets are an awful glut and can be had as cheap as 3 cents a bunch, each bunch containing about 200 flowers. Bulbous stock, such as Sir Watkin and Princeps daffodils, can be had at any price from 50 cents to $1 per hundred for the finest quality of flowers, as this weather suits them to perfection. low narcissi have entirely disappeared for the season and tulips are on the wane. Valley of good quality is plentiful and low in price. Harrisii and longiflorum are becoming plentiful and I think they will be cheap at Easter. Roses are scarce, owing to the continued dark weather, but there are enough to fill orders. The price remains about the same but will lower somewhat in case we get a spell of sunshine. Carnations are not over plentiful for the same reason and the price remains stationary. Freesias are getting scarce and short of stem and Dutch hyacinths are disappearing.

Azaleas in bloom are not so noticeable as they were a week ago and I am afraid they will not be in their prime at Easter. Several of our largest growers had poor success this season with imported plants. They were packed too dry and when the cases arrived here both leaves and flowerbuds had dropped off and to force them was, of course, out of the question, and they will have to be grown another year to get any results from them. No one but a dealer who imports from the east and Europe knows how much stock arrives in bad condition. It seems to be impossible to have goods packed so that they can be brought over the continent in the coldest weather and be opened up and found in good order. It takes usually about twenty-eight to thirty-five days to land boxes in San Francisco and as I said before, unless the boxes are well lined and plenty of moss or excelsior used we often have a big freight

Notes.

The Frank & Parodi Company have opened another store at 309 Geary street. E. J. Bowen, the pioneer seedsman, was buried March 8. Mr. Bowen was 71 years of age and had accumulated a large fortune in his business.

Thos. Armstrong, of Fruitvale, has completed plans for a large park to be planted in Vacaville, from which place he has just returned. It calls for the planting of considerable shrubbery and flowering plants and a large area of grass lawn.

Frank Armanino has leased for six years the Chas. Haselbacher greenhouses in Oakland.

The florists of the tri-cities met March 4 in this city and organized the Tri-City Florists' Society. C. Keur, of Hillegom, Holland, was present and addressed the meeting upon the subject of "Florists' Societies in Europe and Their Benefits." Mr. Keur was also elected an honorary member of the new society. Officers were elected and committees appointed as follows: President, John T. Temple, Davenport; vice-president, Mr. Staap, Rock Island; secretary, H. Meyer, Rock Island; treasurer, O. Arp, Davenport; corresponding secretary, Leo Ewoldt, Davenport; board of managers, Mr. Staack, of Moline; Mr. Saethje, of Rock Island, and Otto Klingbiel, of Davenport; committee on by-laws, H. MINNEAPOLIS.

Club Election.

At the annual meeting of the Minneapolis Florists' Club, a bowling club was formed which expects to take part in the national bowling contests at St. Louis this summer. Otto Will was made chairman of the bowling committee and the members will bowl the first and third Fridays of each month. The election resulted as follows: President, Tom Hall; vice-president, Otto Will; secretary, R. A. Latham; treasurer, E. Nagel; member of the executive committee, Jake Weisenstein. It was decided to meet the first Friday of each month. R. A. Latham offered the use of his store for the monthly meetings.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Plant Registration.

Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O., submit for registration: Rose General MacArthur, hybrid tea originated in Indiana, a seedling of Marquis de Litta crossed with a seedling of unknown parentage; flowers large, on long stems, color vivid crimson; foliage deep green and very abundant; a strong grower, throwing up thick canes three to four feet high. WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

Indianapolis!

Was there at the finish

When most of the other varieties were rapidly going to sleep, Indianapolis held up in splendid shape. There are two reasons for this. Indianapolis is a splendid keeper and we have not overfed nor overforced our stock. Our vase of 200 blooms was not entered for competition, that's why you did not see it mentioned among the prize winners, but it made a host of friends. We still have about 10,000 for March delivery. Fine healthy cuttings that will make fine stock for next winter's flowering. Will make you more money than any other pink carnation. Order at once. $2.50 per doz., $12.00 per 100, $100 per 1000.

BREITMEYERS' NEW ROSE

TO BE DISSEMINATED APRIL 1, 1904

COLOR—Prevailing color a beautiful shell pink, shading in the center to a soft rose pink. The reverse of the outer petal is of a creamy, flesh tint, shading to silvery toward the base, which may best be described as opalescent. The full open flower discloses a vivid richness of coloring, rare and fascinating. FRAGRANCE—Subtle, strongly tea-scented; reminds one of old Bon Silene. FORM—Large cup-shaped, heavy petal, shell-like in formation. GROWTH—Strong and healthy, with a rich, glossy foliage, rampant and vigorous, with a strong tendency to long shoots; very prolific. ALL ORDERS BOOKED FILLED IN ROTATION, BEGINNING APRIL 1.

A LEAN-TO.

I have a lean-to facing south, built against a building on the north. The house is 15x40 feet, twelve feet high on the north side and six feet on the south. I want to grow Lawson carnations and pink roses. What is the best way to divide the house for that purpose? What varieties of roses should I grow? Would steam or hot water be best for heating?
G. E. F.

To have the best success with Lawson carnations the night temperature should not exceed 52 degrees, while roses, such as Bridesmaid, Golden Gate and Ivory, which would be the most suitable varieties for such a house, do best at a temperature of 56 degrees. The house should be divided by a partition and an extra coil of independent pipe placed in the part devoted to roses. This style of house is a veritable sun trap and would require extra ventilators to prevent early deterioration of bloom, and in the section devoted to carnations early shading would have to be practiced. Steam being much easier controlled than hot water, and quicker in its action, would be the best method of heating.
RIBES.

BARNESBORO, N. J.—Frederick Pope, who was a veteran of the trade, died March 9 of dropsy, aged 65 years.

ASHTABULA, O.—H. Tong has sold a half interest in his business to DeForest Weeks, who has for three years been with Mr. Tong as manager. The firm will now be Tong & Weeks. They do a wholesale and retail trade, growing asparagus, smilax and carnations principally. Trade is good in this vicinity.

NEW ROSES!
CARDINAL and ENCHANTRESS

CARDINAL—A cross between Liberty and an unnamed carmine seedling. A strong, robust grower, with large, massive crimson flowers, deliciously fragrant. Never shows an open center; keeping qualities first-class.

PRICE—2½-inch pots, $30.00 per 100. Not less than 50 sold, for the present.

ENCHANTRESS—A cross between Testout and an unnamed seedling; the most prolific bloomer under glass; makes no blind wood and never stops growing. Every shoot produces a handsome, clear, pink flower which never fades out; a good keeper.

PRICE
2½ and 3-inch pots, $30.00 per 100.

The GEO. WITTBOLD CO.

1657 Buckingham Place, L. D. Phones 557 and 558. CHICAGO.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Business has been very good the past two weeks, it being quite an improvement over what we have had all winter.

A. B. Hathaway has been doing his own firing this winter and one night recently, when Andrew happened to stay away later than usual, he found, upon his return, a tramp occupying his bed. We have not yet found out who was the most frightened, the tramp or Andrew.

R. S. Hoxie, of Mattapoisett, is bringing in some of the finest white carnations that have been on the market for some time, variety Boston Market.

The annual meeting, supper and election of officers of the New Bedford Florists' Club was held at the Manuin House, March 10. The following officers were elected: President, E. Y. Pierce; vice-president, A. B. Hathaway; treasurer, W. L. G. Brown; secretary, Wm. Pierce; executive committee, R. S. Hoxie, S. S. Peckham and James H. Cleary. A. B. Hathaway read an essay, "Violets and What I Know About Them," which was written by E. Y. Pierce and was very interesting. Otto Sucher is to write an essay on bulbs, Dutch and American grown, for the next meeting.

Wm. Anderson, of Anderson & Williams, Waltham, and Mr. Bryant, of A. H. Hews & Co., Cambridge, were recent visitors.

A SHADED HOUSE.

I have a vacant piece of ground north of my dwelling and am thinking of building a greenhouse there, but about thirty feet of the greenhouse would be shaded until eleven or twelve o'clock. Would such a house be suitable for carnations? M. T. O.

The absence of sunshine during the forenoon would have a very weakening effect on carnations and would result in very weak stems, with flowers off color. Such a house might be suitable for palms, ferns and some kind of miscellaneous stock which requires a partial shade. To build on such a contracted space would be unsatisfactory, the conditions being decidedly unfavorable. RIBES.

WINCHESTER, N. H.—Wm. F. Flint, who, besides being a florist, was a surveyor, died March 5 of pneumonia.

PITTSBURG.

Various Notes.

Business as a whole has shown little change over my last week's report. Stock of all kinds is arriving in large quantities and prices are low.

The forecast on the lily supply for Easter is very satisfactory. The local growers report the stock in the best of condition. The supply will be ample to meet all demands.

John Bader reports a good demand for palms and ferns, and advance orders for blooming plants for Easter delivery are good.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is handling some very fine Easter lilies. Mr. Langhans speaks very encouragingly on the outlook for Easter business.

The Pittsburgh Rose & Carnation Co. will be in full crop for Easter. The Maids, Brides and carnations which they are now cutting are exceptionally fine.

Patrick Maier is sending the Cut Flower Co. quantities of very fine tulips.

Geddis & Blind Bros. are very well pleased with business. Their store is located near the new Wabash terminal. This will add considerably in the way of transient trade to their business.

L. I. Neff has his windows filled with fine blooming plants of his own forcing.

Over in Allegheny E. C. Ludwig is being kept busy with funeral work.

G. & J. W. Ludwig say Lent has not affected their business this season. Julius Ludwig has just returned home from New York, where he has been buying Easter novelties.

One of the prettiest and most costly decorations of the season was executed by Breitenstein & Flemm last week. They transformed a very large ballroom into a garden, which was really a wonderful imitation of the real thing. The effect of hundreds of illuminated Japanese lanterns swung among bay trees, palms and wild smilax, and low masses of blooming azaleas and cinerarias grouped promiscuously, was beautiful. Also bamboo latticed pavilions covered with vines added much to the garden effect. It required twenty large cases of smilax for the decoration. Hoo-Hoo.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—A delivery wagon of P. R. Quinlan & Co. caught fire on a recent evening from the explosion of an oil stove used instead of the usual wagon heater. The fire department was called out and extinguished the blaze.

TO-BAK-INE

FUMIGATING PAPER.

SCARBOROUGH, N. Y., Feb. 3, 1904.

"We wish to say that your To-Bak-Ine Fumigating Paper is the most satisfactory agent for the destruction of Green Fly that has ever been brought to our notice. It is clean, quickly applied and effective. As you know, we have been heavy buyers of this product, all of which has been used in our own greenhouses. And as 'actions speak louder than words' we think no further recommendation on our part is necessary."

PREVENTS FROST ON WINDOWS.

This has been a bad winter for the storekeeper in more ways than one. And one of the ways has been the frosting of the show windows. Burning gas in the windows to keep off the frost is unsatisfactory. Many storemen run electric fans in the windows and this in a measure keeps down the ice, but it is detrimental to the stock in the window. For this purpose the Pharmaceutische Zeitung recommends the application of a mixture consisting of 55 grams of glycerine dissolved in one liter of 62 per cent alcohol, containing, to improve the odor, some oil of amber. As soon as the mixture clarifies, it is rubbed over the inner surface of the glass. This treatment, it is claimed, not only prevents the formation of frost, but also stops sweating.

THE USRS OF SOOT.

Market gardeners around London have the greatest faith in the usefulness of soot. Not only does it act as a rich stimulant and manure to recuperate the much-worked, and severely tasked soil, but it is a great purifier of the ground, sweetening it, ridding it of grubs, and warding off mice. It is not an infrequent sight to observe these districts almost black from the liberal supplies of soot which they are afforded. As regards mice, in some gardens they are a very great nuisance; time and again I have noticed peas on their first day's showing through the earth looking thick, healthy, and all that could be desired, when, perhaps, the very succeeding day reveals an exactly opposite state of affairs. One night has done the damage, and, alas! past recall. Had a good sowing of soot (I am inclined to think the thicker the better) been made either together with the peas, or sprinkled to a full inch on the top of the row, the crop would doubtless have come up intact, and been safe, if protected with peaguards till the latter danger of bird attack when the haulm is swelling.

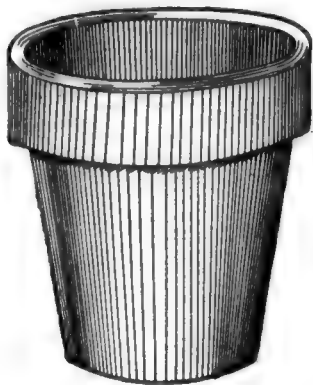

Mice also attack beans quite underground, and an effectual remedy advocated by some, though a tiresome process one would think, is to redlead each seed. Soot, however, is efficient, and, indeed, is good for wellnigh all smaller seeds, whether cabbage, onion, or carrot, sufficing to keep off grubs of every kind. In the case of surface sprinkling, if heavy rains wash the soil clean, a subsequent dose is easily afforded, while the black dressing will have gone into the ground to sweeten and stimulate the staple. Soot, moreover, may be liberally shaken upon plants themselves, advisedly, of course, when wet, otherwise it fails to stick, thus deterring blight, caterpillars, slugs and snails from creeping up and devouring the tender stalk or leaflets. I have sometimes made a ring of soot round a marrow, or other plant, which I knew a snail was visiting by night, and found it an effectual barrier to a subsequent visit. Both slugs and snails are "death" on young cauliflower, melon, lettuce, and cucumber; while they are by no means averse to zinnias, dahlias, and the annunciation lily, stripping the latter two, indeed, mercilessly, and often killing them outright by entirely eating through the stem. Curiously enough I have never found either of them, or, in fact, any insect attack tomatoes, of which I annually grow a large number; presumably they dislike the pungent scent they emit, or their yellow sap.—Gardeners' Magazine.

TO REFINISH STORE FLOORS.

In refinishing old hardwood floors in stores, if the floor has been treated with oil or varnish and has been allowed to become very dirty and rough, the old finish should all be removed. With the use of steel shavings every particle of the old finish can be taken off. The floor may then be finished in every way as a new floor.

MANCHESTER, MASS.—F. F. Brasch, formerly of Coldspring Harbor, N. Y., is now head gardener on the estate of Mrs. Jas. McMillan.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Lent has made some difference to trade the past three weeks and Buffalo being the healthiest city in the world, purest air and purest water and most impure government, business has been rather dull. Still from what we hear of prices in our largest cities, we have some reason to be thankful. Several of our large department stores are decorating for their spring openings this week and that helps some. I have more personal gossip this week than usual.

Various Items.

Prof. John F. Cowell took a steamer for another of his West Indian trips February 20. This time Jamaica is the destination. Let us pray that in that island of tropic heat and almost alpine heights he may discover some unknown gem.

Wm. Slattery has severed his connections with the firm of Byrne & Slattery. The new firm may be Byrne Bros. We hope Mr. Slattery will find something worthy of his ability in our city.

Joseph Staffinger, who for several years carried on business on High street, died last week of congestion of the brain. He was a young man but very active in business and made decorations his specialty.

We have just had a visit from George Fancourt, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., who stopped off for a day on his return from a trip to Spokane, Wash. He has a most favorable opinion of the salubrious climate of that far off state. It rains and snows most frequently in winter, but both are agreeable. The rain is a bath and the snow is warm and refreshing. No frost in the ground. Mr. Fancourt says floriculture is not as advanced in Washington as many other less virtuous industries, but that it will come with settled population and refinement.

Sorry to say, our popular park superintendent, Capt. James Braik, has had five weeks of rheumatism and suffered much. It is about over and he will be around as soon as the parks need him. To see this strong man stretched out and reading Alex Wallace's charming book, "The Heather in Love, Lyric and Lay," is a most pathetic sight, but while so well employed you feel like going to see him frequently; if reading local politics or the latest wrestling match you would not.

There is likely to be all the Easter plants that the trade will need and we look forward with nervous anxiety to what the elements will give us.

It would be interesting, but a sad tale, if all the floods and frosts and fires that have visited the florists could be told of this terrible winter. Out of the bitter experience of many may come good and more will in the future be prepared for very extreme conditions of flood and frost.

W. S.

We are in receipt of the first annual report of the board of park commissioners of Lowell, Mass. The pamphlet is illustrated with some very handsome half-tones.

OWATONNA, MINN.—Thomas E. Cashman, manager of the Lord Greenhouse Co., and president of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co., has been re-elected mayor of the city of Owatonna.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

A JOURNAL FOR FLORISTS, SEEDSMEN AND NURSERYMEN.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO., 520-535 Caxton Building, CHICAGO.

Vol. XIII.

CHICAGO AND NEW YORK, MARCH 24, 1904.

No. 330.

Novelties In Carnations.

We desire to call particular attention to the following novelties, each of which the most critical growers agree is a great advance over older varieties of the same color:

FLAMINGO. Finest brilliant scarlet yet introduced. Large flower, grand stem, early and continuous bloomer.

MRS. M. A. PATTEN. Finest variegated, will supersede Bratt, which it will out-bloom two to one. Better in stem and more pleasing variegation.

WHITE LAWSON. True sport of Lawson and like it in every respect except that it is pure white.

DAHEIM. Extra fine crimson variety, fully as large as Lawson. Grand stem, brilliant color, ideal habit, early bloomer. Will supersede other crimsons.

Price of above Big Four, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. There is sure to be a large demand; orders filled in rotation; it will pay you to book orders without delay.

F. R. PIERSON CO., Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y.

Adiantum Croweanum.

The new introduction in the Maldenhair Fern family.

Will be ready to distribute among the trade about July 1st, 1904: Out of 3-inch pots.

Write for prices and place your order in time.

WM. F. KASTING,

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

A Busy Week at Hand.

Our busiest week and day of the whole year will soon be here. At least it is so with many of us, for there are more plants disposed of for Easter decorations and greetings, to brighten the home and gladden a friend, than on any other occasion. For several years plants have been rather the heaviest part of the trade and annually enormous quantities are prepared in every locality. All are generally used up and we see no reason to expect a falling off in the demand this year. True, the country is not sailing on the crest of the wave of prosperity, as it was a year ago, but the business for Easter is not the elaborate and expensive decoration; it is made up of trifling outlays, but the wish for Easter flowers pervades all classes, rich and poor alike. So here is hoping that none of you will have enough to go around.

We all realize full well that in the three days previous to Easter Sunday, a month's ordinary work and activity is crowded in, and nights must be included as well as days. Extra help is called in, usually of the very green variety, and perhaps of little real help, so it is on the boss and his old hands that the pressure falls. To wait on every customer, please each and above all get all sales delivered satisfactorily and with the least possible mistakes is the earnest desire of all scrupulous florists; but all this cannot be accomplished without system, and if ever that old adage "Never put off till tomorrow what can be done today" was good advice, it is in this rushing time. The wholesale man who delivers a hundred lilies and fifty azaleas to the storekeeper has to hustle, too, but it is not as trying a business as the one that has perhaps several thousand different deliveries consisting of one or two plants or a box of flowers, with the address of the recipient, card of the donor, etc.

Stake and Clean Your Plants.

To business. Do everything that will need doing without delay. If a plant needs a stake and a tie, let it be done at once. If you put off such a necessary but simple job, you deserve to get belated and muddled. Every pot that contains a plant that has any chance of being sold at Easter should be washed. Never mind if it is going to be covered with a Porto Rican mat or tissue paper, for when sold it is a miserable thing to cover up dirt with these dainty dresses and it is not a fair deal to the retail man to send him a load of plants with greasy pots.

In the greenhouse you cannot, as the storekeeper can and should, dress up all your plants with mats and papers and ribbons, or they will get soiled and spoiled before the day of sale or delivery; but a few of each can be decorated in your best style, and that is enough to sell from. Have a portion of some bench set aside for each day's delivery, Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday morning. When Mrs. Langtry or General Kuropalkin selects an azalea, and many good people do like to make their own selections, and orders the plant delivered on Friday, then put it with Friday's delivery. No need of attaching the card or adorning with fixings; that can be done Thursday evening.

Use an Order Sheet.

No matter whether it is a cash sale or "charge it, please," an order should be made out which should include name of purchaser, who the article is to be sent to, what the plant is and price, and any trimming or frills you have promised to put on. You will find these memoranda very useful, for however careful we are a few things will go astray, or you may be accused of sending the wrong article, and if you cannot refer to these orders you are at the mercy of the customer.

There is a great difference in the character or class of business done by different florists. Some may do largely a cash business. I mean, where the majority of customers walk in, select their purchases, pay the price and walk off with their purchases in their arms. Lucky are they who have a large share of this kind. We know more whose cash your city well (he need not be a Greek professor or vegetable biologist) should be detailed to have the deliveries ready to load just as they will want to be delivered, when wagon No. 5 or automobile No. 3 drives up for another load. Now all of the above has consisted of very common stuff, and what should be apparent to all, but I have seen our own folks in great distress and anxiety to get deliveries out on time, because some of the simple things I have mentioned were not observed.

Just a word about the arrangement of the greenhouse, the one you make your show house. First let me say that the store man who has no greenhouse at his back is sadly congested for a few days. He does, or should, make a splendid show in his window, for it is his best advertisement, and the interiors of most city stores are bowers of beauty and enchantment. With a 100-foot greenhouse adjoining your store you have an advantage, but with that advantage you are too often removed from the fashionable crowds. If you have this convenience of a greenhouse, keep your plants in blocks; they are better cared for and it is easier for your patrons to make selections, and better in every way, and when partly gone the stock will not look a wreck.

The Embellishment of Plants.

I know that there are many men, young and old, who could give the writer points on how to enhance the beauty of a plant by the addition of mats or paper of fancy kinds, and ribbons, but I don't know if any will do it, and I can only offer some ideas of my own. There are, first, Porto Rican mats sales would not be over thirty per cent, and ninety per cent must be delivered.

Careful Routing Necessary.

We have always found that the greatest waste of time on these strenuous days was caused in looking out or routing a load for a wagon. It never does to make up a load of plants and in that load have deliveries for widely separated parts of your city; that is obvious to all. A load should be destined for one section of the town. It will save your plants and save time and much vexation. Some one who knows which add greatly to the attractiveness of plants and should be added to the price of the plant, but for that matter you can always obtain two or three times the price of the mat in the sale of the plant. Then there is the embossed or fluted paper and the crepe paper, both of which greatly set off the plant and cost something, but it is easy to make up the cost of paper. And there is the colored tissue paper of different shades, which hides the plebeian pot and does not cost enough to warrant any charge, no more than would it be proper to charge for the fine silk paper with which you line a box to receive a dozen Bridesmaid roses. To deck out plants with frills and tucks and ribbons that were going into a conservatory or private greenhouse would be absurd, in fact outrageous, but our plants don't go there; they go to the drawing-rooms and living-rooms of our homes, and some pretty embellishment is only in keeping with their surroundings, and what will charm and please the recipient of an Easter gift will most satisfy the one who sends the greeting. We must cater to this most laudable sentiment.

Green the Safe Color.

Green for a pot covering will suit any plant, for it is in harmony with the foliage. Some plants can be associated with a shade of the color of the flower, but the paler-colored blossoms best suit themselves to this and on the more brilliant and deeper colors it would be found rather too dazzling an arrangement. A few instances I can offer. A Crimson Rambler rose, if well flowered, should have a green mat or paper, which might be tied with a ribbon, and another ribbon near the base of the plant, both of the same shade as the flowers. Some of the lighter-colored azaleas may be matched with their own shade, with ribbon of the same shade as the flowers, but where they cannot, stick to green mats or green and white tissue paper, which harmonizes with the blossoms of all plants. It is evident that a brilliant Van der Cruyssen azalea with a pot covering of the same shade would be altogether too heavy and the eye would soon tire, therefore a green and white covering or a green mat with a deep pink ribbon and bow would be the thing. I will just say, don't let two shades of pink come together.

A sheet of green and white paper is all a single lily needs, but with the 10 covering. There are a few yellow blossoms, the cytisus and acacia, and here are two plants that nothing so adds to their beauty as a pot covering of the exact shade of their flowers, and even some tasty ribbon arrangement among the branches. For you will not get tired of this color; it is one of nature's. Do not our fields and hedge rows, our oaks and maples, give us gold and orange and yellow through the fall months, much to our delight?

Another pretty plant is Azalea mollis, with its yellow and orange and orange-pink blossoms. There is nothing like its own shades to adorn it, and as it is almost bare of leaves it must have some ribbon scattered through the plant. No plant pays better for the trouble. Large pans of hyacinths, if all of one shade, can be associated with mats, or paper of the same color, but if mixed in color you can only use the green or green and white. I have said about all I can on this subject. Green will go with any shade of flowers and so will green and white. White and pink is harmony, or it is pleasing at any rate.

For the past few years we have sold more lilies in 10 and 12-inch pans containing five or six plants, than singly. You could not get five plants grown in a 6-inch pot, or even 5-inch, into the 12-inch pans or pots if you left the balls of earth entire. Take a big, sharp knife and slice the ball down to three or four inches. Don't do it till the lilies are in bloom and they will last just as long as if they were undisturbed, with plenty of water.

For balmy, salubrious weather let us be good and pray. WILLIAM SCOTT.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Seasonable Work.

After Easter has come and gone we generally look forward to spring and planting out. Easter comes early this year and at least two or three weeks will elapse before we can really go to work at planting out, but it is not too early even now to prepare for it all we can, so as not to be bothered after we do commence with preparations that might have them in will depend largely on how long they have been growing where they are and how strong they have grown. They will not have very much time to grow besides merely establishing themselves and rooting through thoroughly.

Shifting Young Stock.

A pot just large enough to hold them nicely, which would in most cases be about a 2½-inch, will be better than a larger one. I like them to be pot-bound enough so the ball of soil will not break and fall from the roots, and most likely if you pot into 3-inch pots they will not have time before planting out to get into that stage. The same may be said regarding the repotting from small pots into larger ones. If you potted into 2-inch pots in January the young plants will be thoroughly pot bound and will begin to suffer unless they get a shift. They may not show any signs of suffering yet, but wait until the days get warm and those dry winds come along and you will find your pot-bound plants dry three-fourths of the time unless you will keep busy watering them. From 2 to 2½-inch is a small shift, but it will suffice to keep the plants in fine shape for a month or six weeks and they won't take up such a terrible lot of bench space.

Handling Cuttings.

If you have some in sand be sure you pot them up just as soon as they are ready. A good, strong cutting that is potted up early enough to get well established before planting out time stands a good chance of making a first-rate plant for planting medium early. For extra early planting we prefer a cutting that is potted up between January 15 and February 15. These can be topped some time in March and will start the eyes that are to make the plant later on. Sometimes we hear a grower say that he bought a hundred of some novelty and later on took a cutting off each one and rooted it and that these cuttings made better plants than the ones he bought. Now it seems to me any man ought to be ashamed to tell that he was unable to grow as fine a plant from an early cutting as he could from a cutting taken two months later. Whenever that hapand 12-inch pots of these that may contain five or six plants, a white mat with a broad green ribbon, or the opposite, a green mat with a white ribbon, will be found all right. Plants with white flowers, such as the deutzia and lilac, are best set off with simply a green been made beforehand. If you put your young plants on a bench or in flats you should pot them up now at once, as a plant from a pot is nearly always preferable to one that is dug up and has most of the soil shaken from the roots and many roots torn. What size pot to put pens it shows either vicious abuse or gross neglect, or both, toward the older cuttings. Here is about what happens:

On arrival of the cuttings, which perhaps are fine, they are potted into the smallest sized pot because they will root through and start to growing quicker. As soon as they have made a little growth a cutting is taken off, and in taking off the cutting nearly the whole plant is taken along. It would not do to wait a couple of weeks longer because it would get too late and, besides, a bud might appear and make the top useless as a cutting. Then, not satisfied with this abuse, that critical grower who will send back a lot of cuttings because there was a little rust or a few were not rooted heavy enough, or for some other slight fault, will let them remain in the same small pots to become starved and stunted by the time they are planted in the field. Then when these stumps fail to start up and make as uniform a lot of plants as the young tops that were looked after and cared for like a two-minute trotter, this grower will tell you about it and try to give you the impression that if he had not been so wise he would have had no good plants at all.

If a variety grows strong enough to produce good plants from these tops, just think what fine plants those early cuttings would make when handled properly. Too many growers estimate their stock of a variety by the number of plants they have, regardless of the size or quality of the plants. You may have 3,000 plants and yet not have more than enough to fill a bed that holds 1,000 fair-sized plants.

Keep the Plants Clean.

Look over your young stock every few days and top what plants are ready and try to top all the plants of a batch within as short a time as possible, so as to leave them as near a uniform stage as possible. If they were a uniform lot of cuttings you can usually top ninety per cent the first time and the balance will need only a few days to catch up. This will have more or less bearing on the uniformity of your plants all through the summer. Not only will you find much more pleasure in handling a uniform lot of plants, but you will also find it much easier. They will start about the same, they will need supporting about the same time, and they will begin flowering about the same time and, in fact, whatever you do for them will suit each plant the same as all the rest.

If a lot of young weeds are starting, be sure to have them pulled out. Not only will they rob the plants of their food, but the plants are standing close enough together without the weeds, and they will cause them to choke and draw up.

On bright days when watering, give them a good syringing so there will be no danger of carrying a lot of red spider out to the field. If that pest gets a good hold on your plants in the field you will have a hard battle to fight. If there is any rust on them, pick off the affected leaves and burn them. Dust the plants with air-slaked lime, grape dust or sulphur, and keep the foliage moderately dry except for a weekly sharp syringing to keep red spider away. Fumigate regularly or, if your young plants are in the same house with a lot of blooming plants and you don't want to smoke so often, you can dust the young plants quite heavily with tobacco dust to prevent greenfly from attacking them.

It is not a bad idea to have on hand a little of the copper and ammonia solution in case of some of the spot diseases. In fact, a light spraying about once each month will do no harm and it might ward off a bad case of spot.

A. F. J. BAUR.

CARNATIONS NOT KEEPING.

I have read in the REVIEW about some of the carnations at the Detroit convention going to sleep in a short time when put in water. The general opinion was that high feeding was the cause of the trouble and another was that the plants had not had the proper amount of air on account of the severe winter. I have been considerably troubled this winter with carnations going to sleep. I grow mine in a temperature of 50 degrees, air as much as possible on all favorable occasions, and have only fed once this winter, sparingly, with sheep manure. I put the flowers in water as soon as cut, keeping them about twenty-four hours in a temperature of 35 to 40 degrees. They last but a short time after being put in vases the following day. If some of our large carnation growers would give me their method of handling the cut flowers they would be doing a great favor to more than one reader of the REVIEW.

G. M. H.

There is nothing wrong with your culture, and if you handle your carnation blooms properly after cutting you will have less trouble. You keep them at 35 to 40 degrees, which is just 10 degrees too cold. If you will keep them in a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees you will find that the blooms will draw up much water and they will grow and the petals will be crisp and firm. When exposed to a warmer temperature they will stand up a long time. Raise the temperature in your cut flower room 10 degrees and I think your trouble will be over.

A. F. J. BAUR.

NOTES ON VARIETIES.

The following notes on varieties are gathered from the experience gained in the carnation houses of G. Van Bochove & Bro., Kalamazoo, Mich.:

White Cloud is still the best white for winter months. The soil here seems to suit this variety. Flora Hill, the best for spring, summer and fall, but is weak in midwinter. Lorna is a fine, large flower, but a little soft. Glacier is very good; it comes short early in the season, but makes up for this later; a fine, pure white flower of fair size and stem; a good commercial variety. Queen Louise is good if grown warm; 54 to 56 degrees seems to suit it best. Her Majesty does fairly well here; good habit and stem, with fair-sized flower; will give it another trial. Lillian Pond started slowly after housing, but made good growth later; a large, pure white flower, but bursts nearly all, perhaps due to lack of ventilation during long, cold winter; will give it another trial. Murphy's White is full of stem-rot; will discard.

In red Crane still leads; is not troubled with stem-rot here and is never off crop. Estelle has been thoroughly tested in different ways; has fine color, but lame in all other points; will discard. Cuttings of Adonis were very poor; lost nearly two-thirds of consignment; what were left did poorly in the field, but started well in the bench and made good growth; seems as though it will improve, and if so, it certainly is all that one could wish for. Roosevelt is good, but Harlowarden is the best crimson; good habit, good grower, with long, stiff stems and fine, large flowers.

In dark pink Lawson is the best; plants grown in the house all summer produce long stems earlier in the season. Nelson is good; gives no trouble in propagating. Guardian Angel does well; a good grower and producer; flower a little small; will grow more next season. Joost is still grown in quantity and does fairly well; still not so good as in preceding years. Crocker is best for summer and very good. Dorothy will be discarded. Marquis is good in its color; fine stem and flower.

In light pink Morning Glory will be largely reduced to make room for Enchantress, which is very good here; is easily grown, but a little soft for shipping; the best in its color.

Here, as in most all other places, we have caught the seedling craze. One pink variety can be seen growing above all others. This is not possessed of the largest flower, although larger than Joost or Guardian Angel; its principal points are its producing qualities, long, wiry stems and stronger constitution than any other variety on the place; a cross between Cartledge and Crocker.

In variegated Bradt is mostly grown; this has done well up to the past two seasons, but shows signs of deterioration and will be largely reduced. Marshall Field is a good, healthy, upright grower, produces longer and stiffer stems earlier in the season than Bradt; will grow more of it next season. Gaiey does not do well; produces short, stubby growth, with few flowers. Armazindy is still grown; this old standby is principally noted for its producing qualities, for it is a poor seller. Prosperity, the only one of its color, is good, but is not profitable to grow in quantity.

Nearly all the newer varieties are grown, but not in sufficient quantity to make a fair criticism possible.

EPACRIS.

The species of this genus of greenhouse shrubs are mostly natives of Australia, New Zealand and islands of the South Pacific and require cool greenhouse treatment. These plants are much easier propagated and grown than are even the soft-wooded heaths and are, during the fall, winter and early spring, of equal value with the best of them.

By a judicious selection of varieties they can be had in bloom from November till March. In keeping qualities they equal if not surpass any of the heaths, while for gracefulness and color they are far ahead. Either as decorative plants or when used as cut blooms they last longer than any of the heaths.

Though not so sensitive to changes of temperature as heaths, the proper mode of treatment is much the same in principle. The best method of propagating these plants is by cuttings of the half ripened wood, inserted in sand with a bottom temperature of 52 degrees, but the process requires such a long time that it is more profitable to purchase young plants of the size required rather than wait; life is too short.

The most suitable soil for the epacris is fibrous peat, with about one-sixth of sharp sand added. Good drainage must be provided, so that there shall be no surplus left after moistening the ball. When repotting care must be taken not to break the ball nor, in fact, to disturb it in the least, and the soil should be packed evenly and firmly around it.

After the flowering season is over, which will be in March, the erect-growing varieties should be cut hard back and the plants placed in a temperature under 50 degrees until the young growths have attained the length of half an inch, when they should be repotted, if that is necessary. After repotting they should be returned to the same temperature and lightly shaded for the first week. They require little water until they have begun to grow again, but should be frequently syringed, especially during bright weather, when they can receive a gradual increase of air and sunshine.

These plants require about the same care after being placed outside, in regard to watering, as heaths do, and as overwatering is very injurious, it is safer to have sashes handy to protect them during rainy weather.

This class of flowering shrubs is gradually but surely finding a place in the American market, and a study of their nature, habitat and best methods of culture suited to our climate should have a place among our other experiments.

RIBES.

WEBSTER CITY, IA.—James Follett has a new geranium of a very odd and pleasing light pink color. It is a free bloomer and the flowers and trusses are very large. He has had it three years and has worked up quite a stock.

The Lily is Still the Most Popular of Easter Plants.

BEGINNINGS

THE BROKEN COLUMN.

Proportion of the Frame.

In ordering or selecting a wire frame for a broken column, have the diameter of the shaft as large as is consistent with the height of the piece, and the base as wide as the price will allow. The wider the base or mounting of a piece, the more imposing will be its appearance. This need not add materially to the cost of the work, for if the selling price is inflexible, you can help out the size of your piece, or rather the base, with hardy ferns; they are both cheap and effective. The column here illustrated is well proportioned. The distance across the base diagonally is two-thirds of the height of the shaft, and the diameter of the shaft is almost one-fourth the height. These are the proportions of the completed piece. The diameter of the wire frame should be slightly more than one-half the diameter of the finished shaft. The reason for this is that before the carnations or other background flowers are inserted all around the frame, they will begin to push each other out on the opposite side of the column, and before the shaft is completed you will have considerable displacement of a surface which should be perfectly even and smooth. You will need to go over it two or three times again, filling in those spots where the flowers have been pushed out, and smoothing the surface.

Filling the Frame.

Line the bottom of the base with fern leaves, as was done for the pillow, described in the issue for January 7. This is the only part of this piece to be lined. Pack sphagnum moss in rather more closely than for the other pieces, for it must be solid enough to hold the stems upright, and not allow them to work loose. Have the filling of the base deepest at the foot of the shaft, sloping toward the edge. The construction of the frame may indicate this or it may not. Often one can improve on the shape of the frame either in the filling with sphagnum or in the trimming with flowers and green. Next fill the shaft solid with sphagnum, leaving a depression where the column is broken at the top. The only wrapping needed is over the top of the base filling. Use thin hemp cord laced over the top of the frame, tied at a few convenient places on the wire frame.

The Break in the Shaft.

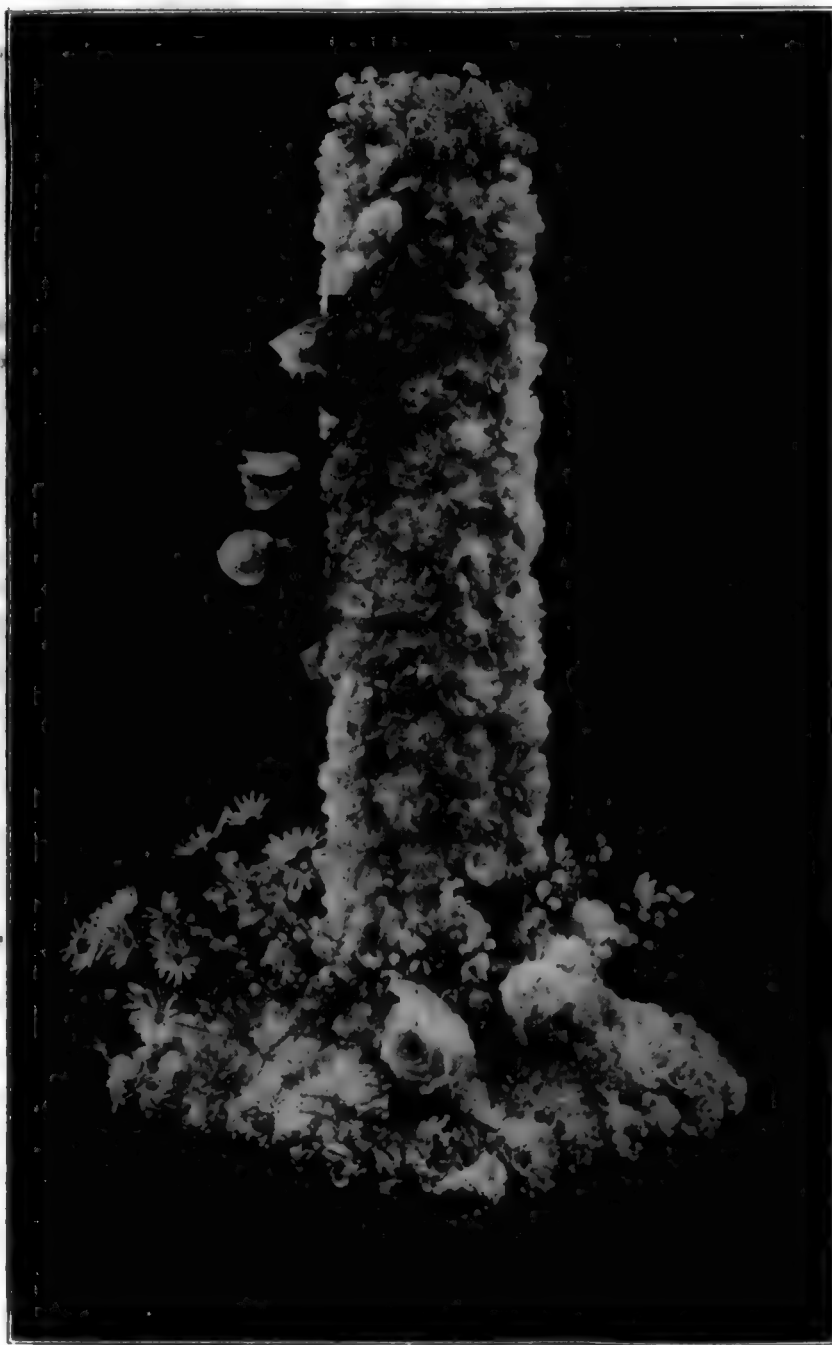

If carnations are to be used for the body of the design, cut the picks for them a trifle shorter than for the pillow for you will find the space all too small for as many as will be necessarily crowded into the column. But we must first prepare the flowers to be used in the broken part of the column. Sweet alyssum seems to be the material here. Cut the sprays into different lengths, from one to three inches. Three or four sprays can just as well be stemmed together, on one three-quarters pick. Hold the bunch of sprays irregularly up and down against the pick, between the thumb and first finger of the left hand, and have a bunch of six-inch lengths of No. 36 wire ready between the last two fingers of the same hand. Draw out a single wire and wrap the stems in closely, down past the point where the last stem touches the pick, catching all the ends tion. There should be a sharp contrast between the filling of the shaft proper and the broken top. There are two ways of doing this: by a difference in coloring, or, as in this case, by a different appearing surface. Here the alyssum filling, by its different length sprays and its new type of flower, makes that part of the column rough and jagged and well represents a break in the shaft.

Covering the Shaft.

After filling in the break, begin the filling of the shaft, from the top down, to keep out of your own way. In contrast to the arrangement of the alyssum, fill the carnations in just as smoothly and evenly as possible. Make this solid surface extend over the base, down to and around the edges, covering the sphagnum completely. Keep a sharp lookout for stray bits of the moss around the lower edges and in among the flowers. Shove in the stray bits, rather than try to carefully at the point of contact with the pick. Stem barely as many bunches as your sight estimates will cover the broken part. Rather have too few, and be obliged to stem a few extra, then have too many stemmed and a part left over.

Fill in the broken end first. If flowers of about the same color are to be used for the broken section as for the shaft, fill it in irregularly and roughly, as shown in the accompanying illustrapull them out. That finishes the construction.

Trimming the Base.

Next, prepare to stem the daisies and lilies of the valley to be used about the foot of the shaft. There seem to be about fifty of each kind in this piece. Stem the daisies three or four to one pick, as was done with the alyssum. Only don't cut off any of the length of the stems. Leave them as long as they can be. It is a saving in time, though not always in the keeping qualities of the flowers, to stem all the flowers before doing any of the filling, but it is scarcely practical for a beginner, for the work proceeds too slowly, and the waiting flowers will show the exposure. Either fill in the background first, and set the piece in a cool room while preparing the flowers for trimming, or put the stemmed flowers in the ice box while the rest are being made ready. Keep the flowers that are waiting to be stemmed in water till the last minute. Don't let any quantity lie around on the work table.

Having stemmed the daisies in various sized groups, insert the most of them irregularly from the foot of the shaft to the nearest corner of the base, some erect against the shaft, others nodding and bending any way they please, but all appearing to spring from a common source. Make another smaller group part of the way around the base at the back of the column.

Handling the Valley.

To stem valley, separate the flower stalk from the thick stem of the foliage that surrounds it; take a whole toothpick and wrap a small valley leaf around its upper half. Still holding the sheathed pick in the left hand, place the flower stalk against it so that the lower end will come a little below the middle of the covered pick, and wrap with wire as in the case of the alyssum or daisies, except that the upper end of the pick is left free from the wrapping. The reason for this will appear a moment later.

In stemming forced bulbous flowers and foliage, it will take a little careful attention to see that the wire wrapping is drawn just tight enough to keep the stem from sliding off the pick and still not tight enough to cut the tender stem. In inserting these tender stems into the sphagnum, hold by the pick and not by the stem. They are apt to break in your hand, before they are pushed in far enough. Catch the free end of the pick which was sheathed with the leaf, and hold and insert the stemmed flower by it.

But there is still another advantage to the sheathed pick: often to hide the upper end of the pick, a stemmed flower must be pushed into the moss so far that the visible part of the stalk looks stumpy. With the sheathed pick you can not only insert the flower in the way to best display the grace of the flower stalk, but you can have the addition of a delicate touch of foliage, which is always valuable in trimming.

The circular garniture of valley extends all around the foot of the shaft through the clump of daisies. Insert the stemmed valley through the carnation background, at various angles to the base. Let some swing out and bend over, while others stand more nearly erect, all springing from the same circular line, but varying in their attitudes. Here and there will appear the spear-like points of the foliage used in covering the pick, and the larger leaves that are stemmed with the flowers.

Making the Garland.

Now it is time to prepare the roses and asparagus for the garland which is to be thrown around the column. Cut a delicate spray of asparagus long enough to reach from the edge of the break on the upper side of the shaft diagonally around the column, and half way around the foot, a few inches beyond the edge on the left side. If it is necessary to cut the asparagus to get the correct length for the garland, be sure that the cutting is done at the large end, leaving the tip to point out the garland. Select about two dozen roses with tractable stems, in all stages from quarter blown buds to the wide open flowers. Remove about half the foliage. Fasten a full blown rose downwards a few inches from the tip of the asparagus spray, attach the rose to the asparagus at the decisive curve of the stem, using a fine wire wrapping. Lay the balance of the rose stem on the asparagus and fasten again at the end. Just above the decisive point on the first rose stem, lay down a second rose, and fasten it to the asparagus as before. Repeat the process along the asparagus spray, graduating from the full blown roses to the smallest buds. The distances between the roses will be irregular, and they will fall naturally, some to one side and some to the other side.

Stem the blunt end of the asparagus on a three-quarters pick and insert securely through the carnation background, well into the moss, so that the pick will be buried deep, just below the break in the column. With the tip end of the garland in the right hand, train it from the starting point, toward the left and diagonally around the column, till it breaks through the circle of valley on the right side of the column at the foot, and falls a little to the left of the front corner of the base, while the fine end of the asparagus extends beyond the edge airily. Fasten the garland here and there where its weight threatens to pull it out of place, using hair pins or wire staples inserted through the background into the moss. The lowest rose should also be pinned firmly on the base.

Character and Coloring.

Since this is someone else's design, I can freely say that it is natural, and therefore especially attractive. The sloping square base is the best setting possible for the piece and the position of the garland contributes to that good effect. I have seen broken columns where the break was not sufficiently distinct to be even suggestive. Study to make this kind of a design strong and decided, so as to be recognized at a glance. In this particular arrangement the break is sharply indicated by an abrupt change in the kind of flowers used, and the styles of filling them into the frame. The break occurs obliquely across the upper right hand side and top, and is indicated by the irregularly filled space of sweet alyssum, in contrast to the smooth carnation filling of the body of the shaft.

With the decided yellow of the daisy centers, perhaps pink or yellow roses would be the better colors to use. Red roses would not be a very good combination with this touchy bit of yellow. The break might be filled with a contrasting color, such as pink, purple, or blue. The base might be laid in with a delicate pink, or yellow, with a white shaft. In place of the daisies and valley, there might be used long, stiff stemmed roses, any kind of lilies, tulips, narcissi, long carnations, chrysanthemums, or fine foliage, such as adiantum, asparagus, or even catchy bunches of wood ferns.

GERTRUDE BLAIR.

A VIOLET GROWER SOUTH.

Yes, I believe that there is such a thing as violets, but here in Florida the fragrance of the orange trees is much more pronounced and when you have been growing violets for years the change in odor is very agreeable and you think it much to be preferred, and yet I doubt not that you could easily get an elegant sufficiency of this also.

The wild violets are plentiful here, both in the pine land and hummocks, unless they have been too lately burned out, the curse of everything nice in the state. The blue ones predominate and are beautiful though not fragrant. When you come to cultivated violets you will find that many people have one or two boxes (generally a soap box) full of fragrant single ones. I have as yet to find that any one grows double ones.

I think that one of the things that strikes a northerner on coming here is to see the large quantity of window plants that people grow, or perhaps I should say veranda plants. Every house has nearly twice as much veranda as house room and a great quantity of this space will be occupied with plants, such as geraniums, ferns, asparagus, begonias, violets and salvias, and nearly the first question that you ask them is: "Why in this land of flowers and sunshine do you bother with those things; why don't you plant them in the ground?" But, alas for your ignorance, their summer is as bad for plants as our winter would be, only with this difference, that they would cook here and freeze north. And so the good housewife spends as much time here in tending a geranium as her sister in the north bestows on a palm that here would grow luxuriously in the open ground with hardly any care at all. And so it goes this world around; we always think that we want something that we do not have and spend our time and strength in trying to secure it.

But do I hear you say that this has nothing to do with violets? You are right; still I think if here you would be glad to "wander," much as you may be interested in them. For instance, yesterday a party of three friends and myself started out in the morning in a nice launch on Lake Griffin; with our lunch and oranges in the lockers, we "put out to sea," so to speak, with no idea of seeking our homes till night. With the balmy air, our light summer clothes, in shirt waists and straw hats, it was hard to realize that you are tied up in snow at home. We went as far as Esmeralda on the Ocklawaha river, and there went ashore and under the shade of the cabbage palms we made a fire of the old dead palm leaves and stalks and made a cup of tea to go with our repast. In addition we went into a grove a little way up the shore and filled our pockets with sour oranges and made "orangeade."

If you could have seen the picture that was spread before us; the innumerable shades of green, from the glossy deep green of the magnolias to the yellow and orange of the new "Jack" oaks; the pea greens on the live and water oaks; the cypress, with its delicate, misty tracings of green, and through and over it all the draping of Spanish moss, all of this touched up here and there with the dash of red from swamp maples. And then looking down the river and out over the lake in the warm, hazy distance, being able to see the round tops of the cabbage palms towering above the dim coast line like sentinels. Well, you would be perfectly satisfied to lie down and dream and forget there was such a thing as violets.

There is certainly a fascination about the south that there is not in the north, and I do not wonder that the southerner thinks that there is no place like home, with its mocking birds, cardinals, towhees, etc., etc. It takes hold of you and increases instead of decreases, and it is this indefinable something that seems to have hold of me and will not come down to raising flowers (violets) for money. Why do we have to do it?

Still I shall have to awaken in a few days and hie me to the north and help the boys, and of course one of the first things will be to look the new stock over thoroughly to see that it is in good condition, to see that there is sufficient for all demands, both for home planting, for the houses, inside and out, and for whatever orders we have for stock from our customers. If you find yourself still short of stock it is time that you hastened to take off what you have in good shape. As it gets warmer and you begin to get busy with spring work do not neglect your stock and let the plants get crowded, drawn up, soft, lose some leaves and then begin to rot, etc. The first thing you know you wake up to the fact that your stock is nearly worthless, just for the lack of a little care and attention.

While you can use more water from now on, still it should be applied with judgment, as does also the airing, which should be all that you can give them, keeping them hardy and stocky and in every way thrifty. Don't forget, too, that aphids, getting a little foothold now, will work great injury to the stock, not only for the time being but it hurts them for next season, to say nothing about the extra labor involved in thoroughly eradicating them when once they get a good start.

In pricking out or potting the stock that has yet to come out of the propagating bed, do not be afraid to reject those that have not struck properly and look woody and are not A1. It is time and labor saved to discard them at once, even though you hate to do it.

R. E. SHUPHELT.

CUTTING AND HANDLING STOCK.

[Read by J. A. Biegan, of Indianapolis, before the State Society of Indiana Florists, March 1, 1904.]

I have been in the florists' business all my life, part of the time growing and part of the time in the retail cut flower business. I have handled a good many kinds of flowers, some good, some bad and some indifferent. I have had quite an experience in handling cut flowers in all stages. Now, to illustrate to you, I have brought some flowers with me cut in different stages. If a man does not understand his business he will lose out when he handles them. Flowers cut at the proper time and given proper temperature and care are a pleasure to the retailer and a credit to the grower.

Here are some under-done carnation blooms. I want to ask if a flower cut in this stage will keep and develop to perfection in water. My experience is that it will not under any treatment. That bloom is only fit for immediate use, say for a funeral bunch, where they are to be used at once. If you keep a flower like that over night it will be a button the next morning, or, in other words, a sleeper. Now, here is a bloom just the opposite. This bloom has been left on the plant too long, and it will do just the same as the other one. Now, this is generally the kind you get Christmas. That's when the store man gets rich. That's the kind you pay 6 and 8 cents for and when you sell them you don't want a Christian behind the counter. Here, in my estimation, is an ideal carnation bloom, cut at the proper time and in a stage where it will keep. You need not be ashamed to sell that bloom and the grower can feel proud of it.

I don't believe in keeping carnations in the ice box. I believe that carnations will keep better in a cellar with a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees, but there must be ventilation or they will go to sleep. I also believe that some varieties keep better than others, say, for instance, Albertina, Queen Louise, Lawson and Joost, and some others; these are good keepers. But if you cut Albertina before it is ripe it won't keep at all in any kind of temperature. The retailer is always running a risk in buying stock. Suppose he buys 200 or 300 carnation blooms and has no immediate use for them, or wants to hold them for a day or so; if he gets a lot of improperly cut stock he certainly will be out. I will admit that the retailer is to blame a good deal for his carnations not keeping. He will put them in jars and set them in the window and let them go at that.

Every carnation should be cut off at the end of the stem when it comes in from the grower, as the ends will most always seal. Especially is this true with shipped ones, and the consequence is they go to sleep. I believe the poorest carnation to keep is America. It generally throws out two long pistils, and my experience is that a carnation that does that will go to sleep. I believe carnations keep better in the spring months than during the winter because they are more plentiful and get a better chance make a good rose of it. The Bride or Bridesmaid will act the same way when cut in this stage. Here I have a short-stemmed Beauty. This is the same as we get in the winter around Christmas at $3 per dozen. Is there anyone here who would buy a rose like that? Don't you think that if that rose had been left on the plant a day or so longer it would be better for both retailer and grower?

In years gone by we had roses that had to be cut very close. Bon Silene, Safrano, Sprunt, Papa Gontier and Bennett had to be cut close, as they were all very shallow and would not keep any length of time. But the rose up to date should be cut in this shape. This is an ideal rose in my estimation. You need not be afraid to sell that rose to your best customer. You cannot tell a lie about it if you wanted to. That rose will keep; if you don't sell it today it will be just as good tomorrow. In the summer we have another rose which I generally have trouble with, and I expect you all do. I mean President Carnot. This rose should be cut very tight and kept in a dark, cool place. I find it keeps good if you tie the jar up in wax paper. Then we have Kaiserin, which is the best keeper of all when not cut too close. This rose is the prettiest when half-blown, and when kept cool and dark it is a good laster.

nations and roses. These two flowers are the ones we have the most trouble with, especially in the winter, when we have little sunshine. I don't believe flowers will keep as well in the dull winter days as in the bright days of spring, and, as I said before, the grower is too anxious to cut. Did you ever notice when they have blooms on exhibition how nice and full they are and how well they are developed? Did you ever get as nice blooms as you see sometimes on the exhibition tables at our meetings here? I have not. Why? Because those blooms are not cut until they are fit.

I also want to say a few words about our mums. Oftentimes in the early fall when flowers are scarce everybody is anxious to cut the first mums. And on the other hand, every retailer is just as anxious to have the first ones in his window. Consequently they are cut too soon. Now, the florist knows how to keep such a mum, but the buyer does not. You sell a bloom half developed and it will always prove unsatisfactory. Your buyer will come back and claim you sold stale flowers when you sold flowers too fresh. Did this ever happen to any of you? It has to me. It does not pay to sell half developed flowers of any kind. You will always be the loser and deto develop on the plants. In the winter months, when they are scarce, the grower generally cuts them before they are really fit to cut. Some say they need the money, while others are anxious to supply the demand, and sometimes the retailer will ask them to cut them before they are fit. All flowers should be put in water immediately after cutting and left in at least six hours before selling and they will give better results. This, I believe, is a good rule to follow with all cut flowers.

I also have some samples of roses here which I want you to note. A rose cut in this tight stage I claim is not good judgment. It will never develop in water, but will turn blue and will burst off the calyx before it will develop. If this rose had been left on the plant another day it would have made a good bloom. No kind of treatment or temperature will

I would like to ask if any of you here who are in the retail business think that American Beauty rose should be cut before the petals begin to unfold and put in cold storage a day or two before sending it out? Will it develop and keep its color after you get it, and is it profitable to handle? I do not think that a rose cut before the petals begin to unfold is fit to handle at any time.

I would like to ask if anyone knows when the poinsettia should be cut so it will not wilt in water? There is a certain time. Will calla lilies keep as well when pulled out of the plant as they will when cut off? No, and besides it injures the plant. I will also ask you what is the best way to keep violets from losing their fragrance? Will tulips develop when cut quite green and short-stemmed?

You will note I speak mostly of car-grade the florists' business. Always try and handle good flowers, well developed, and you, the retailers and growers, will prosper. When your flowers get old and stale, throw them out, both of you. It will pay to always keep a good, fresh stock, well preserved and well taken care of. Don't try to sell sleepers for fresh stock and new varieties.

GENERAL TRADE GOOD.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Improvement in trade and industry continues, favorable reports largely outnumbering adverse influences. The most important event of the week was the two-thirds vote by bituminous coal miners to accept the proposed reduction in wages. Traffic delays are still causing complaint, and the movement of exhibits to the St.

Shasta Daisy California.

Louis exposition provides a temporary feature of importance.

Retail distribution of Easter goods steadily expands and dealers' stocks are being depleted because of conservatism in initial purchases. This promises large supplementary jobbing and wholesale orders as the season advances.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending March 17 number 103, against 200 last week and 194 in the like week in 1903.

NEW SHASTA DAISIES.

When Luther Burbank offered the Shasta daisy to the trade in 1901 it was not received as filling a long-felt want, but many interested firms made a trial of the novelty and as soon as the plants had time to become established the real worth of the introduction was quickly realized. Then the demand for stock increased very rapidly. Mr. Burbank states that 5,000 times as much stock was sent out in 1902 as in the first year, and that in 1903 "fully 100,000 times as much stock was ordered."

Mr. Burbank has raised innumerable seedlings of the Shasta daisy and now has a new and improved strain, of which California, a single flower of which is shown in this issue, nearly full size, is an example. The flowers of this have two rows of petals and the buds and half-opened flowers are a pale lemon yellow, gradually changing to pure white in a day or two of development. Speaking of growing methods Mr. Burbank says:

"Give these new Shasta daisies plenty of room, one by four feet, or two by three feet if convenient, with loose, rich, sandy, well-drained soil, and feed them well, just as you would the Chinese and Japanese chrysanthemums, but do not shelter, pet, pot and shade them. With sufficient moisture they will take care of themselves in any climate from Alaska to Sahara. But one point must be looked after; these new daisies, with all their remarkable vigor will bloom themselves to death if allowed to produce all the flowers which start before the plants have time to become established. Remove all, or all but one or two buds until a good clump of leaves has been formed, then let them loose and they will exhibit an amazing wealth of bloom. After the first season 200 to 500 giant blossoms each will not strain their abilities in the least, though for rapid propagation, less would be better."

STEPHANOTIS.

Stephanotis, the most handsome of all the hothouse climbers, although so useful to the florist in design work, sprays or garlands, is so rarely seen that it is almost unknown to the majority of home growers. Yet how few are the plants which possess such a pure, waxy blossom and sweet fragrance? Its handsome green, shining foliage is also one of its recommendations.

Its usual time of blooming is in June, just in time for the June weddings, when its graceful garlands of foliage and bloom can so well be utilized. Well budded sprays can be used either in bouquets or as sprays for the hair or dress.

The value of this flower has long been recognized by the European florists and as it occupies so little room in the house it is a general favorite. It is usually trained along the roof of the stove or hothouse, affording shade to those plants in the benches underneath it. They invariably make it produce two crops during the year, one in June and the other in October. My experience with it in this country has shown me that this is not the best method for our climate. Our hot, dry air during the summer is too much for it if kept in a half resting condition after making its growth, and it is safer to keep it growing freely till late in the fall, when a partial rest can be given.

It is easily propagated by cuttings from the previous year's growth, but the quickest way to get a good sized plant is by layering. Pot or tub culture can be practiced with success and very attractive specimens can be had by this method, but for cut flower work nothing compares with the prepared border and roof training.

They succeed well in a night temperature of from 60 to 70 degrees, the best and most serviceable sprays being produced at from 60 to 62 degrees. Use a compost three parts turfy loam roughly broken up and one part well rotted cow manure, with about one-twentieth of the whole bulk of charcoal added.

FOR EASTER BUSINESS. I

Easter will soon be with us again and the prospects, from all reports I can get, are for a plentiful supply of high grade blooms of all kinds of roses, except Liberty and long-stemmed Beauties, which although there are plenty of buds in sight, are fearfully slow in developing, and are likely to be considerably late for that occasion. The medium stems will, in all probability, come to time, while the crop of shorts will likely hold out till then.

The shortage of long stems may induce some growers to resort to pickling in order to catch the fancy prices which may be expected during Easter week. Any gain made by this method is sure to be lost in the near future, as it tends to give Beauties a bad name and destroys that confidence which ought to exist between grower and buyer and between retailer and consumer.

Ship nothing but fresh stock and ship it in good time, so that the dealer may be able to take on and fill his orders. Remember he also has to make a living; give him a chance.

Pack neatly, after a careful sorting. Use clean, uncolored paper next the blooms. This gives the stock a much better appearance when the box is opened and creates a favorable impression. Use plenty of old newspapers between the box and the outside wrapper, so that there may be no danger from freezing. Write the address and instructions plainly, so that there may be no danger of the parcel going astray.

These are apparently trifling matters, but warranted by the frequency of wrongly delivered parcels, on some of which the address is too difficult for the overworked expressman to decipher.

Even when we have exercised the greatest care and have done our best, there will be some kicks coming, but the knowledge that the fault does not rest with us must be consoling. Patience when dealing with these complaints softens disappointment, avoids ill feeling and leads to a better understanding. RIBES.

emulsion, if applied with some force, will destroy them in quick order. Gishurst's compound, if applied in the same manner will also destroy them and the black scale also, to which they are subject.

During hot weather a light shade is of great benefit and as the roots persist in keeping close to the surface, frequent mulching is necessary to keep them from becoming too much exposed.

S. floribunda is the only variety that will repay the commercial florist.

RIBES.

ROSES

THE LIBERTY ROSE.

BY ADOLPH FARENWALD.

[A paper read before a recent meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia.]

In giving my experience in growing Liberties, I have omitted the growing of young plants from cuttings, as that is so well understood, and besides, Liberty is one of the easiest propagated roses in existence. I have divided my subject into seven different topics, namely, first, soil; second, planting; third, watering; fourth, manuring; fifth, disbudding; sixth, cutting; and seventh, temperature and ventilation; making them as plain as possible in language and expression, using no high "trotting" sentences to Soil.

A good, suitable soil for roses is one of the most important factors in rose growing. If that is at hand, success is within easy reach of any careful grower. My soil is a heavy, gravelly loam with a good sod on top of it. Before plowing it down, I give it a dressing of about three inches of good cow manure. It is then plowed over as deeply as a two-horse plow can work it. After this it is kept cultivated for about a month, being then again plowed and kept cultivated till used. This work is generally begun about the first week in April.

Planting.

The soil being well prepared outside, I put in the young plants without adding any commercial fertilizers, as the cow manure is sufficient to begin with. I believe that those highly concentrated fertilizers force a plant too quickly to maturity; that is, to hard wood, which I do not want to be the case with the Liberty. Young plants I put in from fifteen to eighteen inches apart. I prefer to plant from the first of June to the middle of July, which will give a good succession of crops. I have grown with equal success both in shallow and solid benches.

Watering.

The young plants will not need much water until about five or six weeks after being planted, when they will commence to grow nicely, and will take an abundance of water, even more so than any other rose that has ever come under my care. If not kept well watered they will get yellow leaves right away, as the bewilder myself and you. Hoping that from these plain facts regarding the growing of this, one of our finest and grandest red roses in trade, some of you will gather points which will enable you to solve this knotty question, "How to produce fine Liberty blooms."

roots seem to have a tendency to spread out near the surface, which makes them suffer at once if they happen to get too dry. The wood will commence to harden and will be slow to break out anew.

I syringe during the summer, every day when clear. Toward the latter part of September I stop syringing too often overhead, as by that time most of the plants will have made plenty of top growth; and from that time on, I try to induce breaks to come from the base, which I think too much syringing overhead will hinder, as it will keep eyes on the top growth continuously breaking into small growth, which is not desirable during the fall and winter, as I believe rather in quality of roses than in quantity. I keep the soil always in a moist, good growing condition, but never soggy. I use water direct out of a well which has an even temperature all through the season, about 52 to 54 degrees.

Manuring.

I don't commence to top dress until the latter part of August and beginning of September. Then I put on a top dressing of cow manure. I prefer to put this in little ridges between the rows, covering it with soil to prevent the escape of ammonia as much as possible, and its getting washed off too quickly from the benches. Two or three weeks after this first mulch, I have been in the habit of putting on a sprinkling of dried blood. This has to be done very carefully, as blood is very strong in ammonia, apt to take off a big crop of leaves if put on too strong. I put it in small streaks on either side of the row, two to three inches wide, just thick enough to cover the ground, and also covering it with soil.

From then on and following this every two or three weeks, according to the health and growing condition of the plants and the weather, I put on sheep manure, bone flour, wood ashes and pou-drette, either mixing these together in equal quantities or by themselves, but never at any time putting it on too heavy. I would rather do it a few times oftener than to endanger the health of the plants. In March I put on another layer of cow manure, and by the time it is spent, I use the fertilizers mentioned before till June, when it winds up the season. I have always used plenty of all sorts of manures, as I believe that a plant which has to work out of season, and receiving so many waterings, should have plenty of nourishment all the time, never giving it a chance to become dormant for want of proper nourishment.

Disbudding.

I consider that the pinching out process is the most important factor in the production of strong, vigorous plants, able to stand the strain of heavy cutting in the dark months of winter. We know that the formation of buds and flowers taxes the strength and vigor of the plant to the utmost. Therefore it naturally seeks a rest after this exertion. Some roses will recover faster from it than others. Liberty is one of the slowest of these to recover.

Ever since I commenced to grow Liberties I have followed the practice of carefully disbudding from the cutting on. After they have been planted in the benches a few months the production of buds will be quite plentiful. I then make it a practice to go over them every other day, pinching out the buds as soon as they can be gotten hold of, but taking no leaves with them, except on suckers, which I cut back three to four eyes, because if pinched too close to the top they will break into very short-stemmed buds, which is undesirable on the stronger wood. This continuous disbudding, which stops the flow of sap to the buds and flowers, seems to irritate the dormant eyes at the base of the plant and they finally break into fine canes, which will make grand flowers.

In September and October, when the plants begin to make longer-stemmed flowers, ten to eighteen inches long, which I do not care to have in bloom for another month, I cut them back three eyes to induce them to break strong again. If pinched too close to the top a short-stemmed flower will be the result.

This practice enables us to have crops in succession. I continue this disbudding all through the winter, carefully taking off all buds up to five and six inches in length of stem, as flowers of that class are little thought of, and the benefit of the retarded sap, and the saving of the foliage and wood will prolong its blooming capacity. This may seem to many unnecessary; in fact, I know that many growers do not believe in it, but I hold that it is the most important point to successfully bloom Liberty in winter.

Cutting.

To cut right is a point with which I am particularly careful. Nothing will spoil the successful blooming of Liberties as quickly as careless cutting. One should always remember that we want flowers all through the winter. To illustrate my point better: Take a plant with eight buds on it, which would all come within a week or two. I would pinch three or four buds away, if this is in September or October, which would bring them in seven to eight weeks later. It will give four buds at a better price, besides not hurting the plants as much as if I had cut all those long-stemmed buds off at once. The plant would have received such a check which it would take all winter to overcome. In other words, I do not want them to come all at once, avoid crops.

Plants put in benches by the first of June will, if they have done well, be fit to cut from by the beginning of October. They may have produced strong enough wood in August to tempt the grower to cut some blooms, but I find that if cut too soon they will not produce flowers in mid-winter, nor will they throw up so strong canes from the base later on. I consider that four months of growth is the least the plants should have before starting to cut, and even then I take nothing but the strongest wood, cutting back everything up to twelve inches.

Wood ten to twelve inches long, or longer, in October should be cut back two or three eyes. If the bud is only pinched out it would make an inferior bud at the next eye. Strong wood, that is, canes from the base, should not be cut too low, as it is too hard and slow to break. It should have twelve to fifteen inches of stem left, when it will break in reasonable time.

In cutting the flowers I am very careful to cut them right; that is, the outer petals expanded. Of course in the fall and spring I cut closer. I cut three and even four times a day, according to weather and demand, for they must be in as fine a shape as possible when they reach the dealer. After they have been in water for about twenty-four hours in a cool place, they are fit to be shipped. If not well soaked, the long-stemmed Liberties in particular are easily wilted, and will be a disappointment to all concerned.

Temperature and Ventilation.

In the early part of the fall, when the growth of the plant is soft, I have always tried to maintain a temperature of 62 to 64 degrees, with a little air on if possible at night, with a day temperature on clear days from 85 to 90 degrees, and on cloudy days, a temperature as near 70 degrees as possible. As soon as they commence to bloom, I reduce these temperatures to 58 and 60 degrees at night and 75 to 80 degrees during the day in fair weather, 68 to 70 degrees on a cloudy day following a bright day, and if there is a succession of cloudy days, leave it down to 65 degrees, as too high a temperature at night will spoil the color.

After the first planting of the young stuff I use ventilation sparingly, gradually increasing as the plants take hold. The Liberty is very sensitive to draughts, not that it will show mildew by it, but it retards the growth. It will harden and stand for months before it will get over this check. Therefore great care should be exercised on windy days, in a single house, and more so where the houses are built together with no partitions, where the draught will have a clean sweep underneath the gutters.

I try to give air every day, even in the coldest weather, when I can only open the ventilators to their full height and shut them down again at once, as a change of air is always most desirable.

Conclusion.

In finishing my remarks in regard to growing Liberties, I suppose some of you will be disappointed in not hearing some sensational and almost witchcraft-bordering way of growing, but instead of that you have heard nothing but plain every-day facts, which most of you know, ought to know, or have known. So this may prove to be a reminder to some of you. And last but not least, success will lie only with that grower who is ever watchful, who has his grip on the situation every day and all the time, never relaxing in enthusiasm in his fascinating and noble occupation, constantly studying the surrounding conditions which confront him with new varieties, higher standards in quality, and ever changing market.

The REVIEW takes pleasure in presenting to its readers, through the courtesy of D. T. Connor, of Lord & Burnham Co., photographs of the new range of eight houses built last summer by A. Farenwald, Hillside, Pa., from designs and with material furnished by that firm. The houses are each 13x150, the outside houses being wider to admit of a walk next the wall. They have iron posts and gutters and are even span. The small cut shows the exterior of this range as seen from the southwest corner. The other, an exceedingly fine photograph, shows the interior of this range as seen from the west doorway in a center house. Nearly the entire range is planted in Liberty. The special grade of flowers for which this place is noted, is shown to advantage in the photograph.

SEASONABLE HINTS.

Propagating.

Spring will be with us once again before we know it, and the chrysanthemum, like everything else, is calling for its share of attention. Every year since the REVIEW first arose on the floricultural horizon have I told in its columns how to propagate stock, and I am afraid that my present remarks can be nothing but a rehash of what I have many times said before. But there are many beginners added to the list of growers each year.

It is, of course, assumed that you have paid some attention to your stock plants during the winter, and had them in a cool, light place somewhere and not stuck under the benches in the carnation house. Active growth is commencing, so if you have to throw something else out, make room for your plants well up to the light. Some florists put their stock plants out in the cold frames for the winter. If you are one of those you had better get in your plants and find out how many are yet living. It has been a very severe winter and much stock that ordinarily is hardy with a little protection will be found to be killed.

March is a good month to propagate, though some exhibition growers propagate all they can in February. With the average florist any time up to June will do, the different purposes for which the plants are intended having to be taken into consideration. Cuttings root more readily now, before the weather gets warm, than later, though as a matter of fact the chrysanthemum is one of the easiest plants to strike if given half a show.

In taking the cuttings do not use the shoots that appear on the old stem unless you are very short of stock. The suckers that come up straight from the ground make infinitely better plants and will not run to bud the way stem cuttings often do. In making cuttings I always like to cut through immediately below a joint. It is not really necessary to do this, as the chrysanthemums will root from the stems, or leaves, or almost anywhere, but when cut cleanly at a joint the roots push out all around, radiating from a common center, like the spokes from the hub of a wheel, and this tends to make an evenly balanced plant. Heat is not necessary to strike the cuttings, a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees furnishing ideal conditions for the purpose.

New Short-Span Greenhouses of A. Farenwald, the Liberty Grower, Hillside, Pa.

Some varieties that make rather hard growth take longer to root than others, W. R. Church being an especially notable one in that respect. This variety, while a gem for exhibition, is not a very easy variety to handle, as it almost invariably runs to bud as soon as it begins to grow. The best way to treat it is the way we used to do the old Morel: Keep it in small pots and keep the buds closely picked off. It will, in the course of time, throw up a good sucker and then the old plant can be cut away and the sucker left to make the growth.

After the cuttings are rooted do not make the mistake of putting them into rich soil to make them grow good. They do not need it, in fact, are far better without it. Some good new loam, with a little leaf soil added, if you have it, is all the plant needs in its early stages.

Novelties.

The novelties are generally pretty well disseminated this month and, while they will stand some increasing, do not propagate them to death and then kick about the constitution of new varieties. Some of the new ones, notably F. A. Cobbold, W. Duckham and Ben Wells, are particularly strong growers and these will stand more in the line of increasing than the average new kind. Donald McLeod and Cheltoni are such dwarf, sturdy little fellows that they cannot be increased to any great extent.

Mildred Ware is showing a little of the leaf trouble that is characteristic of its parent, Madame Carnot, but it is vigorous enough and will grow out of it when the weather gets warmer.

There are some older varieties, that, now they can be bought cheaply should be grown by everyone, for they are grand. Mrs. Thirkell, Lord Salisbury, F. S. Vallis and C. J. Salter are all splendid kinds. While the average florist may not have much surplus cash, after such a winter as this, with which to buy many new things, he will find it a profitable investment to try either of these four varieties.

BRIAN BORU.

POMPON CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

For Business and Pleasure.

To those who have been in the habit of looking at the pompon chrysanthemum as a thing of beauty only, and have not thought of it as a profitable investment, perhaps it may be a surprise to know that there is more money in them, to a certain extent, than in the large flowering varieties, simply because better results can be obtained at less expense, as they do not need the attention which must be given the large flowers to bring them to a high state of perfection.

First, good commercial varieties must be selected, suitable to meet the several different wants they are to fill. It is not necessary to have a large number of varieties. To cover the ground in a general way not more than twenty to twenty-five are required, divided in, say, two or three good whites, both early and late; the same of yellow and pink and one or two red or bronze. Care should be taken to select varieties suitable for sprays and bunching, of the admirable large flowering or aster type, such as make flowers from two to two and one-half inches in diameter. Among the varieties of recent introduction there is a great diversity of color and beautiful form of flowers, from those as single as a daisy to others that are densely double, some with petals as curled and twisted as a cactus dahlia, until it seems as if every possible diversity of variety has been obtained.

Several of the long-sprayed varieties should be selected for decorations, and a few of the small or button types for the finishing up of bunches of the large flowers, as there is nothing which gives a bunch a more perfect finish than a few of the tiny ones of the same color about the stems, or of the exquisite, delicate shaded singles. And in making up a box they are fine beyond description, far superior to carnations, violets, etc., and make a delightful contrast.

Where the florist has a retail or jobbing trade, especially in the suburbs of large cities or in country towns, there should be some of the very dwarf varieties grown in pots, such varieties as Globe d'Or, Rosinante, etc. They are only from twelve to fifteen inches high if grown in 3-inch pots until the first or middle of August, then shifted to 4 or 5-inch pots and plunged in a frame or some position where they can be watered and fed to some extent. They will make better plants for the critical customer than the large flowering varieties, grown either in bush form or to single stem. They are more natural looking, easier to handle, more catchy, look more in keeping with the season and, in fact, seem to fill a long felt want better than anything else just at a time when they can, or at least should, be seen blooming in every garden, shrubbery and hedge along the highways and by-ways, in the magnificent and well-kept grounds of the wealthy or cheering the cottage of the poor, at a time when all other blooms are gone and everything looks dreary and when there is no more of the "good old summer time."

While they are supposed to be hardy, and a good many people think able to take care of themselves, there is nothing that will pay more interest on good common sense treatment. Plant them once and let them take care of themselves and you will be surprised at the amount of flowers they will produce; plant good young plants every spring, give them good attention and you will be more than surprised at the amount of bloom and what good blooms you can cut. There are some few but not many autumns when the aster varieties will come to perfection in the open ground throughout the northern states, for which these notes are intended. The smaller varieties make a splendid appearance if planted where they are protected from the driving winds and rains.

Our practice is, for what we want to cut for market, to plant in the field eighteen inches apart in rows wide enough to work with a horse, topping occasionally to get good bushy plants. We commence lifting them the first week in September, then some every week until frost, using a cold frame at first, or any place where they can be kept from hard frost, and later putting them in a house where a little heat can be turned on when it is very cold. In this way we have a succession of crops from early October until about Christmas. As a general thing we cut from ten to twelve good sprays from a plant, with stems fifteen to eighteen inches long and four to six flowers to the spray. For this we consider Prince of Wales the best white. Grown in the field they make good plants for filling beds in lawns, parks, cemeteries, etc., and what of the small flowered varieties are wanted can be grown the same way.

When long stems are wanted, or a finer class of flowers needed, it is always best to plant in a house and give the same general treatment as that given the large flowering chrysanthemums, except the disbudding, of course; pinching back to produce about five or six branches to the plant, when they should make stems from two to three feet long. When the object is to get tall sprays, from three to four feet, it is best to keep them to single stems, giving plenty of room that they may bloom all the way up the stems, with plenty of foliage. There is nothing finer for general decorative work, in fact they promise to equal if not become more popular than the larger flowers for this purpose, as soon as the people become more acquainted with the many different, wonderful and beautiful shades in the new creations. And it will be well for those in a position to make the best use of public taste to prepare for a demand all along this line in the near future, as there promises to be a change with a large class of buyers of the queen of autumn.

For Autumn Bedding.

When the hills have laid off their mantle of green and all nature tells us of the approach of winter, who but has watched with saddened heart the beautiful flower beds take on a very desolate and dreary appearance at the first advent of the chilly nights? When the bedding plants have lost their leaves and show only bare and unsightly stalks, somewhat worse than nothing, who but has wished for something to take their place and extend the days of life and usefulness for a greater length of time?

The pompon chrysanthemum is just the thing, having been grown in the garden, along the hedges or among the shrubbery; in fact, some should be grown to leave there and bloom. They can be transplanted very nicely if taken up with care and well watered and, while they perhaps will not make as fine flowers as those grown under more favorable circumstances, yet they will make a creditable appearance and will look considerably better than the bare stalks of the summer bedding plants. If some protection is given on severe cold nights, or to keep off the rough winds and winter rains, they will look good late in the fall.

The small or button types are the best for outside bedding, as they will stand the rough treatment and look better than the aster types; such varieties as Golden Pheasant, Little Pet, Labanah and a host of others. There is an old-fashioned yellow, Drin Drin, with small flowers not much larger than the end of your finger, that does very well, planted among shrubbery. The foliage is a beautiful glossy green and the flowers will stay on until they almost dry up, holding their color way into the winter months.

The larger varieties are best for cutting and when it is not convenient to grow them in a house they will do very well planted along the protected side of a building or hedge. They do well and look nice planted along the edge of a porch and will, as a general thing, come quite perfect.

Is there anything that can give a suburbanite more pleasure than to carry a bunch of fairly magnificent chrysanthemums, cut from his own garden to the city with him to give or show to his friends or fellow employees? And there is nothing to keep the city man from enjoying them in his own yard, as they are a thing that can be enjoyed by all who have a few feet of ground space. They can be brought from the field all ready to bloom, and where there is no ground at all they can be planted in pots or boxes.

Having occasion to cross from Jersey City to New York one morning last fall, at the time when the crowds were going to their daily occupations, I was surprised at the number of people carrying hardy chrysanthemums, some of them cer-

DAWSON, ALASKA.—Daily. Edwards & Wallace have built a greenhouse on the second high dome back of Dawson and have young stock started.

THE blue spruce, one of the handsomest of evergreens, has been so largely grown that prices are variable; the inquiry is now for the Koster variety, which is not so plentiful.

AGAVE AMERICANA IN FLOWER

The possibilities of the outdoor garden in such a magnificent climate as that of southern California must be very great, and one of these decorative possibilities is shown in the accompanying engraving, in which is depicted a very fine specimen of the common century plant, Agave Americana, in full flower.

Just what the dimensions of this particular specimen were we are unable to state, but the flower stem of this agave has been known to reach a total height of forty feet, and frequently grows to twenty-five or thirty feet. The individual flowers of this plant are rather insignificant, being quite small and yellowish green in color, but the immense size of the flower spike with its many branches and multitude of flowers makes it a conspicuous object and one of much interest.

The popular idea that the American aloe is really a century plant and consequently does not bloom until it is 100 years old, is of course a fallacy, the age at which such a plant will bloom being largely governed by the conditions under which it is grown, and being seldom less than fifteen to twenty years, and sometimes not until the plant is sixty or seventy years old. But when a specimen of Agave Americana does start to flower its progress is remarkably rapid, the flower stem pushing up from the center of the plant like a gigantic stalk of asparagus, and growing at the rate of five or six inches per day.

There is, however, some truth in a portion of the popular belief regarding this agave, for the tremendous effort of the plant in producing so great a flower stem is fatal, and soon after the flowering is completed the plant dies off, though usually succeeded by some young growths from the root. But though the flowering of this species is fatal, yet the rule does not hold good for all the agaves, some of them flowering several years from the same plant.

ANTS IN PEONY BUDS.

For the last two years I have lost most of my peony flowers because the buds were eaten or sucked by black ants, not the very large kind but a medium sized black ant. I would find at least one in each bud and the bud never developed, stayed right there and finally withered. What can I do to get rid of these ants? W. H. S.

The ant in itself does not do much harm to the peony bud, but by taking away the moisture which exudes from the bud, leaves the outside very dry and it is therefore more readily affected by the air drying it out. The fact that the bud is in a condition to be affected by the taking away of the small amount which the ant would absorb, shows that the soil is in an impoverished condition. If the plant had plenty of good rich earth to draw from, this condition of affairs would never be. The only way to treat these plants is to place around the stems of the plants some foreign substance, such as cotton saturated with tar, to keep the ants from climbing up the stems. B. S. GAGE.

A Frond of the Improved Form of the Pierson Fern Now Occupying the Attention of the F. R. Pierson Co.

A SPORT OF PIERSONI.

The F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, has a remarkable sport from Piersoni, the popular gold medal fern of 1903, that bids fair to more than duplicate the success of its parent. It was discovered two years ago and has been carefully guarded, watched and propagated, until now a large house is filled with it and its progress warrants reliable estimates as to its value. It is really a double fern, bipinnate, leaves equally furnished back and front. The fronds are shorter and broader than Piersoni and more refined, finished and symmetrical. "As far ahead of Piersoni as Piersoni is ahead of the Boston," is Mr. Pierson's own estimate of its beauty and value to the trade. A plant of this wonderfully beautiful novelty will be shown this week at Boston and this will be the first time it has ever been placed on exhibition. There are no two opinions as to its beauty. I have never seen anything in the fern family to compare with it. Nephrolepis Piersoni bipinnatifida, expresses it, but the name must be shorter to be popular. The Tarrytown fern I suggested as the proper cognomen and Mr. Pierson thought it would be hard to better it. However, I can assure our readers of a wonderful treat and surprise when the opportunity comes for them to see it.

Piersoni itself is still being grown abundantly and Mr. Pierson has hundreds of fine specimen plants at the big Scarboro greenhouse. The new fern will not be in the market before 1906. The demand for White Lawson and Enguehard has been tremendous, Mr. Pierson tells me, and the stock of the former is already nearly exhausted.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The annual exhibition of the American Rose Society, held in conjunction with the spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, opened on Tuesday evening, March 22, at Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia. In point of quality the show was equal if not superior to its predecessors-but the number of exhibitors and the quantity of the exhibits fell below expectations.

The first premium of $100 for fifty blooms American Beauty carried with it the Lord & Burnham challenge cup and was won by Paul M. Pierson, Briercliff Greenhouses, Scarborough, N. Y., after sharp competition with John Burton, who took second. Both vases were of fine quality, scoring almost the same number of points. Two other vases in this class were disqualified for having fifty-one blooms each.

In the regular classes, on twenty-five Beauties Myers & Samtman were first, the Briercliff Greenhouses second.

A. Farenwald was first for twenty-five Liberties and also captured first with Liberty in the class for fifty blooms any variety except Beauty and Queen of Edgely. Judging by the quality of these blooms Liberty will also be barred in the future.

La Detroit was shown in splendid form, making a favorable impression on the experts present.

Golden Gates from Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J., were superb in size and color, ahead of anything ever seen here.

John Cook, of Baltimore, sent four interesting seedlings. Probably the most promising are Enchantress, a shell pink, and Cardinal, crimson, but the others were good, a white and a pink.

John Burton showed a fine vase of American Belle which attracted much attention.

Gen. MacArthur was shown by John N. May. It is a red, said to be a free bloomer, the buds carried on strong stems clothed with very fine foliage.

Frank L. Moore, of Chatham, N. J., showed Bridesmaid from its home, not for competition but of good quality. George Anderson was first on this variety, Stephen Mortensen, Southampton, second.

On Bride John Andre, Doylestown, was first and Mr. Mortensen second.

Myers & Samtman were first on Queen of Edgely and on Sunrise.

There were many nice vases from private gardeners.

In carnations Prosperity, Enchantress, Gov. Roosevelt, Mrs. Lawson, Mrs. Bradt, Dorothy Whitney, White Cloud, Joost, Adonis, White Bradt, Lorna and others were shown in good form. The F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, sent some very fine blooms of White Lawson, also Daheim, which is very fragrant, has a stiff stem and is a fine crimson. The same firm sent Hydrangea Hortensis with flowers of a beautiful shade of pink.

Louis Dupuy, of Whitestone, N. Y., sent a choice collection of plants, including blue and white Hydrangea paniculata and ericas in variety, a pair of each.

John Scott, of Brooklyn, showed nicely grown specimens of Nephrolepis Scottii.

The H. A. Dreer Co. showed Asparagus myriocladus, new and a very fine thing.

The feature of the main stairway was the exhibit of S. M. Batchelor, gardener to C. B. Newbold, Jenkintown, Pa. This consisted of three plants of Areca lutescens, the central one filling the entire space opposite the main stairway.

There was a nice collection of rhododendrons and deutzias from the Wm. H. Moon Co., Morrisville.

A collection of six cyclamens from Frank Ibbitson, gardener for J. V. Merrick, received a certificate of merit as well as a first prize.

Jacob Becker captured first prize for the group of roses in pots, the premium being the silver cup valued at $50 offered by Jas. W. Paul, Jr., president of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society. Mr. Becker also was first for twenty-four plants, three each of eight varieties, thereby winning the silver cup offered by Dingee & Conard, West Grove, Pa.

Lager & Hurrell had a collection of orchids including the best commercial varieties now in bloom.

The collections of blooming plants and spring bulbs were large and varied and of good quality throughout.

ROSES FOR HARDY GARDENS.

[A paper read by L. A. Martin before the American Rose Society, Philadelphia, March 23.]

In this short paper I will not attempt to enumerate all the species that are now cultivated, but will confine myself to a few well known varieties of merit and of different species that have proved themselves perfectly hardy and suitable for all purposes for which they are best adapted, omitting with but few exceptions, the hybrid perpetuals, tea scented and other varieties of so-called florists' roses.

Many species other than the above named are so very little known as to be little appreciated; I refer to our so-called wild roses and their hybrids, which are equally suitable for the decorations of the hardy gardens as their more queenly sisters. Their ease of cultivation and adaptability to grow to perfection in many different kinds of soils, high or low, light or heavy, is a recommendation. They will readily respond, however, to a better treatment and they ought to be more generally planted.

If a proper selection of varieties is made they can be had in bloom from May to November, and not only are their flowers beautiful, but their bright colored fruits, which succeed the flowers in many kinds will adhere to the plant until new growths start in the spring. One of the greatest differences from other roses is that the flowers of the wild species are single, but many of the hybrids are semi-double.

They will need less care and attention when well established; a little thinning and shortening of the branches and the cutting of the dead wood once in a while is all they require; they are also less subject to insects and fungus than other garden roses, and so varying in growths that there are many different ways that they can be used advantageously.

Rosa rugosa, a Japanese species, flowering in June, is one of the handsomest in cultivation. It forms a sturdy and erect bush about four feet high, with handsome, glossy foliage, and producing ten or more flowers in a cluster. Its orange-reddish fruits are very ornamental and should be in every collection. I think this rose could be used advantageously in forming hedges, cut to keep the required shape. Other forms of this variety equally as useful for many purposes are R. rugosa alba, pure white; America, crimson; Blanc double de Coubert, white semi-double; Madame Charles Worth, red purple; Mikado, crimson semi-double; calocarpa, soft rose, with pretty fruit; coruscans, clear pink, distinct; Georges Bruant, white, double and very fragrant, and others.

R. Carolina, the swamp rose, has flowers rose-colored in June, about four feet high, fine for low and wet ground.

R. canina, the dog rose, is a British species, forming large, erect bushes, with cup-shaped blossoms appearing in June, changing from white to deep rose. Many fine hybrids have been obtained from this species.

R. centifolia, the Provence rose, is from three to six feet high, very sweet scented, rose purple flowers in June and July, succeeded by fragrant fruit.

The variety R. muscosa is the original well known moss rose.

R. ferruginea is a tall growing species, flowered deep red in August, fruit purplish red.

R. lucida is an American species, two feet tall, with red flowers from May to July, deep red fruit. A variety of this rose with double flower is flore-plena.

R. arvensis or repens, flowers white in June, fine for covering rockery and gravelly hills. A few varieties of this are Queen of Belgians, creamy white, double; splendens, flesh, bud crimson.

R. rubiginosa, the sweet briar, is a very fragrant wild rose, flowers in June, pink, excellent for hedges, tall growing. Hybrids, sweet briars or Lord Penzance roses, which are crosses of the common briar with garden roses, are very vigorous and hardy plants, very sweetly scented; the flowers are single or semi-double, ranging in color from pale yellow to crimson. There are about fifteen varieties of this popular rose, and all worthy of a place in hardy gardens.

R. setigera, the climbing or prairie rose, is a native of North America, with stems fifteen to twenty feet, flower deep rose changing to white, in July, fruit red. A favorite variety of this is the well known Baltimore Belle.

In R. Wichuraiana, the memorial rose, another Japanese variety of great merit, we have a very useful rose, valuable for its creeping qualities, also for climbing low trellises, traveling over rocky slopes, gravelly embankments and growing where other roses could not live. Some of the best hybrids are Gardenia, yellow to cream; Evergreen Gem, one of the very best for its foliage, flower yellow to white; Universal Favorite, large, double, fine rose pink, very fragrant, and many others.

This paper would not be complete without mentioning the climbing varieties of hardy roses, of which we have plenty of distinct colors and types to suit everyone, and which are more and more used every year. They can be employed for ornamentations on many parts of the garden, where other kinds of plants would not be so effective and conspicuous.

This class of roses must be trimmed sparingly, cutting only the laterals back to one bud and preserving only the strong shoots to the height desired. They are unsurpassed for covering old buildings, unsightly walls, old trees, some lonely rocks, trellises, arbors, screens and the much talked of pergolas. Think of the effect that could be obtained with the well known Crimson Rambler for covering the last named if the branches or stems were arranged and tied in festoons on the sides. Many other places can be found for using this favorite climber to advantage. Other varieties of this popular rose and equally as beautiful are: Aglaia, pale yellow; Claire Jacquier, nankeen; Electra, yellow; Euphrosyne, pink with white center; Psyche, rosy pink and crimson; Thalia, white semi-double, without forgetting Philadelphia Rambler, pegged down and growing as a trailer; in standard or bush form they are equally desirable, and in this way will add much diversity and color to the environment.

A magnificent climbing rose, not often seen as yet, is Paul's Carmine Pillar, with its bright, rosy carmine, large single flowers. It does not grow as tall as other varieties, but will grow perfectly well against the north side of a building or wall; a very free grower and bloomer.

Other varieties found perfectly hardy and of different species are Queen of the Prairies, deep rose and vigorous grower; Russell's Cottage, dark crimson, very rapid grower; Climbing Clothilde Soupert, pure ivory white.

Many others of either bush or climbing varieties of hardy roses could be added to the foregoing, and useful in some way or other for the embellishment of the hardy garden, as there will always be found some part of it where something is wanting, and where a bush, trailing, pillar or climbing rose would be just the thing.

GESNERA EXONIENSIS.

By very many plantmen the beauty and usefulness of some gesneras for winter flowering have been overlooked during recent years, especially since the introduction of retarded subjects suitable for forcing, and the greatly increased culture of bulbous plants. But formerly several gesneras, notably G. cinnabarina and G. exoniensis were extensively grown for winter flowering, and a stock of these was considered as being as much a part of the regular routine for the provision of winter supplies as stocks of poinsettias, or even zonal pelargoniums. So gradually do plants, and even certain classes of plants, fall out of general cultivation at times, that it is only when good batches are brought before the public that we recognize the fact that they had somehow been forgotten.

There is a great danger in these days of repetition in stocks of winter-flowering plants; certain subjects have become popular, their culture is so well known that mistakes are rare, and, moreover, they are, unquestionably, very useful, but when one visits half-a-dozen places during the winter months and finds in each the same kinds of plants grown in the same manner, it becomes a little monotonous, to say the least of it. If to these popular plants something of a distinct character could be added the interest in the display would be much keener.

Gesnera exoniensis offers an opportunity for some growers to improve their collections next winter. Messrs. J. Veitch & Sons, Chelsea, recently exhibited beautiful plants at the Drill Hall, Westminster, clothed in broad, rounded leaves of a dark and rich velvety appearance, studded with tiny red hairs, and producing erect branching spikes of slightly pendulous flowers of a rich orange-scarlet color, with a yellow throat. An idea of the shape and size of the flowers, and the formation of the spike, can be obtained from the accompanying illustration.

In the matter of cultivation Gesnera exoniensis offers no difficulties to those possessed of moderate conveniences, such, for instance, as a brick frame, or pit, provided with hot-water pipes, and also a house where an intermediate temperature is maintained during winter. Propagation is easily effected, and the same methods employed for the increase of gloxinias will suffice. This gesnera readily responds to leaf propagation, and where a few plants are purchased in the autumn this provides the grower with an opportunity of securing a useful stock of tubers that will result in good plants for the next season. Such leaves as can be spared without materially reducing the beauty of the specimens should be dealt with previous to October, when they will produce young plants in the same manner as gloxinias and foliage begonias when similarly treated. As the tubers of G. exoniensis are sparingly produced, leaf propagation is a matter of considerable importance, and is often of more value than increase by cuttings.

April is quite early enough to start the dormant tubers, placing them in pans of light soil, and covering them to the depth of half an inch. Afford a temperature of from 60 to 70 degrees and provide a moist atmosphere, so that hardly any water need be applied after the first watering to settle the soil. When the young growths are an inch high, lift the plants separately, and pot each one in a 60-sized pot, in a mixture of light loam, leaf-soil and sand. Careful watering, and attention to syringing for the purpose of keeping insect pests at bay, must be given, otherwise the leaves will not grow regularly, neither will they be so beautiful as they might, and if the foliage is not well preserved right up to and during the period of floescence a great deal of the plant's beauty is lost. Early in July 6 or 7-inch pots must be provided, and at this potting a little dried cow manure, finely sifted, may be added to the mixture already prescribed. Directly the plants have taken hold of the new soil they may well be placed in a frame or pit, keeping them close at first, but eventually admitting plenty of air during the day. Here the plants may remain, keeping them near the glass, until the end of August, when they had better be housed. If warmer treatment is given through the summer this gesnera flowers in November and December, but if grown as advised December and January will be the flowering time.

The flowers of G. exoniensis are not particularly useful for cutting, but a well-grown plant, with its rich leaves covering the upper part of the pot, looks remarkably well in a jardiniere set upon the dining-table, or placed in the drawing-room, and in either case its distinguished appearance commands attention, and excites interest. As so many subjects harmonize or contrast with this dark-leaved gesnera, a number of plants in a conservatory help to produce a handsome and novel display, and, provided the structure is not a draughty one, they will last a long while in beauty.—Gardeners' Magazine.

PETOSKEY, MICH.—S. J. Long reports trade good and prices right. Roses are a little backward, owing to cold nights, but will come on for Easter. Lilies are prime and carnations A No. 1. Morning Glory is glorious to behold. The only failure is Mrs. Potter Palmer, which has too much rust and splits badly.

AT THE COTTAGE GARDENS.

To one who has never visited the Cottage Gardens, or to one even whose visits have not been made for a year or two, the great carnation factory is a revelation. Added to it all now comes the rapidly developing nursery business, which promises in time to become an even more interesting and profitable venture than the carnation industry. In the big house of carnation seedlings are some of the grandest flowers I have ever seen. Many of them are certain to become popular favorites and money makers when disseminated. To describe and particularize them all would take a book as large as Mr. Ward's fine work, The American Carnation, for which by the by, he tells me there is a constantly growing demand. Among the new flowers of especial beauty and merit are:

No. 564-02, a Lawson pink with a 30-inch stem, a 3½-inch flower and one that never bursts its calyx; very prolific. No. 2504-02, 4½ inches, a Lawson pink with a 48-inch stem; a flower exactly like Prosperity. No. 2528-02, a 40-inch stem, 3½-inch flower, brilliant rose pink; as free a bloomer as Harry Fenn. No. 660-02, a beautiful white, 3¾-inch flower, 24-inch stem, perfect calyx and good bloomer. No. 667-02, white seedling of Harry Fenn, 3½-inch flower, as free a bloomer and of the same habit. No. 2621-02, immense white with a slight framing of crimson, very strong 30-inch stem, the stem measuring a quarter of an inch through; a splendid bloomer. No. 2651-02, white, the Lawson type and as perfect stem and calyx; profuse, flowers average 3¾-inch. No. 2653-02, a white, 3-inch flower, very free and fragrant; will surely be heard from. No. 100-01, a deep lavender and quite a novelty. No. 303-01, the large scarlet, a half interest in which has been sold to the Thompson Co. No. 211-01, an intense crimson flower 3¼ to 4 inches. No. 234-01, a wonder, being deep crimson with 4-inch flowers and stems over four feet. No. 217-02, brilliant crimson, Gomez shade, 4-inch flower, 3¼-foot stem. No. 222-02, very similar to above and as free a bloomer as Harry Fenn. No. 228-02, a grand flower which Mr. Ward calls "a crimson Prosperity," average 3½ to 4 inches and stems four feet; a certain acquisition. No. 401-01, a delicate flesh pink of the Enchantress shade, a perfect keeper and shipper, as free as Morning Glory, 3½ inches and over; a beauty. No. 716-03, a clear lemon yellow without a trace of scarlet, crimson or pink, flowers averaging over four inches. A fine novelty and likely to be a permanent addition to the new introductions. A flower three weeks on the plant was still deliciously fragrant. It bears no pollen and has an imperfect pistil. No. 556-02, a fine rose pink, 4 to 4½-inch flower, deep, with large calyx, does not burst; resembles a chrysanthemum in form. No doubt of its brilliant future.

Mr. Ward has 75,000 carnation plants in benches and in 2½ and 3-inch pots, every one of which will be used for indoor planting and not a plant in the field for their own use. The houses filled with the established varieties are in splendid condition, an average of 15,000 flowers a week now being cut for the wholesale market, all of which are handled and disposed of by John Young.

Mr. Ward is cutting from four crimson varieties, The President, Harry Fenn, Octoroon and Gov. Roosevelt; from three light pinks, Enchantress, Alpine Glow and Mrs. Thayer; from four dark pinks, Lawson, Ethel Ward, Floriania and No. 508; from three whites, Mackinac, Lorna and Gov. Lowndes; from three scarlets, Gov. Bliss, Christmas Eve and Adonis; from one yellow, Golden Eagle, and from two novelties, Judge Hinsdale and Prosperity. Mr. Ward considers Enchantress his best paying carnation and says of Lieutenant Peary that it is a grand white resembling Lawson.

Two large houses here are devoted to Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, 6,000 pots and baskets being planned for to supply the Christmas demand. In one of the propagating houses are 50,000 to 60,000 evergreen cuttings, over seventy different varieties, all rooting nicely and including every popular evergreen grown in America, and many rare varieties.

Three fumigating houses have been erected, one of which is very large and with capacity for the handling of trees twenty-five feet in height. A most perfect system for generating gas for the purpose has been established and everything betokens far-sightedness and foundation for future trade of unlimited proportions.

The nursery proper consists of eighty acres, nearly all of which are already planted to ornamentals, many trees in size indicating years of growth and all of which are to be devoted to this class of stock. Imports of evergreens are already arriving and over 50,000 will be planted this spring.

Mr. Ward is a great believer in the wisdom of planting strong, large, well-grown stock. A peach orchard set out last year, of trees five years old, is an illustration of his faith, the trees already being of bearing size and covered with buds. A handsome sight is a block of 1,000 Colorado blue spruce three to six feet high. There are many rare specimens of Japanese evergreens. There are forty acres of woodland full of nut-bearing trees, where azaleas, rhododendrons and ground-cover plants will be grown and from the highest part of which a view of the ocean and many miles in every direction stretches out before one's enchanted vision. On this highest plane some day Mr. Ward will build a home that will vie with any on Long Island in healthful and beautiful surroundings. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

"PECKY" CYPRESS.

Progressive florists are always on the lookout for the best building materials and recently many of them have been taking up "pecky" cypress for bench lumber, those who have used it having found it to resist decay much longer than pine or hemlock. The appearance of the lumber is against it as it looks as though it were wormy or decayed, the defects resembling large worm holes which run with the grain and not through it, and florists who first commence using it will have to take it on faith and from what the experience of others has been with it.

The department of forestry at Washington has not been able to determine satisfactorily the cause of "peck" in cypress. It seems to be a little pocket or cavity in the heart of the tree which is filled with a dust-like substance, presumably caused by vermin or a chemical action that has taken out of the wood a certain substance that leaves this sawdust-like deposit. If it were not for this defect the lumber would be practically clear heart cypress and, as it is free from sap, it will resist decay as long as any known wood. It has been used in the cities of New Orleans and Mobile for years for drain plank and all underground work, owing to its lasting quality.

I understand that the average life of a bench in a greenhouse when built of pine or hemlock is about three years. I am satisfied that a bench made of "pecky" cypress, if used for this purpose, will not decay in fifteen to twenty years and possibly longer. Messrs. Bassett & Washburn, at Hinsdale, Ill., have been using "pecky" cypress for bench frames and sides since they first built their greenhouses and have benches that have been in use eight years or longer that show no signs of decay, and I am sure will be pleased to give full information as to their experience with "pecky" cypress. There are other greenhouses in the vicinity of Chicago where 1-inch "pecky" cypress has been used for five years or more, and the benches are still in use and do not show decay. I am pleased to state that I have sold 400,000 feet since last fall to be used in the construction of greenhouse benches in this vicinity.

If anyone would like to have further information regarding this lumber, we could get letters from the city engineers, regarding their experience with it in gutters and underground work. In putting in the new drainage system in New Orleans they have used "pecky" cypress for all of the drain work under the streets and in excavating in Canal street in December last, they dug up a cypress coffin that was almost in a perfect state of preservation which they figure had been interred 150 years. There was a coffin made of ash that was near it, but this had almost entirely disappeared, simply the outlines being left and a few small pieces of the wood. We can cite you to any number of instances of the lasting quality of cypress, notably the wooden boxes in which the mummies were enclosed in the pyramids, some of them at least 4,000 years old. Chambers' Encyclopedia states that the old wooden doors of St. Peter's at Rome were made of cypress and were in use 1,100 years, when they were replaced, some 200 years ago, by the bronze doors which are in use and these old doors are on exhibition in the vatican to-day.

In conclusion I would like to quote an article which appeared in the Lumber Trade Journal, of New Orleans, November 1, 1901.

"A puzzle well calculated to mystify the average lumberman unversed in forestry lore, is the fact that 'pecky' cypress loses none of the phenomenal durability of cypress by being 'pecky.' Builders and engineers accustomed to the use of cypress in places the ravages of which are particularly trying, understand all about it, though, and are never slow to put 'pecky' cypress into any such places. The cavities which form in the tree and are filled with a dust-like substance, were formerly and to some extent may still be attributed to the ravages of vermin. It has, however, been ascertained that the phenomenon is only present towards and at the tops of the trees, and it is now believed by others to be due to deficient nourishment. Both deductions are, however, mere undemonstrated theories, but whatever the cause of the freak, the fact is beyond question that the presence of 'peck' does not impair the power of cypress to resist the ordinary causes of decay in wood."

A MILWAUKEE ESTABLISHMENT.

Nic Zweifel is one of the largest, most thoroughly up-to-date and successful of the Milwaukee growers as well as personally one of the most popular men of the craft in the Cream City. The accompanying illustration shows Mr. Zweifel's new plant, erected two years ago from plans made by A. Dietsch & Co. While this firm's name is linked with the short-roof style of construction, by no means are all of their houses of that pattern, and Mr. Zweifel's four connected structures are each 28x200, covering a ground area of 22,400 square feet, or almost exactly half an acre under one roof. The side walls and gutters are six feet six inches high and there is glass all around the outside, making the houses very light. The ridge is fourteen feet six inches. The glass is 16x18. One No. 13 Kroeschell hot water boiler heats the entire place, which, all things considered, is quite a feat.

THE REVIEW is the cheapest help I ever employed; always ready to help a fellow out, never kicks or has things on the dry side, all for 2 cents a week.—W. A. HERBERT, Wellsville, O.

PLAN FOR HEATING.

We have a boiler house 20x40 feet. Leading out from this house we have two houses 20x100 feet each, even span, solid side walls five feet high, glass gable at one end. At the end of the boiler house we have a lean-to 10x48 feet. Adjoining it are two houses 24x100 feet each, which run alongside the other 100-foot houses. The two wide houses have no partition wall. The outside wall has thirty inches of glass, even span, with glass gables at one end. Back of the lean-to and also against the boiler house we have another house 24x48, even span, with solid walls. We will put an entirely new heating system in these houses, about 14,000 feet of glass. We would like to have someone tell us how to put in a strictly first-class and up-to-date heating plant, giving class of boiler, horse-power, size of fire box, depth of boiler in boiler pit, size of pipes, etc. We want 42 degrees in one house 20x100; 52 degrees in the other house 20x100, 56 degrees in the two houses 24x100 and 60 degrees in the house 24x48. The temperature outside very seldom reaches zero. SOUTHERN KENTUCKY.

A steam boiler with 400 feet of heating surface will supply the necessary steam, at five to ten pounds pressure. Instead of using a single boiler with this amount of heating surface it would be better to secure two smaller boilers with a slightly greater heating surface. Two boilers fire easier than one and maintain a more constant steam pressure than is possible with a single one, particularly if they are fired alternately. For greenhouse heating the simple tubular boilers, with or without steam domes, are best, set so as to work on the return tube system, i. e., the fire box under front of shell, with a flue leading to the rear and opening into the fire tubes of the boiler, which causes the heat to pass under and about the shell of the boiler and back through the tubes to the smoke stack directly over the fire box. This scheme increases the heating surface of a boiler over the direct fire tube plan of most portable horizontal and upright boilers. The scheme requires that the boilers be set in brick but while this is an added expense it is economical in fuel and safer. There are many manufacturers of boilers of this type. The boilers should be set deep enough so the water line of the boilers will be at least two feet below the lowest point in the radiating coils in the houses. If it can be placed lower, so much the better.

The houses 20x100 feet will each require one 2-inch riser running to the far end under the ridge and then dividing into ten pipes either on the walls, over or under the benches, depending upon the crops grown and the type of benches used. The houses 24x100 feet will each require a 2½-inch riser running under the ridge to the far end of the house and there dividing into thirteen 1¼-inch pipes, arranged to conform to the benches and crops to be grown. The house 10x48 demands a 1½-inch riser and five heating pipes 1¼ inches in diameter, while the house 24x48 requires a 2-inch riser under the ridge and fourteen 1¼-inch pipes in the heating coils.

I would suggest that upon at least four to six of the heating pipes in each house valves be placed at the feed end of the pipes and swing check valves at the return end, so that in mild weather these pipes can be cut out. The cost of the valves will be more than offset by the ease in regulating the temperature in the houses.

I have not given dimensions of boiler, fire box, etc., because these are furnished by the boiler makers. All that is necessary is to indicate the number of square feet of heating surface desired, which in this case is 400, as above stated.

CARNATIONS AT PITTSBURG.

It was carnation night at the meeting of the Pittsburgh Florists' Club March 15, and we had a fine meeting. The hall was crowded to the door with members and the tables were aglow with masses of as fine carnations as you ever laid your eyes on. Preliminary business was soon dispatched. All smoker bills of the last meeting were ordered paid and still there is a "wad" in the treasury. One new member was elected and fifteen new names proposed for membership.

Fred Burki says we want the carnation convention, 1906, for Pittsburgh, and so say we all of us. It is stated that Boston wants it, but as the Hub has had it twice to our once, and as the down east boys have always been mighty fair, I don't think they will step between us and our ambition. Will you, boys? You know we have the people here—750,000 within a radius of twenty miles—and the interest, and the conveniences and, boys, we have the bawbees, and will spend them, too. So, carnation growers all over the country, make up your mind to come to us in 1906.

Now for the symposium. Our exhibition consisted of two long tables, one filled by our home growers. The Pittsburgh Rose & Carnation Co. showed great bunches of most of the leading varieties. Blind Bros., of West View, and J. L. Wyland, of Dehaven, each showed splendid blooms of leading sorts. Outside florists filled the other table with their new and special varieties and these were fine. F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., sent Adonis, Enchantress, White Lawson and Daheim. Adonis is behaving splendidly with them and Enchantress acts superbly. We all fell in love with the White Lawson. As a dark crimson their Daheim is a stunner.

H. Weber & Sons, of Oakland, Md., sent some of their New Daybreak, a fine flower and of the most chaste and delicate pink imaginable. W. J. Palmer, Buffalo, sent the Red Lawson. It took our eye and our heart. What a splendid trio this Lawson family is, red, white and pink, identical in everything except color, and all colors excellent. Fred Burki got up in meeting and declared that the Lawson was the best all around carnation ever raised.

John E. Haines, of Bethlehem, sent his namesake, also Juno, Imperial, Star of Bethlehem and No. 77. The variety named John E. Haines is a magnificent scarlet, big, perfect flowers, of firm, lasting texture and on stiff, long stems. Imperial is a variegated, large, of good form and texture, long, stiff stem and excellent keeping qualities. The Star of Bethlehem is a pretty yellow.

R. Witterstaetter, of Cincinnati, showed his magnificent Cardinal; it is a beauty. Charles Frueh & Son, Saginaw, Mich., showed their pretty seedling, No. 115. The Thompson Co., Joliet, sent big blooms of Estelle and Fisher.

Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, sent a great sheaf of as fine Mme. Chatenay roses as one could wish to see. The flowers were superb, stems stiff as pokers up to the neck and foliage excellent. It is now Sunday night, and three of these roses on my table are still fresh, beautiful and firm, but their stems have been shortened.

And now for disappointment. Don't swear; we already have done that. Three of the finest exhibits didn't reach Pittsburg until Wednesday morning, the day after the club meeting. These were from Peter Fisher, the Cottage Gardens and Dorner & Sons Co. Peter Fisher's box contained fine blooms of Nelson Fisher and Mrs. M. A. Patten. From the Cottage Gardens came The President, Ethel Ward, Judge Hinsdale and a large number of seedlings. From Dorner & Sons Co. came The Belle and Lady Bountiful. Every bloom in these three lots was simply perfection.

But they were not lost. We unpacked the boxes and cared for the flowers, and on Thursday evening exhibited them at the meeting of the Botanical Society of Western Pennsylvania in the large lecture room of the Carnegie Institute. All of the other carnations from distant growers that were at the Florists' Club and in good condition, likewise the Chatenay roses, were also exhibited before this society. Fortunately, it was the biggest meeting we ever had of the Botanical Society, completely filling the large lecture room. The members simply "went wild" over the flowers. At 10 o'clock a committee was appointed to distribute the blooms among the audience, and if you ever saw happy people in your life these were they.

At the botanical meeting the subject was "Ferns." Every species indigenous in Pennsylvania was shown. Henry H. Negley collected and sent north to us over forty species from southern Florida.

The Phipps Conservatories furnished plants of every genus within its walls. Henry A. Dreer sent the rare water fern, ceratopteris, and from Fairmount park and the University of Pennsylvania came filmy ferns. Miss Oberly, an artist, exhibited some of her handiwork in ceramics and Madge Irvin, the artist, had a beautiful study of ferns and carnations in oil painting for this meeting and presented it to the president.

Dr. J. F. Shafer, of 1044 S. Negley avenue, an interested member, has invited the society out to his home next Thursday evening, March 24, to see his orchids and have a good time. And you bet we are going. The doctor has the largest collection of orchids between the Alleghanies and Chicago, particularly of curiosities among orchids, and a great many of them are now in bloom. PROPAGATING THE DAHLIA.

As the dahlia has now become one of the principal flowers, the subject of the best method of propagation seems to have become a burning question with the trade. Different growers seem to have their own particular ideas, but beneath the facts of the case are oftentimes discerned some particular reason for the diverging views. I shall, therefore, try to give the plain facts based on nineteen years' experience.

The first method, of course, was by seed. This was the quickest and cheapest method, and as there were no double varieties, very satisfactory results were given; but as particularly fine sorts were developed these were saved and were increased by division of roots, and where these divisions could not be made to a single eye, the extra shoots were carefully removed and grafted on to tubers of less desirable varieties. Later it was found that it was not necessary to graft these young shoots on to other tubers, and the method of grafting, therefore, fell into disuse, as it was a much quicker operation to simply smooth the cutting off and place in sand.

I would state, however, that for many years after grafting shoots into tubers of less desirable varieties had been practically abandoned, eyes and portions of tubers were still inserted on very large tubers in order to get a stronger growth. Even this practice has now been abandoned, excepting for experience and pleasure. Propagation by seed has also been abandoned, except to produce new varieties. We therefore come down to the two principal methods of propagation, by division of roots and by cuttings.

Division of Roots.

The dahlia is really a tuberous-rooted plant and not a bulb or tuber in the strictest sense of the word, the eyes being formed on the crown to which the tubers are attached. In many cases the necks of the tubers are so short that in breaking off, or being pulled apart, eyes are attached to the end of the tuber. In other cases, the crown enlarges and extends in the form of a shoulder on the end of a tuber, and in this case the tuber can easily be removed with eyes, but generally the division must be made right through the crown, removing a section of the crown containing an eye or eyes. In dividing care must be taken that the neck connecting the tubers with the crown is not broken or twisted, so as to obstruct the passage of the nourishment from the tubers to the eye, as it is the duty of the tuber to keep the crown and eyes nourished. If the tubers are all removed from the crown, the eyes will shrivel and wither, while if the tuber is detached, it will keep itself in perfect condition under almost all conditions. In many varieties of dahlias, particularly in many of the single varieties, the tuber is connected by long, slender necks; sometimes a heavy tuber weighing a half-pound will be connected by a slender stem or neck several inches long, to the crown, in which case they are very hard to handle, as all tubers with broken stems or necks are absolutely worthless and might as well be cut off.

The division of roots can be done at any time after harvesting in the fall until planting time in the spring, by experienced growers, but amateurs or beginners should wait until the eyes become prominent, which will insure every division having eyes. A great many disappointments have had their origin in the belief that every portion of the crown contains eyes, and all that is necessary is to divide up the clumps with simply a section of the crown attached to the tubers. This is a policy, however, that will never be tried the second time. The number of divisions to be made on each clump depends entirely upon the variety. Some varieties make but few eyes, and of course the number of divisions would depend entirely on the number of strong, uninjured tubers and the number of eyes on the crown.

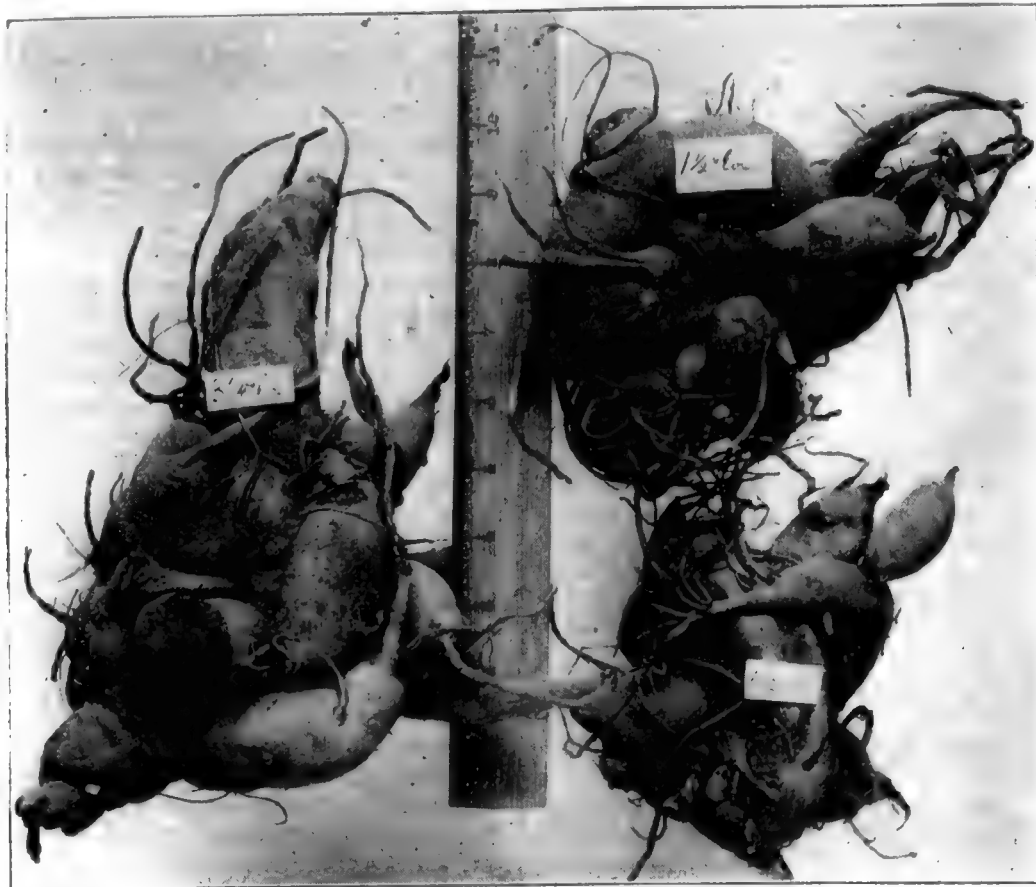

The divided tubers can be planted at any time after the danger of freezing is over, as they are placed in the ground and covered completely from two to six inches, according to the ideas of the grower. As the propagation by division of roots is comparatively slow, that is in the way of producing large quantities, or for new varieties, it is only used on the standard sorts; but to offset this, it is by far the cheaper method.

Propagation by Cuttings.

This method is the exact reverse of the preceding. While all that is required in the former being a sharp knife and a sharp hatchet or cleaver to cut through the heavy stems, this method is a science in itself, as the result depends entirely upon the care, attention and ability of the propagator. The roots are placed in the stock bench in soil about one-third well rotted manure, and the other two-thirds should be well rotted sod, these being well mixed together, and an application of bone thoroughly worked through. This is to supply strong, sturdy, vigorous cuttings without exhausting the bulbs.

As feeding roots are sent out from the bulbs, this is accomplished and if they are kept fairly dry, the cuttings will come strong during the entire season. That this stock is not weakened by propagation, we bear out in practice every way, by showing as fine a crop of blooms on our old stock roots as can be found in the country. We are aware that many propagators use poor soil in their stock benches, but this will not give the best results. The very best houses are also required for the cuttings, and pure sand about three inches deep should be placed on the benches, firmly packed.

When the cuttings have developed about three pair of leaves, they should be cut, the leaves shortened, and planted in the sand of the cutting house or cutting bench with a dibble. Here, again, judgment must be exercised, as the large cuttings must have more space than the smaller ones, and ample room must be given always to insure plenty of light and air. The best distance is about two and one-half inches apart in the rows and one-half to one inch between the cuttings in the row. These cuttings require both air and light, but judgment must be used, as a direct draught would cause the cuttings to wilt, while too little air and too much water would cause them to damp off. Heating is another factor. We have seen dahlia cutting benches run with 80 to 90 degrees bottom heat. This is very apt, however, especially in damp weather, to cause cutting bench fungus. We prefer a bottom temperature of 55 to 60 degrees and would like the top air to be about the same as the sand. We do not believe in having the sand 5 to 10 degrees above the overhead air. We find that a uniform heat of the sand and air gives stronger roots and stronger plants.

When the cuttings are placed in the sand, they should be watered thoroughly, and as little water used afterward as possible. There is no set rule to go by; simply watch the cuttings and the sand. The time of year and amount of heat required will determine the amount of water. In cold weather, when a strong bottom heat is given, it is often necessary to water the cutting bench every day. As we use steam exclusively, we do this watering at night instead of in the morning. Care should be exercised that the cuttings do not wilt in the bench. This sometimes requires one to three sprayings a day over the tops. This spraying should be done by a fine spray and not with a watering-pot, as keeping the top of the sand continually wet is apt to cause the cuttings to rot at the surface and is, besides, a prolific cause of fungus.

The time required for rooting dahlia cuttings is from one to four weeks, according to the condition of the cutting and the variety. A skilled propagator will, therefore, arrange the watering of his stock bench, giving some varieties more water than others, and will allow some varieties to grow larger than others before cutting down. The main object is to have the cuttings of each variety handled in such a way that they will all be rooted about the same time.

Another great cause for disappointment in propagating from cuttings is allowing the cutting to stand in the sand too long after rooting. We pot our cuttings when about half of them show roots, the rest being callused and ready to break into roots. If the cuttings are allowed to remain in the sand until heavy roots and sometimes little tubers are formed, they never make as good plants. The object sought is to take the cuttings out when they are in the best possible condition to make the best plants. Then, as the young roots start out, they begin feeding at once in the soil in the pot, and as they get nicely root-bound, they form heavy, compact clumps, as shown in the accompanying illustration.

After the plants have been potted up in 2, 2 1/4 or 2 1/2-inch pots, they should be placed in a house of about the same temperature as the cutting house and shaded from the direct rays of the sun for a few days, or a week, the first, second or third days not allowing the sun to reach them at all, but gradually lessening the amount of shade until they become established in the pots, when they can stand the full sunlight.

Air and water should now be given judiciously, no rule being followed, but whenever the plants require water, give it generously. Many believe that because a dahlia can use lots of water, they should be wet all the time, but this is not the case and the soil should be dry after each watering before another application. Where too much water is given the plants become very soft and drawn, while good, stocky plants that are hard enough to bear shipment can only be grown by giving plenty of air and light, and only watering when required, and that thoroughly.

In planting in the open ground, as much space should be given to the dahlia plant as to a divided tuber, and if this is done, the roots at harvesting time will be found to not only be fully as large as those of the divided roots, but for commercial purposes will be much better. By looking at the accompanying illustration, this will be seen at a glance, for in the root grown from a cutting the tubers are wound around and matted together in such a way that they can be shipped long distances and handled even roughly without injuring or breaking the necks of the tubers, whereas, as every one knows who has ever handled dahlias, roots grown from divided tubers are very difficult to handle without breaking the necks of the tubers; in which case they are worthless and might as well be cut off. From this it will be seen that even should divided tubers give a strong clump at harvesting time, there will be less weight of actual tubers capable of giving nourishment than in the clump grown from cuttings, where the full amount is still in condition, having suffered no loss from handling.

The main objection to propagation from cuttings is the additional cost. It requires skilled help in every branch, modern houses, pots and a large amount of labor. The benefits gained, however, are that we are now enabled to offer new varieties the third year from seed in good quantities; besides, it gives us a more compact clump, worth much more for commercial purposes, on account of standing all kinds of handling.

In conclusion I would state that as propagation by division of roots is much cheaper than by cuttings, we plant hundreds of thousands of divided roots every year, in fact use this method on all varieties where stock permits. On new and rare varieties, and where we have not sufficient stock to divide, we are forced to propagate by cuttings, as no dahlia grower can be strictly up-to-date and offer best varieties and still confine himself to the one method.

Over-Propagation.

Much has been said about the weakening of stock by over-propagation. We would state that any weakening of stock is done by injudicious treatment or method, for as long as the stock benches are properly handled, and strong cuttings grown, and proper treatment given in the cutting bench, and with the young potted plants, no damage is going to be done.

The roots in the accompanying illustration were taken from a bin of the new cactus dahlia, Kriemhilde. Our object in showing Kriemhilde is that it is a new German variety of which in 1902 we had one root for trial. We propagated all we could the entire season and were so well pleased with it that we secured additional roots, which we placed in the stock bench for 1903. We pushed this stock, using every known method to multiply and produce cuttings and in a block of 2,000 plants we failed to see a single imperfect or open-centered flower during the entire blooming season. It will thus be seen that instead of making a weaker root, propagation by cuttings makes fully as strong, without loss of vitality if properly done. In proof of which Kriemhilde has been propagated hard every year since it was grown from the little black seed, and the photograph shows the result.

EXTERMINATING GREENFLY.

Regarding the extermination of greenfly in greenhouses, I wish to say that many florists do not appreciate the value of the punk preparations because they do not know how to apply them properly. It is the only thing we use in the shape of tobacco, no stems or dust being seen on our place the year around.

We have large wire hooks bent like the letter S to hang on the side bench boards; on these hooks we slip on as many rolls of the punk as we wish to use in the house, being careful to distribute evenly or to bunch up where heavier effect is wanted. We apply in every walk of a house and none are lighted before all are placed and ready. Then we have a person in each walk backing up with a small torch, setting the rolls afire as fast as possible. The idea is to produce an overwhelming killing effect at once, which is the cheapest and best.

Now as regards strength, you can hardly overdo it, as we have never hurt any plant except Major Bonnaillon chrysanthemum in full bloom. Just now we have a bed of heliotrope in the same house with coleus for cuttings where the temperature is 68 degrees at night. The heliotrope is as rank as can be and to kill mealy bugs on coleus we used an enormous charge of punk for two nights in succession, cleaning the coleus all right and doing no harm whatever to the heliotrope. This is a severe test.

As to expense, it costs, but it pays if one considers his time worth anything, the appearance of his place worth anything, the absolute control without damage to any plant, be it maidenhair fern, heliotrope or spirea, worth anything.

The only plant that suffered is Major Bonnaillon chrysanthemum in full bloom. All other mums take it kindly and a killing dose can be put into the mum house when flowers are fully developed. It is a good way to keep Begonia Gloire de Lorraine clean. If infested with mealy bug they should be treated before coming into full bloom, as it might bleach the color out of the flowers a little, mealy bug requiring an awful charge to kill them. We do no preventive fumigating. A killing dose is given when aphids show. We find we can save money that way. For instance, our carnation house, 22x100, was operated from August 15 to March 1 without any insecticide whatever, also other houses likewise.

To get the best results select a quiet evening, if cloudy or rainy all the better, and shut the ventilators and apply. After one hour you can ventilate at pleasure.

FRED WINDMILLER.

AN IDEA FOR ROSE BREEDERS.

It is now over a year ago since there convened in the city of New York an international congress of scientific botanists for the purpose of discussing the great problems of plant breeding. Then there was the recent meeting of the National Plant Breeding Association at St. Louis. It all goes to show that there is now an intense interest in new methods of selection and in cross fertilization for purposes of plant improvement. Yet, so far as the writer is aware, no one has ventured to suggest the idea that it is possible to breed away the thorn of the rose.

Be it remembered that this now hard and sharp process originally acquired by the rose as a means of defense, is no longer of any value to the plant. Thousands of years ago, when the rose was yet in its infancy, and when plant-eating animals were feeding on all manner of plant life, it must have happened that during this primitive struggle for existence among the myriads of forms and structures of plants, that various means were adopted to preserve their existence. One species would acquire a disagreeable odor, another an acrid or pungent taste, another toxic or poisonous properties, while others protected themselves by developing upon their structures stinging nettles or sharp spines, as the cactus, the hawthorn, the raspberry, the blackberry and the rose. The slightest variation in structure and in habit that would prove advantageous to the species would be seized upon by natural selection and transmitted to posterity. Thus if any plant chanced to grow upon its stem or leaf a prickly point that would offend the tender and sensitive noses of plant eating animals, and thereby escape destruction, such plant would survive in the struggle for life and perpetuate its kind.

The rose belongs to a large and very interesting family. Some of its members have grown into gigantic structures and have risen beyond the reach of animals, while others have been forced to acquire habits of an opposite character by seeking shelter and protection beneath the stronger growing thorny and prickly types. My purpose is here only to point out the extreme flexibility of the entire family, its readiness to yield to cultural conditions and environment. It is scarcely necessary to call attention to the great variety of roses, which have all emerged by successive divergences and from very primitive types. They all brought with them the thorns.

But the rose having come under the care and protection of man, the thorns are no longer needed, are functionless, and are as useless as bayonets after universal peace has been declared. Moreover, they are an abomination to the rose plant. They very greatly mar the loveliness and beauty of the rose. Already, however, there may be seen varieties that have fewer thorns than others, and occasional plants of a variety may be seen to differ as to number and size of thorns. I maintain, then, that it only remains for the young and energetic rose grower, by careful selection, propagation and breeding, to give to the world the true queen of flowers, a thornless rose.

THE LABOR PROBLEM.

The following is an extract from the address of Robert Simpson, of Clifton, N. J., at the March meeting of the New York Florists' Club:

When a man's establishment has grown too large for his own hands to do all the work in it, and he is compelled to employ others, he is pretty certain to encounter difficulties which will keep him awake late into the night trying to puzzle out. The help problem in its most aggravated form makes a grower often wish that he had been anything in the wide world but a florist. To read the advertising columns of our trade weeklies one would be inclined to take an optimistic view of the situation. As one's eye runs over the page we find it bristles with talent and experience all waiting to serve the man lucky enough to secure it; each applicant thoroughly fitted for any position of trust and responsibility; "capable of taking charge," is the stereotyped phrase. With so much talent, all the best, how is a man to make a choice? We make a venture; the sequel you all know. The man who knew it all when put to work and given the test knew almost nothing, or else had stored up all the knowledge there was and immediately took upon himself the benevolent task of instructing his ignorant employer. The itinerant florist is a wonder. When a man pulls out a pocketful of testimonials you had better have a hurry call to the telephone, slip out of the back door, and never come back that day.

It seems to me that in trying to solve the labor problem we shall have to do one of two things: employ only unskilled labor and furnish the brains and intelligence ourselves, so that the men will simply need to execute orders and work machine fashion; or else we must try to secure journeymen florists of a higher stamp of morality and intelligence than those we have at the present time. A number of growers that I have talked with are trying the former method with more or less success; they at least have the satisfaction of running their business in their own way and having the work done as experience and common sense dictates. One very serious drawback to this method, however, will be found in the fact that if the intelligence of the overseer is, through sickness or any other cause, withdrawn for any length of time, something serious is liable to happen.

If we adopt the other suggestion, I believe we will have to make our business more attractive, and offer greater inducements for young men of education and intelligence to seek such employment. Bright boys to-day will not choose a business for life that pays them no better and gives them no higher rank than that of a common laborer. The treatment which some employers give their men in the way of long hours, little recreation, scanty and poor food, and utter disregard for all the comforts of life is scandalous in the extreme. I have passed through it.

"IT IS TO LAUGH."

The following "fairy tale" originated in the brain of one who must have had a previous demonstration of the gullibility of the editors of daily newspapers. The first victim, according to all accounts, was the New York Globe, but the "story" was given credence in dozens of newspaper offices through the country and so reputable a journal as the Chicago Tribune gave the canard a place on its front page March 16. The narrative is reproduced here simply because, while the daily papers have published many ridiculous things about the flower business those familiar with the violet market will agree that this is "the best ever."

John D. Rockefeller has cornered the violet market, and H. McK. Twombly has a monopoly of the orchid output. This announcement, not new to the florists of New York, who have been buying 30,000 violets a day from Mr. Rockefeller at Dobbs Ferry, and have for many months been depending entirely upon the greenhouses of Mr. Twombly, at Madison, N. J., for their supply of orchids—particularly those of the popular mauve variety—came like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky to the men on 'Change and the thousands of people who wear violets and are familiar with the Standard Oil Company. Mr. Twombly, who also sells milk, does not, therefore, depend upon the sale of orchids for his sole revenue. His gardener gets most of the benefit. Mr. Twombly merely wears an orchid in his buttonhole now and then, and sometimes inspects the greenhouse. But it is different up at Dobbs Ferry. Mr. Rockefeller has the best sort of violets grown. He charges anything he wants for them. They are Standard, for the debutante, the matinee girl, or the young man who likes them on his frock. They are just like oil. Only they bloom instead of burn. Every member of the famous Sunday school class is presented with a blue bouquet of the finest variety each Sunday. Therefore that day the price of violets down town is higher. They cost 25 cents more a hundred, so the greenhouse men say.

The train that runs down from Dobbs Ferry about 9 o'clock in the morning is called the Rockefeller violet special. It is met each day by crowds of local florists, who are anxious to make the first bid and get the choicest bunches. The station at that time, as every one knows, is redolent with the fresh purple perfume. Mr. Rockefeller now and then comes down in the car himself and presides at the auction. He knows each bunch of flowers, its price—and the Standard Oil rules of procedure hold throughout. Those which are picked by Mr. Rockefeller himself are said to be the most expensive.

The day that Mr. Rockefeller's cow jumped over the fence and landed in the flower bed, as well as the time the ladies from Dobbs Ferry Seminary inspected the greenhouse, the price of violets in New York City was doubled.

It is said that the merger decision will not affect this horticultural combination.

The Rockefeller gardener, when interviewed at Dobbs Ferry today, said: "Yes, we have a corner on the violet market. Our violets are the best known, most popular, and largest species in the world. Sprinkling them liberally with oil each morning induces a rapidity of growth and a poignancy of odor that can be obtained in no other way. I am sorry to hear that all other violet growers are going out of business, but, as Mr. Rockefeller has so often told us, 'Business is business, in love or war.'"

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Meeting of the Executive Committee.

The regular annual meeting of the executive committee of the Society of American Florists was held at the Southern Hotel, St. Louis, March 5-7. After the usual routine of officers' reports, sundry communications, etc., the arrangements for the coming convention were taken up. Music Hall, eastern nave and the spacious vestibule of the Exposition building on Olive street, were found to be admirably adapted for the purposes of the convention and trade exhibition and their selection therefor by the St. Louis Florists' Club was duly approved by the committee.

The secretary was instructed to arrange for the presentation of papers by competent gentlemen upon the following subjects: "Progress of Bulb-raising in America," "Home and Municipal Improvement from a Horticultural Standpoint," "The Ideal Employee," "Development of an American Type of Roses," "Indoor Blooming Plants."

The president's reception will be held, as heretofore, on the evening of the first day of the convention, but the usual evening meetings on the second and third days will be omitted so that members may be free to visit the World's Fair, a session on the morning of the fourth day being substituted therefor. One session will be devoted to addresses by eminent horticulturists from abroad. The bowling tournament will take place on the afternoon of the second day, the shooting and ladies' bowling on the afternoon of the third day and the visitors will be the guests of the St. Louis Florists' Club on the afternoon of the fourth day.

New rules were adopted regulating the judging in the trade exhibit, whereby the main report on the exhibits shall be made by the superintendent of the exhibition, and the judges, three in number, shall be required to examine and make awards on novelties and improved devices only, due entry of such special exhibits being made in advance with the superintendent. On recommendation of President Beneke of the local club, C. A. Kuehn was appointed superintendent of the exhibition, with power to select an assistant. Arrangements were also made for the appointment of a sergeant-at-arms and assistant, a night watchman in the exhibition hall and the establishment of a bureau of information, and an agreement was entered into with the representatives of the St. Louis Florists' Club establishing the salary of the superintendent and providing for the disposal of the proceeds of the exhibition after the payment of all expenses, for the benefit of the St. Louis Florists' Club on a basis similar to that made with the local club at Milwaukee last year.

The legislative committee was re-appointed with J. K. M. L. Farquhar, of Boston, as chairman for 1904, and Messrs. H. M. Altick, Elmer D. Smith and the secretary were constituted a special committee to work in conjunction with them in promoting an agitation favoring the passage by congress of the bill presented by the Postal Progress League.

Messrs. P. J. Hauswirth, Carl Beyer and R. F. Tesson were appointed the committee on sporting events for the convention of 1904, and were instructed to rule that all persons (ladies excepted) participating in any games must be members of the S. A. F. in good standing, and also of their respective local Florists' Club, where one exists.

The amendment to the constitution providing for reciprocal relations with other societies, referred by the Milwaukee convention to the executive committee, was taken up and considered at length, and finally adopted in an amended form for regular presentation to the convention next August.

It was voted to offer for the coming year silver and bronze medals for award through various horticultural bodies, as in previous years. The accounts of the secretary and treasurer showed a very substantial increase in both general and permanent fund.

The committee on final resolutions, Messrs. Altick, Wirth and Stewart, presented the following resolutions which were adopted by a unanimous vote:

We, the members of the executive committee of the Society of American Florists, in meeting assembled, hereby express our thanks to the St. Louis Florists' Club, to F. W. Taylor, Chief of Agriculture and Horticulture of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition; to J. H. Hadkinson, Superintendent of the Department of Floriculture; to T. W. Brown, Chief of Landscape, British Exhibit; to R. J. Mohr, Superintendent of Landscape, British Exhibit, and to the management of the Southern Hotel, for the hospitality and many courtesies shown us during our stay in St. Louis, and to the daily press for notices of our proceedings, and we would especially express our appreciation for the incessant and considerate attention shown to this committee by J. J. Beneke, president, and Otto G. Koenig, treasurer, of the St. Louis Florists' Club.

GALAX.

The splendid Christmas Annual of Country Life in America contained an article on "Christmas Greens and Flowers," by Thomas McAdam, and illustrated with some of the finest pictures ever shown in that handsomely printed publication. Holly, ground pine, wild smilax, mountain laurel and mistletoe are among the things described in a popular way. Of galax it is said that "it is a hardy little perennial that grows in the southern Appalachians and nowhere else in the world. The leaves come in two colors, green and bronze; the texture is firm and waxy. Galax has now displaced ivy as the standard material for florists' designs, for it is prettier, costs less and is more easily kept and handled and has long wiry stems. The leaves are also available in a greater range of size and have the advantage of another color besides green."

The introduction of galax to the trade is credited to Harlan P. Kelsey. The commercial use of galax dates back to only 1890, yet today the leaf is known and used the world over and last year no less than seventy million galax leaves were shipped from the mountains of North and South Carolina. Mr. Kelsey states that he had for years been familiar with galax, but it was not until thirteen years ago that it occurred to him that there would be a large demand for these leaves if they were known to the trade.

"A campaign of advertising was begun," says Mr. Kelsey, "and samples were sent freely all over the United States. At first the florists took to them slowly, but eventually galax made its way on its merits and instead of thousands being sent away, the number reached into the millions, until, the coming season, a hundred million is a safe estimate of the number that will be picked and sent out from this section, with many foreign countries, particularly Germany, using their share."

"The industry is of untold benefit to the native mountaineer, as it requires the time of thousands of pickers during the idle winter months to supply the demand. Every member of the family, from the father to the little boy or girl who learned to walk last year, is able to earn good wages, so light and easy is the work. On bright days during the late fall and winter the woods ring with the voices of the pickers, going 'galacking,' as the saying is. It is no unusual sight to see a camping party starting out over the roads to some distant galax ground, in any kind of a vehicle from a large mountain 'schooner' to a small sled drawn by a shaggy ox, or sometimes an ox hitched with a mule, 'Pap' leading the procession, one of the boys driving, and 'Maw' walking behind carrying the baby or peering out of the 'sheet,' as the cover is called; the rest of the large family (often from ten to fifteen) riding or stringing out for a considerable distance before and behind."

"The leaves are usually picked in the daytime in baskets, to prevent the crimped edges being crushed, and at night around the campfire or fireplace, the family joins in sorting the leaves into colors and sizes and tying into bunches of twenty-five leaves each, all poor leaves being rejected, for if even a few poor leaves creep in, the entire lot is liable to be culled and thrown aside by the local buyer."

"The leaves have now reached our packing-house, where they are packed in light cases, usually of 10,000 leaves each, in assorted lots, of the colors and sizes, in separate boxes, in layers three bunches or seventy-five leaves deep, sphagnum moss between the layers and oiled paper all around the inside of the box. Of course there is much poorly graded galax handled by country stores, the leaves being thrown carelessly into rough boxes, without proper packing material, but these command a low price in the market and are more often a total loss."

"The bulk of the galax leaves go to the larger cities, Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Chicago leading, where they are placed in cold storage to prevent heating. At a temperature of about 33 degrees Fahrenheit they will keep in good condition till next year's new crop comes in.

"The bronze colors appear only late in the year when the plants ripen and the frosts begin, but in the deep woods, where there is dense shade, the leaves never turn color. The area over which galax is now collected extends from Virginia to Georgia, and I am happy to say that I believe there is no danger of exterminating the species. This is partly because the plant is not pulled up by the root, the foliage only being plucked. Another reason is that only absolutely perfect leaves are taken, since the slightest speck or flaw makes a leaf worthless to the trade."

Country Life in America is not a horticultural journal in a trade sense, but its breath is that of life outdoors and it is deserving of a place on the library table of every one who loves nature and is fond of good printing.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Business continued to improve steadily last week and by Saturday the market was apparently more active than it has been in weeks. We say "apparently" because some of the wholesalers reported that the commotion was as much the result of lighter receipts as it was of heavier demand. But business is brisk and most lines have profited to the extent of a considerable stiffening in prices. Shipping trade is good all through the market and locally retail business is now by no means bad. Aggregate sales for the week are about as last year.

While receipts may naturally be expected to fall off just before the period of greatest demand, there is little change in the situation at the greenhouses. The same conditions prevail as a week ago. Beauties are blooming no more freely; there are just as many and no more tea roses, quality is of the same average; carnations are developing just as fast or even a little faster than they were. The only point at which there is any change is in the "green goods" market. Smilax has been scarce for some time and now some of the asparagus growers are reported pretty well cut out, so that prices have advanced a little on plumosus strings. Violets had a few days of good demand. Bulbous stock plentiful.

While it is quite in the course of human events that the growers should try to accumulate all the stock they can well do for Easter and that prices should more and more approximate Easter rates as the days pass, yet light receipts this week must not be considered as indisputable evidence that stock will be short for the big demand at the close of next week. It is quite within the memory of those not old in the business when there were practically no flowers for the week before Easter and a very great plenty the day before. With fair prices prevailing in the next week it will be far wiser to send in stock while it is yet good rather than hold it until it becomes stale, for stale stuff won't bring much of anything on even the shortest of markets.

There seem likely to be large supplies of lilies but the prospect of a large part of them being of indifferent quality is causing orders to come in more freely than they otherwise would. There are no particular crops in sight anywhere and there will not be any to spare on good roses but probably a plenty of "our selection." Both long Beauties and Liberties will be scarce. Some of the growers have the idea that carnations are going to be very short, and there is little prospect of good grades being more than equal to orders, certainly not until Saturday, but several houses are still booking orders for thousand lots where anything goes at $30; but drowsy stuff does not even get in on this grade. Bulbous stock will be plentiful, also violets.

Various Notes.

E. E. Pieser says he is looking for a shortage of good roses to develop in the market as Easter draws near. He has it figured out that the more the growers try to increase the Easter supply the lower the average quality will be, and there haven't been any too many first-class roses even when the demand was lightest. He is looking for the best Easter business on record.

At the Florists' Club meeting Wednesday night it was voted to extend the American Rose Society a cordial invitation to hold its exhibition in Chicago next year in the same hall with the Carnation Society show. The big banquet room at the Auditorium will probably be used for the combined exhibitions.

Peter Reinberg is busy setting a hot pace for his opponent in the race for aldermanic honors. His is known as the carnation campaign and he is getting a great deal of favorable attention from the daily papers. The election is April 5.

Poehlmann Bros. are among those who expect to get their lilies in on time for Easter, not less than 20,000 to 25,000 of them. Their stock is all in good shape. August Poehlmann says that thirty per cent of the Beauties have been twenty-four inches or over. They have just given the Moninger Co. an order for material for five houses 27x500. Last year's addition was 125,000 feet of glass and already they are planning on what they will do next year to round out the plant.

C. W. McKellar pulls out those trays of orchids for all comers. He keeps the stock in vases ingeniously set in low boxes of corrugated paste-board, the receptacles being inserted through holes cut in the cover.

Wieter Bros. have 15,000 Lawson carnations in pots which they will carry on, shifting as needed, until they can plant them in solid beds following a lot of summer roses. The rest of their Lawsons will go into the field as heretofore.

Mrs. Horton, of Bassett & Washburn's, has everyone's sympathy in the critical illness of her mother.

Cypress is still high but glass is comparatively cheap, which goes a long way toward encouraging new building. M. G. Holding, of the Sprague, Smith Co., says that the inquiries for prices indicate a great deal of new glass going up in the next few months.

The Foley Mfg. Co. has a new galvanized iron gutter which they make in long lengths and which they believe will eventually be generally adopted. Peter Reinberg has ordered one run of it for trial on the houses he will rebuild this summer.

The Pittsburg Plate Glass Co. has established a temporary office at 46 and 48 E. Van Buren street with warerooms at Jackson and Franklin street. Their burned building will be reconstructed at once.

Albert Fuchs is going out of business. This time he will sell the greenhouses for removal from the ground.

Harry Rowe had a nice St. Patrick's day order, for the banquet at the Auditorium, for which he imported a large number of shamrocks in pots from the east.

P. J. Hauswirth is a committee of one on transportation to the St. Louis convention. He may be expected to sustain his reputation as an excursion manager.

Peter Reinberg was so well pleased with the Morehead steam trap which he saw on exhibition at the carnation convention at Detroit that he gave the inventor an order for two of them.

Sinner Bros. have their place in nice shape and are looking for a good spring business. They are working up quite a shipping trade.

Max Ringier, brother of Arnold Ringier, is now with the Kennicott Bros. Co.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

General trade shows a great improvement over a week ago. The demand was much more steady and every variety and grade of flowers seemed to enjoy the welcome prosperity. For one thing there were numerous spring openings, and they used up large quantities of the second and third grades. This had a tendency to raise the price of the better stock. There was material advance in all lines of stock, with the exception perhaps of American Beauties. But that was due more to the extremely poor quality of the stock coming in than to the lack of demand.

There is just about enough stock to take good care of the demand at present. Maids are perhaps a trifle short. Meteors and Liberties always are scarce in this market, and but few first-class blooms are to be had at any time. Bulbous stock is going better, Harrisii especially. Callas, too, are in good demand. Green goods are very short.

The outlook for Easter is very bright, but as is usually the case, carnations will be scarce. The prospects for roses are much better, and it appears as if there will be enough to fill all orders. There will be a large supply of bulbous flowers, but no surplus. It is probable that Harrisii lilies may miss Easter by a week or so. Even at that, this market will be well supplied with them. We are having some beautiful spring weather now and that ought to help bring in a large cut for Easter.

Various Items.

As the rents received from the stands in the Jabez Elliott flower market are not sufficient to pay the running expenses, it was decided by the trustees to raise the rent of each stand $5 a year, to take effect the 1st of May. When it is understood that the rents range from $25 to $30 a year, it seems that the trustees are not imposing a very great hardship upon the standholders.

St. Patrick's day brought forth a lot of green carnations, and they sold well. H. D. Edwards, of Newport, Ky., has discovered a method by which good results are obtained. This year he had numerous out-of-town orders, one from Cleveland, Ohio, for 300 blooms. It is Mr. Edwards' intention to place on the market the chemical he uses in producing his green carnations. The blooms are not dyed externally, but the chemical is forced into the bloom through the stem.

Rodger Peterson has gone to Philadelphia to accept a position in the trade.
C. J. OHMER.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

From reports of the different retail stores, Lent has not interfered very much with business. A number of large funeral orders and decorations for downtown openings are reported the past week. St. Patrick's day was celebrated here on Sunday, and was more generally observed than usual. Quite a large quantity of cut flowers was used, in the shape of harps, bouquets and wreaths, also large numbers of green carnations were worn, which were the handiwork of a few of the down-town florists.

There is a great deal of talk nowadays among the growers, wholesalers and retailers as to Easter stock in both cut flowers and plants. From appearances after visiting a few of the larger places, there will be an abundance of both, as the weather has been favorable, and if it does not get too warm, which hastens plants along, everything will be fine for the St. Louis florists.

With the conditions of business as above mentioned, prices are holding up fairly well. Because of the warm spell which we have had stock is coming in a great deal more plentifully than it has been. The demand, according to the wholesalers, has been surprisingly good, and some days everything is cleaned up early. The quality of roses and carnations is exceedingly fine. Good long Beauties are not overplentiful. They sell at from $3 to $5 per dozen. Beauties with medium stems are more plentiful, also short-stemmed blooms. Tea roses are quite abundant and those of the first grade sell best at from $6 to $8 per 100. Plenty of second grade Meteors are in the market, also Liberty. Carnations are keeping up in quality. Plenty of these are in the market and the trade is buying some good stock at $2 and $3 per 100. Extra fancy run, $4, sell well and are cleaned up every day and only common sorts are left over.

Bulb stock had a busy week of it, there being plenty of it and quite a demand. Extra fine Harrisii are in at $15 per 100. Callas, too, are fine and plenty. Bulb stock is somewhat cheaper than reported last week. Violets are plentiful, but seem to clean up almost every day at from 25 to 40 cents per 100. Pink and white sweet peas are fine, at 35 and 60 cents per 100. Some good smilax is again in the market. Other greens are in good shape.

Various Notes.

D. Newsham, of New Orleans, is in the city, in charge of the display of the Louisiana state horticultural department at the World's Fair grounds.

Prof. Frederic W. Taylor, chief of the horticultural department at the World's Fair, delivered a lecture on the evening of March 17 at the Kings Highway church. The subject was "Agriculture and Floriculture at the World's Fair."

C. Young and Sons Co. is making a fine show of bulbs, seeds and plants in the store on Olive street. Wm. Young, of this firm, is reported very sick.

Busy times are reported by the St. Louis Seed Co. and the Schisler-Corneli Seed Co.

Arthur Ellison was down with a case of grippe the past week, but is somewhat better today.

R. F. Tesson is very busy these days on his farm in Clayton. Bob is raising ginseng roots.

George Waldbart has a fine lot of rhododendrons in bloom, also a big stock of other plants. Some of the best grade of cut flowers are to be seen in his show windows.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers makes a big show of fine blooming plants of all kinds. Mrs. Ayers expects a busy month.

Mrs. Ellison and Miss Newman, in the same neighborhood, are also showing some elegant blooming stock and cut flowers.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Trade during the past week has been fairly good, especially for white stuff, as there has been quite a demand for funeral work in large pieces, which use up many flowers. We have had genuine March weather, with three or four new-fangled frills. Some of the growers who some weeks ago were chasing hard for Easter orders for lilies and were afraid that the lilies were going to be left on their hands, now have the assurance that they will be, from the simple fact that they won't be in bloom in time.

Various Items.

At this time last year, our market gardeners were working their outdoor gardens and many of them had their early stock planted. This year the same land has from four to five feet of snow on it yet.

The Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting on March 15, with a fairly good attendance. The business of the carnation show was taken up. The judges' report was read and adopted and a vote of thanks tendered to the different exhibitors for their magnificent displays. Several new regulations were put on record in regard to future shows. One of these was a much needed one and prohibits the display of placards by exhibitors, nothing larger than 8x10 cards being allowed.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The occasional glimpses of the sun and consequent milder weather have brought in more flowers of improved quality. Long-stemmed Beauties are coming in more freely and it is promised that by next week there will be as fine a stock of this grand rose as one could wish to see. The price has fallen a little and some of the specials have to be cut down to make up the scarcity in the medium grades. A good many of the short-stemmed flowers are poor and naturally find their way to the street. There are some very fine Golden Gates coming in now. The tea class generally is in excellent form, though there are, of course, many poor ones. An acquisition to the rose class is Gen. Jacqueminot. Some excellent flowers of this rose are seen at E. Bernheimer's. Carnations are thought to be shortening a little; the quality is generally very fine. Indications point to a good crop next week. Valley is plentiful and of high grade. Cattleyas have disappeared. Cypripediums, Dendrobium formosum and Cœlogyne cristata are scarce. Violets are fine and very plentiful. Bulbous flowers have fallen off a little, with prospects of an increased supply next week. There is a good supply of Easter lilies at present. The prospects appear to be that the demand will equal and probably exceed the supply at Easter. There will be a good many calla lilies and some Lilium auratum to help out.

Various Items.

Edward Reid has been doing a good shipping business in cut flowers and has a lot of Easter plant orders booked for delivery next week. His stock is packed at the greenhouses and shipped direct to the purchaser, insuring prompt and safe delivery.

The Henry F. Michell Co. obtained judgment against J. Edward Addicks, gas king millionaire and would-be senator from Delaware, for a bill for seeds, bulbs and implements used on the farm at Claymont. The bill has been running for three years and amounted to $350.

The engagement is announced of Miss Caroline Burrell to J. Liddon Pennock, junior member of the firm of Pennock Brothers. Their many friends wish them all possible happiness.

W. and Harry F. Evans, Rowlandville, have been very successful with their Easter lilies, which are all sold.

William Swayne, of Kennett Square, has issued a very neat catalogue in the form of a postal card booklet.

Wm. J. Baker is receiving fine valley. His Shasta daisies are excellent.

John Burton, receiver for Robert Craig & Son, is putting forth his best efforts in the work of reconstruction.

The plants and store fixtures of H. B. Myers, trading as the Colonial Flower Shop, were sold by Freeman last Wednesday.

Robert Scott & Son have a very fine lot of Crimson Rambler roses in pots.

E. Bernheimer has been receiving some nice flowers of Mrs. Potter Palmer.

Answers to Correspondents.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Up to this writing there has been no improvement in the market. The finest Beauties were offered at 15 cents last Saturday, Brides and Maids at 6 cents and special violets as low as 25 cents a 100. These low quotations are a fair indication of the trend of the whole market. The supply has been enormous in every line and bulbous stock, valley, mignonette and the rest of the procession seem to have forgotten what values mean. But the spring boom cannot much longer be delayed.

Easter is little more than a week distant. Its coming is in the air. Never was it so welcome, and that it will be better than has been hoped for is my sincere belief. Already the retail stores are brilliant in color and suggestive of the springtime. It will be both a plant and cut flower Easter, for there will be an abundance of cut blooms and prices will be more reasonable than for many a year. I question if the finest violets will go above 50 to 75 cents a hundred. Carnations will be abundant and at figures that will attract the retailer and the public and even roses will make demands that are no longer prohibitive.

The retailers have made these holidays plant festivals, but the public also wants roses, carnations and violets and will have them for Easter if treated fairly. Unpickled stock at fair prices will not leave a flower in the wholesale boxes on Easter Sunday.

At the Retail Stores.

It will be another week before the retail store decorations for Easter begin. They will be very elaborate this year and already immense plant purchases indicate an unusual anticipation of demand. Already some of the windows are charming with azaleas and Crimson Ramblers. Alex. McConnell has some beautiful specimens of this favorite rose in his window.

David Clarke's Sons have abundant space for display in their new store, but none too much for their large stock of Easter plants. The great windows are re-decorated every morning and are never two days alike. The past year has been the best in their long career.

Small's windows are brilliant with electric lights and banks of blooming plants. Thorley had a charming display on Monday, but it remains for next week to reveal the novelties with which every Easter he surprises the public. Lady clerks are his latest novelty.

Bowe seems to be always busy, his location being especially favorable for transient trade as well as convenient for his growing list of steady patrons. His color effects in the windows betoken the artist in arrangement and he handles only the best in the market.

Mrs. Scallon's new store, in the Imperial, is now complete. Great copper doors add to the massive effect on entering and marble and mirrors complete one of the prettiest stores in the metropolis.

Mackintosh has among his Easter orders one for 1,000 cut lilies for shipment in the form of a cross to a Pittsburgh patron.

Siebrecht & Son have every facility this season for the largest Easter in their career. In addition to their own wonderful new store, they have two immense stores in the building reserved for their overflow and shipping and have already commenced to stock up for the demand of the coming week. The splendid building is a monument to the enterprise of Henry Siebrecht, whose indomitable will has carried the great undertaking to a successful consummation. Immense windows, 100 feet in length, are on the Fifth avenue and Thirty-eighth street sides of the building. The white marble furnishings within, counters, tables and wainscoting, give the whole an air of richness and solidity in keeping with the store's immensity. A balcony affords Mr. Siebrecht a private office, commanding a view of the store and complete in all its conveniences. In the large basement is every facility for potting, making up and the care of palms and storage for every requirement of the business. The firm is building at Ninety-first street and Broadway, a large conservatory, where a retail branch will also be established, while their handsome store at Broadway and Forty-eighth will be continued. An immense amount of the product of their great plant at New Rochelle is disposed of in their retail trade. This has grown rapidly since the new store was completed at Christmas. A daily automobile service between the city stores and the greenhouses at New Rochelle is contemplated. Visiting florists should not fail to see for themselves when in New York the greatest floral establishment that has existed since the hanging gardens of Babylon were in their glory.

Various Items.

Schloss Bros. are showing some beautiful novelties in Easter ribbons, scarfs and cords, that are largely used on Fifth avenue and Broadway. These young men are building up a fine business and on a basis of courtesy, personal attention and original conceptions, that bids fair to emphasize their claim as "The Ribbon House" of the city.

Alex Guttman will have 2,000 pots of violets for his Easter customers. His cut flower shipping department has become an important adjunct to his business, which he says has more than doubled since Easter, 1903.

Several big department stores will handle flowering plants, most of them likely unsatisfactory to their customers as few have proper facilities for safe delivery.

The sympathy of the trade is tendered Elwood Brant, the rose grower, of Madison, in the loss of his mother last week.

Freeport, L. I., appreciates the popular ex-president of the S. A. F., genial James Dean, who has again been elected president of the town.

The bowlers gathered in goodly numbers notwithstanding the storm on Monday evening, Secretary Ford returning to the fold after weeks of illness. Next Monday's prize contest will see the banner attendance of the year. The prizes are to be wrapped carefully so that the surprises may be genuine and no prize is to be less in value than $1. The third game of the evening will decide the prize winners. All friends of the New York Club are cordially welcomed.

The attendance of New Yorkers at the rose show in Philadelphia is likely to be quite large. President Traendly, J. B. Nugent, A. H. Langjahr and possibly others from the wholesale district intend to be present.

Traendly & Schenck are handling immense quantities of violets and doing an extensive shipping trade, especially in roses. During the many years of existence of this house it is their boast that never has a single day found them away from the opening of business at 7 a. m., except in case of sickness or absence from the city. It is a record to be proud of.

That dear old reminder of spring, General Jacq., is again in the market. Ulrich Brunner, too, maintains its popularity.

If, as is rumored, the old Thirty-fourth street market is demolished to make way for the Pennsylvania railroad's march of progress, the Coogan building will hardly be able to contain the additional growers, who will there be obliged to seek an outlet for their products.

Ford Brothers are preparing for a big Easter trade as usual. Just now their double Murillo and Keizerskroon tulips meet with ready sale at 4 cents. They anticipate an enormous violet crop for Easter and reasonable prices. Wm. Ford has recovered from a severe attack of grippe, and is ready for bowling. Ford, Lang, Haffner, Traendly, Maxwell, Siebrecht, O'Mara, Theilmann and Burns constitute a bunch of bowlers from which it ought to be easy to select six who can average 175 and that will certainly lift the cup at St. Louis. Jos. Fenrich and J. F. Hayward, of Ford Bros., are also excellent bowlers.

Charles Millang will have a great Easter display by the end of the week in the big room above his wholesale store. This new department of Mr. Millang's and his well stocked conservatories have proved a great convenience to many of the retailers this winter.

Geo. E. Bradshaw is disposing of fern balls by the hundred and will have a fine general plant display for Easter, in addition to his growing cut flower trade.

James McManus says the orchid supply will be abundant and that both the local and shipping demand has grown steadily every month and bids fair to increase still more as his facilities for supply are realized.

George Saltford's store is none too large, since he doubled its size for his growing wholesale trade. Not only violets but every variety of cut flower is here in abundance. His son is an able lieutenant and additional office help and constant personal attention to business attest the growth of his trade and popularity.

Walter Sheridan will have his usual first-class and extensive supply of the best Beauties, violets and carnations for the Easter demand, which is always as steady as a rock at this place.

Jas. A. Hammond is the "orange king," as usual, and has 1,000 superb plants of all sizes and innumerable pots of violets to select from, hundreds having been already booked for next week's delivery.

John I. Raynor's goods are of superb quality and there is no limit to supply. The Croweanum fern finds here its New York headquarters and is growing in popularity.

Alfred Langjahr's Lawsons and that superb red, No. 44, are in great demand.

L. J. Kreshover predicts a good Easter and has much business booked, while shipments out of town have been constant for some weeks for the festive occasion. He says coco matting is scarce this season owing to the foreign use of it for ladies' hats. Southern smilax is coming poor now on account of the sap running freely, spring being well advanced in the south. But he has a way of preserving it so that at all times its quality may be depended on.

Young & Nugent show beautiful stock of gardenias and Liberties and will have lilies in pots in abundance and a handsome general display as usual.

John Young will have the superb carnation output of the Cottage Gardens and 200,000 lilies, not to mention other stock, with which to do his share in adding to the general Easter joyousness of the big city.

It is thirty-two years since John J. Perkins began the wholesale cut flower business in New York, but the years sit lightly on him and he is handling superior Brides and Maids just as vigorously as ever. In the serious illness of his son he has the sympathy of all his associates in the wholesale business.

Wm. Ghormley's emporium will be filled to bursting with the best of everything the market affords, violets, lilics and Beauties especially in evidence. Potted plants will be left this year to other handlers and cut flowers receive his undivided attention.

Moore, Hentz & Nash have an established reputation for rose stock that age does not tarnish nor the years diminish. The past year has been their best. The Queen of Edgely finds excellent encouragement under their supervision. Their Beauties have a wide reputation.

The Cut Flower Co. proceeds on its "forward march" under the able management of Jos. Millang, "the lily king."

He anticipates an enormous Easter. Frank and August Millang and Bonnot Bros. hold the fort daily in the Cut Flower Exchange in the Coogan building, and are always to be found faithfully attentive to business and with well filled ice boxes of every kind of cut flowers in quality and variety to meet every requirement.

The pioneer house of J. K. Allen is still open for business at the same early hour as in all the years, and time does not seem to have dimmed the eyes nor decreased the energy and enthusiasm of the cheerful helmsman. He says that this will be "an old time Easter" and his optimism is inspirational.

N. Lecakes & Co., with their four depots, their great storage capacity, their private lily pond and the care used in the selection of their goods have established a wide and creditable reputation and built up a business that is growing fast and worthily. This has been by far the best year of their experience. Mr. Lecakes, who is on a visit to the old home near Mars Hill, will return to New York shortly, accompanied by one of Greece's fair daughters as his bride.

Sigmund Geller reports an excellent Easter business. His genial representative has just returned from a very successful western business trip. Mr. Geller has many novelties and a fine stock of goods to choose from at his well furnished establishment on West Twenty-eighth street.

A. J. Fellouris is another of the green goods men whose strict attention to business has established for him a trade that is a credit to his ability and honorable methods and a guarantee of continued and increasing prosperity.

Reed & Keller have many novelties, as usual, for Easter, most of them their own inventions, a new patented iron plant stand and paper jardiniere being especially serviceable. A new iron stand with lever attachment that locks every eighth of an inch is a late invention that is wonderfully convenient. Stemmed cape flowers are another novelty that "fill a long felt want." Over half as many folding bells for Christmas are already sold as were sold during the whole of last season. Fibrotto pot covers in red, green and gold are very popular.

Casket tops, light and serviceable, made of wicker, are another late addition to the useful novelties and a wire casket top with wire fringe attachment will appeal to all who realize the wonderful convenience of this requirement. Their factory has been moved from Staten Island to Brooklyn. Four floors in the city establishment are crowded with goods of every description. The volume of business shows constant increase.

Chas. Zeller & Son, Julius Roehrs, J. M. Keller, Fritz Dressel, Anton Schultheis, H. C. Steinhoff, R. Dreyer, Siebrecht and John Scott are the basis of plant supply, without whom Easter would be a "barren wilderness" in New York. It would be hard to particularize as to variety, quality and quantity at these great establishments, any one of which could meet the requirements of a city of ordinary size.

The Hinode Florist Co., of Woodside and Secaucus, are among the largest growers of lilies in America. They also have an abundance of Japanese novelties and are popular and progressive. Especially do they appeal to us now while their native land is making its great fight in behalf of human liberty and national existence.

May I take this opportunity of expressing my own grateful appreciation of the confidence and patronage given the REVIEW's representative in the east during the past year and my sincere wishes to every member of the trade for a happy and prosperous Easter.

BEDDING ROSES.

How early shall we advise our customers to plant out bedding roses in Illinois?

C. B.

If these roses are in a dormant state, any time after the frost is out of the ground and the ground dry enough to work, will do. When planted early the roots begin to work before the eyes break, thus giving them a chance to withstand any dry spell during early summer. If they are started in pots the planting should be deferred till the last week of May.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Cut flower conditions continue much the same, Lenten dullness being general. Flowers of all kinds are very abundant. Extra fancy carnations in some cases fetch $4 to $5 per 100, but ordinary grades sell at very low rates. White varieties are selling best. The Queen seems to be the most popular "bread-and-butter" variety, although Boston Market and Wolcott are favorites. Violets are very abundant; 35 cents per 100 seems to be top notch for the best singles. Greenhouse-grown stock is coming of poorer color and will soon be over. Frame-grown flowers are of splendid, dark blue color.

Various Notes.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, have been bringing in some nice Crimson Rambler plants for the past three weeks, being the first in the market with this popular rose.

Wm. E. Bowditch, of Dorchester, has sustained a serious loss to his stock at his Grove Hall greenhouses, amounting to several thousands of dollars, as 1,000 pots of Easter lilies were among the stock destroyed. An escape of illuminating gas is believed to be the cause and action will probably be taken against the Dorchester Gas Light Co.

Lucius H. Foster, the disseminator of the well-known sport of the Boston fern, is seriously sick at his Dorchester home.

Samuel Neil, of Washington street, Dorchester, has a fine house of Boston

Market carnation, which he claims as the best of its color for the retail florist.

S. Hoffman, 925 Boylston street, has opened up at Norton Bros.' old stand on Massachusetts avenue, and will operate both stores.

It now looks as though quite a number of growers would not be in time for Easter with their lilies. Sweltering heat, syringing several times daily with warm water, dosing with nitrate of soda and other processes are being used to hurry them.

E. N. Pierce & Sons will have the largest lot of lilies for this market; their quality is excellent. The same firm is specially noted for its fine lily of the valley, grown in large quantities.

W. W. Edgar, as usual, has a grand lot of acacias, azaleas, metrosideros, Rambler roses, lilies and other pot stuff.

Crimson Ramblers will have rivals this season in the new pinks, Dorothy Perkins and Farquhar, which several growers are handling. It takes about two weeks longer than Crimson Rambler to flower them.

Wax Bros., on Tremont street, always have their large windows very prettily arranged with choice stock. This firm is doing an increasing business.

M. H. Walsh, of Woods Hole, has an extensive exhibit of his Rambler roses at the spring show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society this week. Many of the plants are in tubs and are finely flowered.

The Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club will have a carnation night at its next meeting on April 19, Lexington day. Peter Fisher will open the discussion. At the May meeting "Alpine Plants" will be treated by Carl Blomberg. The increasing attendance at the club's meetings will necessitate larger quarters very soon. The next field day of the club will be at Wellesley, about the middle of June.

Ice and snow are gradually disappearing, but it will not be possible to commence outdoor operations before April 1. Snowdrops, winter aconites and crocuses in warm locations give the first suggestion of spring. The ground has been frost-bound since November 18.

At the Harvard Botanic Gardens Robert Cameron always has a number of interesting plants in bloom. At present one house contains a fine collection of primulas, cyclamens and cinerarias. Acacias in variety, ericas and other hardwood subjects are making a good display. In the way of orchids, numerous dendrobiums, chiefly forms of D. nobile, are to be seen in the stove house, where a finely grown lot of specimen foliaged plants and nepenthes are to be found. In the cactus house the large specimens planted out are making splendid growth. Hundreds of seedling cacti, some of them of flowering size, fill a long shelf in a cool house.

PROVERBS.

Familiarity with an ad breeds an order.

Better a small ad than none at all.

'Tis better to advertise than to be advertised—by the sheriff.

Every advertiser is the architect of his own fortunes.

Faint ads ne'er won fair lady.

Given an inch, a successful advertiser will soon take an ell.

It's the poor ad that pleases your competitor.

Love and a good ad cannot be hid.

Some are weather-wise; others advertise.

A company is known by the men it keeps.

Two ads are better than one.

You cannot carry a crooked ad in a straight paper.

Advertising is the staff of trade.

Ad news travels swift.—Agricultural Advertising.

FOLLOW THE INQUIRIES.

We consider following up inquiries the most important part of advertising. Advertising in newspapers, etc., is the visible part of the campaign. Follow up is the invisible part. Most of the bulk of an ocean liner is below the water line—all the boilers, engines and vitals. The vital part of an advertising campaign is often below the water line, too, otherwise the campaign is top heavy. The value of visible advertising everybody now admits, the truth about it has been preached so persistently, but not every business man knows the importance of this invisible advertising. I knew of a manufacturer who began advertising, but quit because it brought him nothing but letters containing inquiries! He did not know they were the raw material of financial results. Advertising nowadays can hardly make its greatest success without careful attention to the following-up of letters of inquiry.—Printers' Ink.

DISEASES OF CARNATIONS.

From some investigations made at the Connecticut Experiment Station by W. C. Sturgis, on diseases of the carnation, it is concluded that the disease commonly known as die-back, and stem-rot, is due to a fungus, which gains access, in some way not fully determined, to the tissues at or just below the surface of the soil, and accumulates in the water-ducts of the stem, thus preventing the free transfer of water upwards. There is a strong probability that the disease may be propagated by means of the vegetative threads of the fungus existing in cuttings taken from diseased plants. Cuttings should, therefore, be made only from sound plants.

The spores of the fungus are apparently able to retain their vitality for several months and to live over winter in the earth. The fact that the disease can be transferred to sound cuttings by planting the same in soil containing vegetable matter and impregnated with the spores of the fungus indicates that the spores can thrive in such soil and thence gain access to the tissues of the plant. Consequently, when the disease has been present in the greenhouse the old soil should be completely removed, the house thoroughly fumigated with sulphur and the benches refilled with fresh soil. Abundant moisture and an excess of vegetable matter in the soil afford conditions favorable to the development of the fusarium. These should, therefore, be avoided, as far as possible.

Where practicable, sterilizing the soil by means of steam or hot air would be effective in preventing the attacks of the fungus. In this case diseased cuttings would be the only possible cause of contamination.

Inasmuch as the production of the fusarium spores, and hence the rapid dissemination of the disease, takes place only at a considerable interval after the first symptoms of the disease appear, the immediate removal and destruction of plants showing these symptoms is to be strongly recommended.

We cannot afford to do without the REVIEW.—G. M. THOST, De Soto, Mo.

Vegetable Forcing.

THE lettuce growers north of Chicago complain that this has not been their most profitable season to date. Some have had light crops and poor quality, prices running from 15 to 35 cents per case of eighteen plants; the average price has been about 25 cents. On this ten per cent commission must be paid and the case costs 4½ cents.

THE MARKETS.

GATHERING MUSHROOMS.

In gathering mushrooms it is a mistake to cut them over at the soil and leave the bottoms of the stems. All the stems should be pulled out if a second crop is to be looked for, but care should be exercised in doing it; if pulled up roughly a good deal of the soil will adhere, but if twisted around gently they will come out clean and without injury to the mycelium, leaving only a small cavity in the bed. It is a good plan to go over the bed after each gathering and fill up the cavities with fresh soil, pressing this down firmly and leaving the surface of the bed smooth.

After the first crop has been gathered a good second crop can be had by top dressing the bed with about an inch of fresh material composed of equal portions of soil and well rotted cow manure. This should be spread evenly over the bed and beaten down smoothly, and before again covering up, the bed should have a good watering with tepid water, to which may be added a little sulphate of ammonia, a teaspoonful to a ten-quart can of water being about the quantity we use. The bed should again be covered up as after the first spawning and left until the pin heads begin to appear.

If the atmosphere of the house is kept moderately charged with moisture little evaporation will take place, but as atmospheric moisture can be overdone, good judgment must be exercised in the matter. The covering should be removed occasionally and the bed examined, and if dry should be again watered, using tepid water as before. Thus treated, beds will often continue to bear good mushrooms for a considerable time.

LETTUCE.

Will you please give me directions for growing lettuce in greenhouses at this season of the year? Is there any advantage in transplanting it twice when one has plenty of space? G. J. B.

If the house in which G. J. B. intends growing lettuce is provided with solid benches the growing of the crop will be easy compared with handling them in raised benches. In the former they have the natural moisture of the soil and are easier provided with an equable moisture at the roots, which, if it can be given, is the best preventive of leaf-burn. The heat of the sun at this season will raise the temperature of the house considerably above that most suitable to the growth of lettuce, but if the roots can be kept cool they are better able to withstand the higher temperature. In solid benches the roots can be kept cool, but in the raised benches this is impossible, as the circulation of air under and around the bench must inevitably raise the temperature of the bench almost equal to that of the house. In either case slight shading will be beneficial, but this must not be overdone or the plants will become drawn, the growth soft and the leaves thin in texture.

We sow the seed rather thinly in flats in a rather light soil and when the plants are large enough to handle prick over into flats again, setting them about two inches apart each way. Before the plants begin to crowd one another here they are quite large enough to plant in the bench. There is nothing gained by having the plants too large when planting, as the larger they are the more check they are apt to receive. No matter how carefully they are handled the roots must inevitably receive some damage and the plants will flag more or less as a result, the roots not being able to supply enough moisture to support the foliage until they have taken a fresh hold.

About eight inches apart is the right distance for head lettuce in the benches. The Grand Rapids variety might be set a little wider. Space will not permit my going into details regarding soil; suffice it to say that good average soil only moderately enriched with well rotted manure is all that is necessary.

W. S. CROYDON.

NEW VARIETIES.

Nothing new of outstanding merit has come under our notice in forcing vegetables during the past year. In fact, there seems to be very little attempt to introduce new varieties of any of the subjects used for forcing, or to raise such with a direct view to their improvement as forcing subjects. Almost any of the existing varieties might be improved on, and it would undoubtedly be of advantage of vegetable forcers in general if the production of suitable new varieties were paid a little more attention. A great deal might be accomplished by working along certain lines. Take lettuce for instance, which is subject to the attacks of so many fungous diseases. I think it might be quite under the range of possibility to produce a disease resisting variety if worked up from that standpoint. We have Grand Rapids, which with us has never shown signs of disease, but then it is not a head lettuce, and we find that nine times out of ten a head lettuce is preferred and we have not found a head lettuce so far that is free from the attacks of fungous diseases.

It seems quite feasible that a cross between Grand Rapids and some good head variety might produce a head variety that would retain the disease resisting qualities of Grand Rapids. A good deal can be done and has been done by selection. Several more or less distinct varieties have originated from the old Boston Market variety and are considerable improvements over the original. One of two plants will often stand out in a bench with distinct advantages over their comrades in earliness, firmness of head, freedom from disease or other qualities, and although the grower may take notice of them at the time, it is too often only a passing notice, and a good thing may be lost through not being taken care of. The producer of a disease resisting variety of lettuce will be a benefactor to his kindred, but although he would share in the general advantage of having such a variety, I don't know that he would make a fortune out of the raising of it. We have had the thirty-thousand-dollar carnation, but I hardly expect to see the thirty-thousand-dollar lettuce.

For new forcing varieties of tomatoes we have had to depend largely on European productions. Some of them have taken kindly enough to our climatic conditions, while others have been a disappointment. There is no reason why good forcing varieties cannot be raised here as well as in Europe if growers would take the trouble to do it. Freedom of setting, freedom from disease, and earliness, should be some of the points to try to attain.

In cauliflower we have had several so-called new varieties in recent years, but as far as I can see they are all selections of Dwarf Erfurt and, although possessing more or less distinctiveness when first introduced, they all seem, in a year or two, to get more or less mixed up. If a true strain of the old Dwarf Erfurt variety can be procured I am doubtful if any of the newer ones will beat it much; it comes as near being the ideal forcing variety as any we have tried.

Most seed catalogues have quite a list of radishes, but though we have tried a few we have found nothing better than Non Plus Ultra, the variety I recommended in a former article. Earliness and dwarfness of top are its principal advantages, and it is quite equal to any of the others in table qualities.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 2nd annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

THE globe varieties of onion seed are becoming quite scarce. The tendency is toward the planting of the globes in preference to the flat or thick flat sorts.

CHARLES SHARPE & Co., Sleaford, England, offer a new brussels sprout, Cambridgeshire Champion, said to be the best market variety they have ever known.

IN many growing sections stock seed for muskmelon, watermelon, squash, pumpkin and cucumber is scarce, and the chance of securing safe stock for planting purposes is seriously slim.

MOST of the wholesale pea growers are well along with the contracting with farmers. Things move along smoothly as a rule. The usual difficulty in placing the short-strawed wrinkled sorts is experienced.

SEVERAL cars of a good stock of Ohio seed potatoes arrived at Chicago the past week but the price is just as stiff as ever; $1.20 to $1.35 per bushel, bags weighed in, is the prevailing price for large lots at the car.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Under date of March 18, Joseph Schindler & Co. write: We had a fearful rain and hail storm yesterday evening, the worst in years. The market gardeners suffered severely; ruined most all the young spring crop, tomatoes, lettuce, beans, spinach, etc.

IN the Ohio and Indiana marsh lands where the onion does well, seed will be sown in larger quantities than ever this spring. It has been demonstrated, though, that marsh land is not suitable for producing onion sets.

THE Nursery and Seed Trade Association of Great Britain, with offices at 33 Wood street, Cheapside, London, has a membership of 139 of the principal nurserymen and seed merchants of the United Kingdom and forty-one abroad. The association being a mutual one is confined to members of the trades it represents and those allied therewith, and they give to each other gratis, through the secretary, private information respecting the stability and punctuality in payment of persons seeking credit.

IN THE WILL of the late Edgar J. Bowen, the San Francisco seedsman, which was filed for probate March 10, his employees are generously remembered. To each one in his employ at the time of his death there is to be paid out of the estate a percentage of such employee's yearly salary, varying from fifty per cent, which is to be paid to each employee who has been in decedent's service for ten years or more, to five per cent, to be paid to each one who has worked for one year, with intermediate percentages for those who have been employed for other periods.

THE moisture which prevails in onion sets at the break of cold weather has been much more annoying this year than usual. The long winter, with its unbroken severity, gave little chance to air up the stock until time for shipment made it necessary to hustle sets out. Shipment in damp condition, although doing the set no hurt if it is spread out promptly at destination, spoils its appearance for the time being, and causes the purchaser uneasiness. As a rule, there are moderate periods during winter which permits the airing and stirring of sets in the ordinary warehouse, but the past winter was the exception.

IF it is true, as reported, that a foreign seed house went into the market and purchased goods at an advanced price in order to fill "subject to crop" orders in full, the circumstance is extraordinary from the standpoint of the American grower.

For the past two or three years the seeds of Cocos Weddeliana have been scarce, but there seems likely to be a plentiful supply this season. The first consignments sold freely at 18s. per 1,000, but last week some were sold at about 15s. per 1,000. Good samples of Kentia Forsteriana have been selling at about 6s. per 1,000. K. Belmoreana has been making rather higher prices. We do not often see seeds of Geonoma gracilis at the auction rooms, but some were sold last week. They made 20s. per 1,000. Messrs. W. Bull & Sons have just received a large consignment of seeds of Phoenix rupicola, the samples being very good.—A. Hemsley in the Gardeners' Chronicle.

The recent heavy rains did great damage to the seed growing and experimental grounds of the Cox Seed Co., at Terminus, Cal. Many acres of valuable stock were under several feet of water and the loss will run into thousands of dollars.

A SWEET CORN CONTRACT CASE.

At Seward, Neb., March 14, the jury in the case of the Sioux City Seed & Nursery Company against A. H. Bemis brought in a verdict in favor of the defendant. The case was tried in the county court and lasted three days. The nature of the case aroused considerable interest, particularly among seedsmen and growers. The litigation arose over a seed contract. The seed house replevined 300 bushels of sweet corn, on January 15 of this year, raised by Mr. Bemis on his farm near Seward, and shipped the same to Sioux City, where the corn was sold to the seed company's customers. Mr. Bemis by way of answer denied the contract under which the corn was replevined and claimed damages for conversion. The evidence brought out the fact that an oral contract was made in January, 1903, whereby Mr. Bemis was to raise sixty acres of sweet corn and receive from the seed company 75 cents a bushel; that Mr. Bemis planted sixty acres of sweet corn, but subsequently the company had tendered Mr. Bemis $1 a bushel for the corn raised. Mr. Bemis contended that both parties mutually had broken the oral contract and that he was entitled to the market price of his corn. With that understanding he had sold fifty bushels of the corn in the fall to the Griswold Seed Company at Lincoln at $3 a bushel. Mr. Emerson, of Fremont, and Mr. Robinson, of Waterloo, were used as expert witnesses on the value of sweet corn. Their testimony showed that 60 per cent of the sweet corn raised in the United States for seed purposes was raised in Nebraska. The jury found that the defendant was entitled to $1.75 a bushel for his corn and the costs should be taxed to the plaintiff.

THE HARRISII CROP.

So far as I can ascertain, the crop of Lilium Harrisii now growing in Bermuda will be as large as that of the preceding year, when the value of the bulbs shipped was reported as $32,151. The conditions throughout the Islands seem favorable. The continuous cold weather has retarded the blooming of the plants, and there will probably be a scarcity of blooms at Easter. Visitors from the north like to send home these blooms at that time and some blooms are shipped for commercial purposes, but it is not a legitimate business, the trade being in the bulbs.

There promises to be a shortage in the 7-9 and 9-11 sizes owing to a much smaller quantity of the large bulbs being planted this season.

I add a table giving the values of the shipments of bulbs, and in some instances, the blooms, for the years beginning with 1895. I do not explain why it is that the amount in money has so fallen off. I may fairly suppose that lower prices have ruled from year to year, which would partly explain the difference, also that the planter has had to fight a disease, a species of fungus that caused a mite that fairly consumed and rotted the growing bulb. There are many enemies to fight in this as there are in all gardening and nursery work.

1895.....	$92,620
1896.....	64,436
1897.....	55,877
1898.....	37,552
1899.....	58,353
1900.....	50,382
1901.....	30,675
1902.....	50,336
1903.....	32,151

These statistics read strangely, alternating from one year to another in almost a proportionable manner. This I do not account for, I give the results and cannot explain them even to my own satisfaction. This little country offers to the gardener and florist very interesting questions, well worth a visit for study and research.

SWEET PEAS.

In central California we have had an unusually wet winter. Only once within the memory of the writer, who has resided in these parts over thirty-five years, have we had so much continued rainy weather. As a consequence many of the early planted fields of sweet peas have all but collapsed. A grower in my neighborhood who has about five acres planted in sweet peas has concluded that he will have to replant as soon as it is possible to cultivate the ground. His plants have all turned yellow and instead of standing straight they are sprawled all over the ground. For early peas the seed should be planted in the latter part of October, and if the season is favorable the plants will have attained the height of one foot by February 1. They do not mind considerable frosty weather, as it does not retard their growth after the weather becomes warmer. By the first of April the vines will have attained flowering size and a good quantity of blooms can be harvested for a couple of months. By planting seed about the first of February and keeping the soil sufficiently moist either by watering or, if the ground has in itself moisture enough, by giving frequent cultivation, quantities of flowers can be had for summer and fall cutting.

This year has been a disastrous season to a great deal of early sowed seed. In many places it has rotted in the ground and it has been impossible, up to this time, to replant owing to the almost incessant rains. I have noticed that the fall planted sweet peas do not remain in flower as long as those planted later and there will be a short crop with the majority of growers until later in the year.

The best white variety with us is Emily Henderson, although some few of the growers plant Mrs. Sankey. Countess of Radnor is our best lavender and Firefly the most satisfactory scarlet. Mrs. Gladstone is the best selling pink, and next in line is Blanche Ferry. Butterfly, Cardinal and Salopian are also good sorts to plant.

The Chinese gardeners in the vicinity of San Francisco have corralled most of the sweet pea business within the past few years and there are only a few white growers who pretend to make a specialty of this flower. Although considered a cheap flower, if well grown and brought early into market, and the problem of picking cheaply is solved, it is a remunerative article to grow, as well as a very easy one.

California also supplies a great portion of the pea seed that is sold throughout the United States and Europe and in the neighborhood of San Jose there are hundreds of acres devoted to its culture for seed exclusively. Sweet peas, like many other annuals, quickly exhaust the ground and have to be shifted constantly to insure good results. Great care has to be taken in keeping the varieties far enough apart so that the colors will not mix. The sweet pea seed crop was short last year and was eagerly bought up by eastern firms, and by the present indications we will not have an overproduction this season either. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

This is the sixth week of steady rain, and to say that all the florists are tired of it is expressing their feelings very mildly. Its effect on business is noticeable, although we are in the midst of Lent, and everybody is looking forward to Easter. Indoor stock is not very plentiful nor is there any great variety to choose from, but there is more than enough to supply all demands. Daffodils have brought very poor prices for the past month, and violets, although somewhat scarce the past week, have hardly paid to pick. The weather has been especially unfavorable for roses and they are very pale and wobbly.

If this rain lasts much longer it will make good Easter stock scarce, as we must have a fair amount of sunshine to put the proper bloom on almost all kinds of flowers.

Various Notes.

A. Ringier and C. W. Scott, of Chicago; James Kidd, the eastern representative for the Cox Seed Co., and Frank Pelicano made a theater party at the Orpheum last Friday night.

The board of supervisors has finally concluded to allow the street vendors the

J. P. Murphy, the head gardener at the nursery connected with Sutro Heights, is very busy preparing the grounds for spring planting. Considerable damage was done there by the recent storm.

The Realty Syndicate has commenced to plant Cupressus macrocarpa in quantity on the hills back of Oakland, where they own many thousands of acres. This company purchased all the available stock of this tree in California last season and intends to keep planting until the bare portions of their lands are entirely covered.

The Society Hortensia had a meeting in Oakland last Saturday which was well attended. H. Gresens is president of the society.

The city of Oakland last week awarded the contract for planting California fan palms on the city streets to E. Gill.

David Neely has asked for a new trial of the suit in which Mary Lanigan was awarded $8,000 for breach of promise several months ago.

The medical fraternity is much interested in the case of George Karman, the wholesale florist, of Elmhurst. Mr. Karman has been in delicate health for several months, and this week his stomach was entirely removed because of a cancerous growth. The surgeons give as their opinion that Mr. Karman's splendid physique will carry him through.

G.

FLATBUSH, N. Y.—Jerome A. Suydam reports so good a demand for his new carnation, Amaze, that he has sold all his cuttings.

TROY, O.—C. W. Skinner's little son was taken ill while the father was at the carnation convention but is now on the road to recovery. His illness has delayed Mr. Skinner somewhat in starting on an eastern trip. He expects to visit a number of the principal growing localities during April. His patent irrigating device is taking well with all classes of growers who have stock in the field.

A WINNING COMBINATION.

Kindly discontinue our Carlson's aster seed advertisement. Although we have had this in your paper only one week, our stock is exhausted owing to the exceedingly heavy orders received since our advertisement appeared. We do not know whether this is due to the fact that your paper goes in the hands of so many live florists or because the florists in general recognize the superior quality of this seed. E. H. HUNT.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL

WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

A Complete Reference Book for

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

HEADQUARTERS FOR EASTER PLANTS

Blooming Easter week and from now on if desired. I am noted for the past years and have a reputation and the trade all over the land to grow a large assortment and plenty of choice blooming plants of every description. I have an immense stock—seven large houses and five hotbeds are crammed to their full extent, and are in better shape and condition than before.

Azalea Indica—Three houses filled with this only choice American variety. I know exactly what my customers and the public in general want. I and my son Howard went to Europe last summer on account of the scarcity of Mme. Van der Cruyssen, and must say with great pleasure that we were successful in obtaining 2,000 of this beautiful variety. I offer you them now as the gem of my stock, only none of it has been picked out by fall sales (and have the residue left). I make it as a rule not to offer any in the fall outside of Xmas. Please note my prices of the 2,000 Mme. Van der Cruyssen: 6, 7 and 8-in. pots, all sizes, as round as an apple, covered with buds, 60c, 75c, $1.00; specimens $1.25 to $1.50 each. Other varieties of plants. We also have a large stock of Bernard Andre, Alba, Niobe (double white), Empress of India, Prof. Wolters, Vervaeneana, Dr. Moore, Soode Manhout, Paul Weber, Sigismund Rucker, Illustre and about 12 more leading varieties, 6, 7 and 8-in. pots, 50c, 60c, 75c, 90c $1.00; specimens $1.25 to $1.50 each. If pots are not wanted we take the fresh soil off, because Azaleas never make new roots during winter. This makes packing light and safe, which reduces the express charges considerably.

Lilium Harrisii and Japan Multiflorum—I have about 2,500 to offer, raised from H. F. Michell's special brand of bulbs: 6-inch pots, from 5 to 8 buds to a plant, 10c per bud; under 5 buds, 12c.

Cineraria Hybrida—I have a house full of 2,000 6-in. pots, all shades, from H. F. Michell's best strain. $3.00 $4.00 and $5.00 per doz.

Daisies—White (Marguerites), 6-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.

Begonia—Pres. Carnot, 6-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; mixed varieties, 4-in. pots, $1.80 per doz.; Vernon in bloom, 4-in. pots, $1.50 per doz.

Cyclamen—4 in. pots in bloom, $2.00 per doz.

Primula—Obconica, 4-in. pots, $1.80 per doz.

Spiraea—Compacta, Superba, Floribunda, 6-in. pots $3.00 to $4.00 per doz.; Gladstone (new), 6-in. pots, $5.00 per doz.

Hyacinths—Only the choicest, my own importation, all shades, $10.00 per 100.

Hydrangea—Otaka, 6 to 7-in. pots, from $4.00, $5.00, $6.00, $9.00 to $12.00 per doz.

Tulips—Tourensol, double red or yellow, best selling Tulips, 3 in a 4-in. pot, $1.50 per doz.

Daffodils—Von Zion, best double-nosed, 3 in a 5 1/2-in. pot, $2.50 per doz.

Araucaria—Excelsa, 5 1/2 in. pots, 3 tiers, 50c; 4 to 5 in. pots, slightly damaged, 25c and 30c to 40c; 6-in. pots 5 to 6 tiers, 22, 23 to 26 ins. high, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 each; extra large specimens, 8-in. pots, 23 to 35 ins. high, 27 to 35 ins. wide, perfect jewels, $3.00 to $5.50 each, worth easily $5.00 each.

Ficus Elastica—(Rubber plants), 6-in. pots, from 20 to 28 ins. high, $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 and $6.00 per doz.

Dracaena—Bruanti, 22 to 25 ins. high, good for decoration, 35c to 50c each.

Moon Vines—Smith's Hybrid, best in the world, $5.00 per 100, 2 1/2-in. pots. To save express charges please state if pots are wanted.

All goods are shipped at purchaser's risk. Cash with all orders. Buyers coming to Philadelphia are respectfully invited to visit my place and inspect my stock before buying elsewhere. Take 13th or Germantown avenue car to Ontario street.

OCEANIC, N. J.

The regular meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society took place March 18. Geo. H. Hale showed some fine Princess of Wales violets, very nice hybrid amaryllises, Amaryllis Johnsoni, Gerbera Jamesoni and Von Sion narcissi, scoring 415 points.

The discussion of the evening was "What Constitutes a Table Plant?" which was very well ventilated by most of the members present and they came to the conclusion that a table plant should not be more than twenty inches high.

A visitor of the evening was W. M. Campbell, of New York, who showed a truss of roses, Madame Norbert Levavasseur, a cross between Crimson Rambler and a polyantha, which was indeed beautiful. The plant grows from eighteen to twenty inches high and can be well used for the border of a rose bed. The judges of the evening were R. Williams, John Yeomans and Nicholas Butterbach. B.

THE price of cyclamen in 2 1/4-inch pots was wrongly stated in C. Winterrich's advertisement last week. It should be $36.00 per 1,000.

CLEARBROOK, WASH.—George Gibbs last fall planted seed of 100,000 each hyacinths, narcissi and tulips. He has a bed of seedling crocuses that show new colors. The Washington-grown bulbs are two weeks ahead of the imported bulbs planted the same day. Candidum lilies are large, fine bulbs. Mr. Gibbs will have some sample tulip bulbs to distribute to the trade for trial this fall.

CITY OF MEXICO, MEX.—J. A. McDowell is the Mexican horticultural commissioner to the St. Louis World's Fair. He is making great efforts to have his exhibit the finest Mexico has ever sent to an exposition. Heretofore the exhibits have been principally cacti and orchids but it will include tuberous begonias, crotons, variegated foliage plants, dracaenas, palms, cycads, caladiums, ferns and other tropical plants.
